U. S. Agency Proposes 800-Bed Expansion Of D. C. Area Hospitals

Ambitious Program Would Include Four New Institutions, Additions for Six

A huge hospital improvement program, tied in with national defense and the most ambitious ever conceived in the District, was announced yesterday.

Proposed by the Health Security Administration, which represents the Capital's voluntary hospitals, it provides for:

Construction of a new Georgetown University Hospital which would be 40 beds larger than the present one.

Construction of a new seven-story Garfield Hospital, with a net increase of 145 beds over the present capacity.

Enlargement of Children's, Emergency, Casualty, Episcopal, Columbia and Alexandria Hospitals.

Erection of a new hospital in fast-expanding Arlington County.

To Be Bombproofed

Ross Garrett, HSA administrator, and Dr. Herbert P. Ramsey, board member, explained that all new construction would be bombproofed. The present Georgetown and Providence Hospital buildings would not be razed but maintained for hospital personnel or even general housing uses. In case of an emergency—a bombing, for example—the building could be evacuated on short notice and reutrned temporarily to their original hospital functions.

Execution of the physical expansion program, which is part of a "master plan" being drafted by the HSA at the request of hospital heads, would furnish a net addition of 800 beds in the District and vicinity.

75 More Beds Projected

It is proposed to erect the new Georgetown Hospital on university-owned grounds adjoining the medical school on Reservoir Road.

"The present possession of a good site makes possible the early commencement of building operations at Georgetown," said Garrett.

Emergency Hospital would grow by a 75-bed addition. A new wing at Columbia would increase the capacity by 75. Casualty would go up by 20 beds, and Children's by 80.

Architectural plans for several of the improvements already are well along. The other hospitals are studying the recommendations affecting themselves.

President Quoted

Announement of the program was prefaced by a quotation from the President's speech of Tuesday night:

"Your Government has the right to expect of all citizens that they take loyal part in the common work of our common defense . . . It (civilian defense) will depend on the organized effort of men and women everywhere. All will have responsibilities to fulfill.

". . . It means using every available resource. It means enlarging

Schmeling Reported Killed Fleeing His Captors in Crete

Green-Hued 'Chutists Slaughtered as They Dropped, British Say

By Richard D. McMillan
United Press Staff Writer

Alexandria, May 28.—A group of officers from the staff of Malemi airdrome told tonight how hordes of German parachutists, painted green even to their faces and equipment, descended on the base near Canea during the aerial invasion of Crete.

After reaching the safety of Egypt, the officers gave the first detailed account of the fighting in Crete. They told how laughing Maoris lunged in with bayonets to slaughter the parachutists; how German prisoners wept and went hysterical.

A curly-haired 21-year-old officer from Bournemouth said:

"The Germans lay dead in masses, in curious, twisted positions, at the Malemi airdrome, as we poured fire at them with everything we had.

"Most of the Nazis were young. One, who said he was only 15, collapsed weeping when he surrendered. Another also broke down, admitted he was scared to death, and gave us valuable information. 'The German dead on the air field were too numerous to bury.'

The young officer said all parachutists who landed in the neigh-

Alexandria, May 28.—Max Schmeling, former world's heavyweight boxing champion, has been killed in Crete while trying to escape from British soldiers escorting him to a prison camp, reliable British sources reported tonight.

The Berlin radio said Monday night that Schmeling was among the first German parachute troops to alight in Crete. A propaganda ministry broadcaster described the takeoff of the first parachute troop-carrying plane and said Schmeling was the first soldier to go aboard.

The report of Schmeling's death came from reliable New Zealand sources.

Early in the war Berlin announced the pugilist had been called to the colors and later it was made known that he was under training as a parachute fighter.

Field ambulance men said Schmeling was wounded slightly in the first days of the ten-day-old battle of Crete. He was taken to a dressing station, a prisoner, and showed papers identifying himself as the former boxing champion.

Military officers, including a colonel, investigated personally and satisfied themselves beyond doubt of Schmeling's identity.

He was reported truculent and

'Never More Gallantly'

By the Associated Press

London, May 28.—The British and Greek allies in Crete—acknowledging "appalling exhaustion" under air attacks of growing severity—were forced back behind Canea under the shock of fresh reinforcements of airborne German troops today, the ninth day of the battle for that island.

This third successive reverse about the Cretan capital in as many days was thus announced by the British Middle Eastern command:

"Although continuing to fight with the greatest determination, our troops were obliged to make a further withdrawal to a more favorable position in the rear. Severe fighting continues."

Many German Planes Destroyed

The British and Greeks—and an authoritative source declared that never had fighting men stood more gallantly under unceasing bombing hour upon hour and day upon day—were admitted here to be in "precarious position" not only about Canea but in the vicinity of Suda Bay, the island's main British base.

The loss of Canea itself was not so grave, it was added, but a crossing by the Nazis of the narrow peninsula nearby would put them in position to dominate the bay itself by shellfire.

Despite the fact that the British air force was able to give the ground forces little or no pursuit plane protection—as had been the case almost since the beginning of the battle—the R. A. F. reported that the Germans had been heavily and successfully attacked by bombers based in Egypt.

Authority for Board

Plea for Defense

By John G. Norris
Post Staff Writer

The Senate Defense Investigation Committee will call on San Francisco shipyard strikers this morning to comply with President Roosevelt's demand for settlement of defense labor troubles without production stoppages by returning to work and arbitrating the dispute.

Should this plea to the striking unions fail, the committee will go over the heads of the union officials and make direct individual appeals to each of the 1,700 strikers to go back to work, Chairman Truman said last night.

Meanwhile, the American Federation of Labor called upon all its affiliated unions to abide by the President's policy and threatened disciplinary action against any union under its direct supervision which called a strike before the Labor Department conciliation service and the Defense Mediation Board have had "full opportunity" to settle the dispute.

Meant What He Said

President Roosevelt, at the same time, made it plain that he meant what he said about stopping defense strikes or work stoppages. He said he had nothing further in mind to ban such defense obstacles beyond the existing Government machinery, but served notice that if appeals failed, other methods must be tried.

The President told his press conference that this statement was not a threat. Defense production, however, must go forward unimpeded, he insisted.

The A. F. of L. promise to comply with the President's no-strike policy was made in a statement issued by its executive council, which "pledged our good faith as Americans" that they would follow it 100 per cent.

Senator Truman disclosed his plan after business agents of the striking unions said they would communicate the President's attitude to their membership, but would not recommend arbitration of the dispute.

Strike Over "Trivialities"

He said the committee's investigation had shown that the strike was over "trivialities" and that if its back-to-work appeals failed, the group could only recommend that the Government "take the essential defense work to other plants."

Estimates Reversed

President Told Steel Capacity Is Insufficient to Meet Needs

By Alfred Friendly
Post Staff Writer

Mounting deficits in the Nation's steel making capacity, three months ago considered more than adequate for all military, civilian and British demands, were forecast in the second report on the steel industry presented yesterday to President Roosevelt by Gano Dunn, Office of Production Management engineer.

The deficits, which Dunn estimated at 1,400,000 tons this year, and 6,400,000 tons in 1942, were ascribed by him to further increases in the defense program and requirements of the Lease-Lend Act, passed 12 days after the presentation of his first report.

The deficits contrast with surpluses, calculated by Dunn in his report of February 28 at 10,100,000 tons for 1941 and 2,100,000 tons for 1942.

The President, who commented on the report at his press conference, hinted broadly that the gap between supply and demand will probably be met by the imposition of priorities on steel.

Dunn estimated capacity as of December 31, 1941, at 91,338,669 tons, as against an estimated total demand of 97,500,000 tons for 1942. To arrive at this demand figure, however, Dunn rejected the estimates of the OPM Bureau of Research and Statistics of a demand for steel of 120,400,000 tons, which would have indicated a deficit in 1942 of almost 23,000,000 tons.

He discounted the Bureau figures, Dunn said, because they were based on unrestricted civilian use, contained certain duplications and, in addition, could not possibly be achieved because there would not be sufficient labor in the country necessary to produce that amount of steel. Actually, he argued, civilian demand has already been restricted, citing the

Roosevelt Preaches Fear, Wheeler Says

Calls Upon President To Reassert Promises Of No Foreign War

By the Associated Press

Indianapolis, May 28.—Accusing President Roosevelt of "preaching fear," Senator Wheeler (Democrat), of Montana, called upon the Chief Executive tonight "to reassert his repeated promises not to send American boys to fight and die on foreign soil in a foreign war."

Wheeler, contending the Americas could not be invaded and that "slave labor" never could meet competition of free labor, asked the President "to reassert his desire to abide by the law of the land and his unwillingness to discard the Neutrality Act by executive order."

The Montana Senator, leader of the isolationist bloc, told an America First Committee rally in Gable Tabernacle that Mr. Roosevelt's "fireside chat" last night "echoed the sentiments of our warmakers . . . of all those who would sacrifice lives that are not theirs to give."

"But I was informed over long-distance telephone that the President at his press conference today said he was not going to ask for repeal of the Neutrality Act," Senator Wheeler said.

All Facts Not Given, He Says

"And when he was asked how he was going to enforce freedom of the seas he stated, 'one way is to keep American ships out of places where they will be sunk.'

"Which statement do you stand on, Mr. President, your warlike speech or your later statements to the press?" he asked.

He asserted the President had said this country should be guided by facts but had not given all the facts.

"Why not tell the American people the facts about our defense program?" Wheeler asked. "Is it not bogging and breaking down?

"Why not tell the American people the fact that we have few

Willkie Urges All to Unite, Back President

He Says Roosevelt 'Has Stirred World With Great Message'

By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—Wendell A. Willkie said today that "the President has stirred the whole world with his great message."

Commenting on Mr. Roosevelt's Tuesday night speech, the 1940 Republican Presidential candidate added: "It now lies within his power to unite the country in the singleness of effort and resolve which alone can make his vision come true."

The text of his statement follows:

"The President said exceedingly well what we needed to hear. His picture of the economic, social, political and military consequences to America of a Nazi victory over Britain was clear and correct. He also gave us heretofore undisclosed facts illustrating the gravity of Britain's plight. As citizens of the United States, confronting one of our most fateful and difficult crises, we need the facts, however bitter. Facing these facts we recognize the existence of a national emergency. Our foreign policy has again been declared.

"It is now the duty of all of us—Republicans, Democrats, New Dealers—to become united and jointly make that policy effective as the best guarantee of preserving

Food Wins Wars

700 Groceries Here Offer to Handle The 5-Cent Milk

By Gerald G. Gross
Post Staff Writer

The Independent Food Distributors of the District of Columbia yesterday renewed their offer to handle in their 700 groceries the surplus milk which is available to needy families at 5 cents a quart.

Acceptance might turn the program into a success.

As it stands today, after nine month of operation, the project is a failure. Sold at only 11 places—six school buildings, two police stations, two fire stations and the surplus commodities warehouse downtown—less than half of the eligibles are buying. Average daily purchases—about 2,700 quarts—are less than one-fourth of the potential maximum.

Robert E. Bondy, director of public welfare, yesterday reiterated his advocacy of distributing the low-cost milk through readily accessible retail stores.

"Commissioner Young (John Russell Young) and I both were in favor of that plan," said the wel-

We Must Build Health for Defense, Says Mrs. Roosevelt

The National Nutrition Conference for Defense at its closing session yesterday adopted recommendations to be sent to President Roosevelt as a proposed national policy and action program to strengthen defense by building the people's health through proper food.

Mrs. Roosevelt in the last address at the conference declared that "the United States can afford to do all things necessary for defense on every front," including betterment of nutrition, which she put among "non-military things that need to be done now."

Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General, U. S. Public Health Service, warned of the possibility of a shortage in such foods as meats, milk and milk products, when Britain's "crying needs" are added to those of the United States. To forestall such a situation, he pointed out that millions of additional acres in the production of foodstuffs are necessary.

Freedom-of-Seas Policy Limited, but Patrols Are Alert For Nazi Raiders

By George Bookman
Post Staff Writer

In an important addition to the foreign policy he enunciated Tuesday night, President Roosevelt yesterday declared he does not now plan to ask repeal of, or any change in the Neutrality Act, which bars American merchant ships from war zones.

But while accepting this amendment to his newly reasserted policy of "freedom of the seas," the President let Germany know once more that the United States Atlantic patrol will range the seas to spot any submarine, plane or raider, whatever it may be.

Mr. Roosevelt did nothing, however, to allay curiousity over what action he may take under his new "unlimited emergency" powers. An executive order would be needed to bring one of his long list of special powers into play, such as power to keep selectees in the Army beyond one year, he said, and added that he has no executive orders in prospect.

216 At Press Conference

These disclosures came at a press conference, called to give the President an opportunity to answer some of the many questions about his emergency proclamation and naval patrol policy that have arisen since his momentous world-wide broadcast.

Mr. Roosevelt plainly showed the marks of having made history. He appeared grave and somewhat tired. A near-record gathering of 216 crowded into his oval study.

By accepting the Neutrality Act, the President thus altered his program of aid to Great Britain to read as follows:

1. Active resistance to any Hitler grab for control of the seas or control of attack bases for a Western Hemisphere assault.

2. All possible aid to Great Britain, including any naval measures—patrols or otherwise—that may be necessary.

3. Adherence, at present, however, to the Neutrality Act ban against sending merchant ships carrying the United States flag into the zones of war.

Warns Capital and Labor

Outspoken now against the German Fuehrer, where before he had been diplomatic, President Roosevelt refused to answer several questions bearing on plans for American naval aid by saying that Adolf Hitler would like to have that information. Before the Axis-defying "fireside chat," the President used more guarded terms, never referring to Hitler by name at a press conference.

There was no inkling of any action to follow up the emergency proclamation calling upon all citizens to "give precedence" to the needs of the Nation. Officials in close touch with the White House said they thought the purpose of the sweepingly worded proclamation was chiefly psychological. Certainly the President did nothing at his press conference to alter this impression.

Patrol More Effective

The White House acted swiftly after the speech to assure Americans that they would not lose their right of freedom of speech, guaranteed in the Bill of Rights.

A reporter asked White House Secretary Stephen T. Early if the proclamation would shut off debate of the President's foreign policy. Quickly he replied:

"Do you mean there will be no more freedom of speech? No! The

Steel Output Deficiencies Are Forecast

4,800,000 tons of steel to be saved by curtailing 1942 auto production by 20 per cent.

The President pointed out that despite the anticipated deficits, the report showed ample steel for military and British demands, which together call for only 25 per cent of the industry's total output.

The question of meeting the remaining deficit, he adde, was being studied, in an attempt to decide whether to curtail civilian use of steel further, or to increase the capacity of the industry.

Summarizing the report, the President cited Dunn's arguments against the latter course, which pointed out that to build plant capacity for an additional 10,000,000 tons a year more than 4,000,000 more tons would have to be deducted from the amounts available for non-military use.

From the President's comments, it appeared clear that some form of priorities would be necessary to ration civilian supply of steel.

It appeared that the second report would probably evoke a storm of controversy equal in intensity to that which greeted the first study. At that time, as Dunn admitted yesterday, there was criticism of his estimates. This centered on his use of "reliable" capacity, higher than the usual "rated" capacity hitherto taken as a standard of measurement, and on his estimates of demand, which, it was charged by dissenting OPM and other defense experts, were greatly underestimated.

Inferentially conceding the latter point, Dunn, nevertheless, defended his basis of reliable capacity in yesterday's report.

In arriving at his new figures for demand, however, Dunn not only cut the OPM's Bureau of Research and Statistics estimate of civilian requirements, but also made adjustments amounting to reductions of 2,500,000 tons for 1941 and 7,700,000 tons for 1942 in the bureau estimates of steel required for British and other export purposes. These deductions, Dunn said, were made after consultation with the British Iron and Steel Corporation, and were based on the fact that while Britain and other countries might desire the larger amounts of steel, stringencies in shipping prevented their delivery.

our liberties and the only remaining hope of achieving ultimate peace.

"Political blacklists should be torn up. An end must be made to selfish politics, to efforts from whatever source to utilize this great emergency for personal or selfish ends.

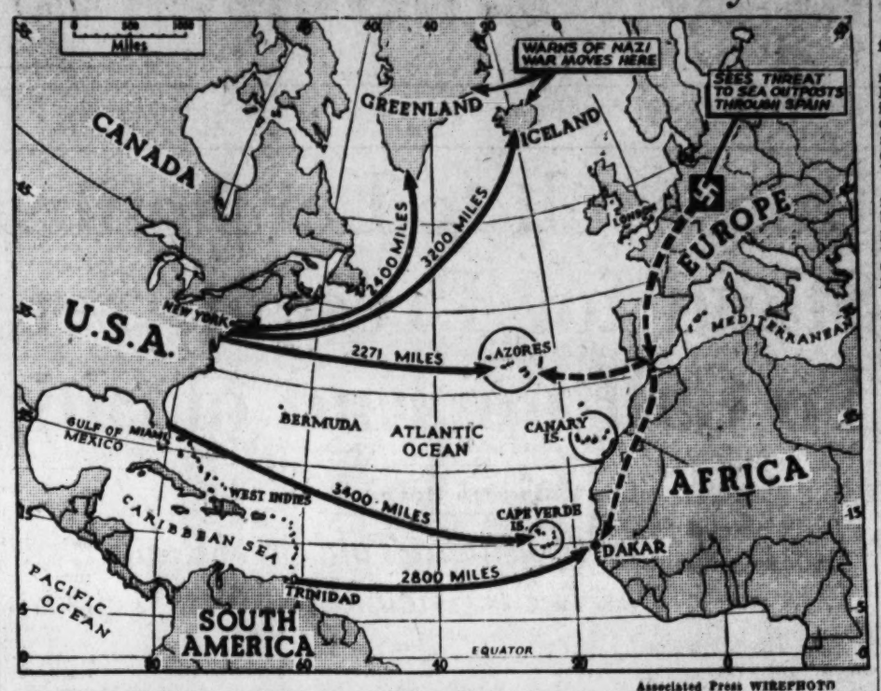

"Government should put aside plans for new crusades. Industry, labor and agriculture must forget their separate objectives which must all be part of the main stream of our effort dedicated to the fulfillment of that effort. For now our purposes must be united.

"Industrial production should be concentrated under one director with adequate authority to make it function swiftly and efficiently. Every effort should be bent immediately to determine which are the immediately vital things such as ships, bombs, tanks—and then insure the rapid production and safe delivery of these tools from our arsenals which Britain needs and needs at once.

"Furthermore, we can not be satisfied merely to match plane for plane and tank for tank. American production is capable of more than that. We must outdo the arsenals of the Nazi.

"The President has stirred the whole world with his great message. It now lies within his power to unite the country in the singleness of effort and resolve which alone can make his vision come true. Let every citizen, whatever his occupation or political belief but feel that he is bearing his just part in our common effort and sharing equitably in the high privilege of preserving human liberty—then America will be able to assume her rightful leadership in the struggle for a better world of tomorrow."

forums will always be open!"

At his press conference "explanation" of the fireside talk, the President stated first that convoys in the old sense were outmoded, because they now had to cope with surface raiders and airplane bombers as well as the submarines of World War days.

The policy of the naval patrol, ranging far out in the Atlantic, will be to find out where any submarine, plane or raider is operating. While this can not be done with 100 per cent accuracy, the patrol is growing more effective every day, he said.

A questioner who wanted to know if there was immediate need of extending the patrol was told that he was asking about secret military matters and that he would not get an answer.

The Chief Executive insisted there is no contradition between the Neutrality Act and his reproclaimed doctrine of "freedom of the seas." They tie in, said Mr. Roosevelt.

He declared it would violate the Neutrality Act to send merchant ships into the war zone.

Freedom of the seas can be limited, Mr. Roosevelt explained, by saying that merchant ships flying the Stars and Stripes cannot go into ports where, under what he called the doctrine of chances, they would be destroyed.

He was asked for an outright assurance that he does not intend to ask repeal of the Neutrality Act, even though Secretary of War Stimson and Secretary of Navy Knox have recommended repeal. The President said he could give that assurance.

Pressed for a promise that he would not ask changes in the law, the President finally sighed and said he was not considering anything at the present time in regard to the Neutrality Act.

To people who wanted to know if patrol vessels had been authorized to shoot or what further steps of naval aid would be taken, the President said Hitler would like to have the information. Thus he disposed of their questions.

There are some things he will not talk about, Mr. Roosevelt said emphatically, and he said the press would get accustomed after a while to not getting some questions answered.

The President defended his authority to issue the proclamation of an unlimted emergency, saying he could cite eight pages of titles of legislative acts recognizing his power to put the Nation on a total emergency footing.

The proclamation can only have practical effect on the life of the average man if given force by an executive order under one of the emergency powers, he said.

There are no executive orders under these powers in prospect now, Mr. Roosevelt stated in so many words.

In this connection, he said, an executive order would be needed to keep selectees in the service for more than a year and he pointed out that none had been issued.

He said he had not heard of any plan to take over any radio stations. He has power now to do this in an emergency.

Committee Maps Ship Strike Action

Local 68 in San Francisco, and James P. Smith, of the C. I. O. Steel Workers Organizing Committee Local, both said they would put the Truman Committee proposal before the membership. They each declared, however, that the proposal to accept the West Coast master agreement, already has been turned down by their respective units.

The committee proposal, as put by Senator Mead (Democrat), of New York, to Hook, was that the A. F. of L. union give up its demands for a closed shop, wages of $1.15 an hour and double time for overtime, and accept $1.12 an hour and time and one-half for overtime.

Bethlehem Willing

The Bethlehem Shipbuilding Co. has said it would agree to the latter pay rates, provided in the master agreement on the insistence of the Navy, and is willing to arbitrate several minor points in dispute, but will not accept a closed shop. Hook had earlier declared that the closed shop issue was not a "paramount" one with the union as it now had 98 per cent of the plant organized.

Smith answered committee pleas that his union accept the master agreement rates by declaring its terms would "freeze out the C. I. O." in San Francisco.

He declared the strike called by his local union was not an "outlaw" one, and said that it had the "full backing and sanction" of the C. I. O. President Philip Murray, of the C. I. O., had authorized him to make such a statement, he said. President William Green, of the A. F. of L., has condemned the San Francisco strikes.

Both union officials said they were compiling lists of the names and addresses of the striking workers and would submit them to the committee. There was no indication given at the time that the committee wanted the lists for a possible direct individual appeal.

The plan, it was later indicated, is to make a strong bac-to-work plea, asking for replies.

To repeated demands from committeemen that they send their men back to their jobs, both Hook and Smith contended they had no authority to do so. The former contended that the Bethlehem management should give in rather than the union, adding that the strikers "were burned up" by the company's long-standing union opposition.

"And if we withdraw our picket line," he added, "the Bay Cities Metal Trades Council would put one in. . . . They're using us as the spear-head to get their demands."

Hook Denies Charges

Chairman Truman and Senator Connally (Democrat), of Texas, both told Hook they didn't believe he wanted to end the strike. This Hook denied.

"It has been intimated that you are a Communist and in the pay of a foreign government," Truman declared.

"That's a damnable lie. I'm a good American citizen and never was a Communist," Hook snapped back. He offered to show the committee his honorable discharge papers from the Navy.

President Accused of Preaching Fear

planes suitable for combat fighting—that is, equipped with armor plate, adequate fire power and self-sealing gas tanks? Why not tell the people that our Army is ill trained, judged by modern standards of war? Why not tell the people, in short, Mr. President, that we are wholly unprepared to fight 3,000 miles from our shores?

"And, Mr. President, why didn't you tell the American people that there is no possibility of a military invasion of the Americas? Aren't these cold, hard facts:

"That our Navy is the mightiest in all the world—and that it is becoming stronger and stronger?

"That the German fleet is inconsequential and was designed for short range fighting?

"That to invade either North or South America the invading force would need a tremendously superior fleet?

"That it would require at least seven years for Germany to build a fleet that would equal ours?"

Not Enough Ships

Wheeler also asked if it wern't true that there wasn't sufficient shipping in the whole world to transport an army of a million men and their equipment from Europe or Africa to the Americas.

He asked the President if it were not true, also, that Britain's air manpower was exhausted, that England and America together could not land troops in Europe, that American manpower and airpower could be brought to bear in Europe only through establishment of a Near East front.

Wheeler contended available American shipping was inadequate for an expeditionary force of more than 400,000 men, and that such a force would be inadequate even to defend air bases on a Near Eastern front.

"Just as I know that this Nation can live in peace—just as I know that we in the Americas could repel and throw back any invading force—so do I know that American labor, American industry and American genius can compete with slave or cheap labor or with totalitarian controlled industry," Wheeler asserted. "To say otherwise is to indicate lack of confidence and faith in American production.

"England controls the largest low wage labor supply in all the world. British factories, with British machinery and British executives and employing the cheap labor of India and the Malay states, have never been able to stifle American competition.

"If facts prove anything, they prove that slave or low wage labor can not compete on anything like equal terms with free labor."

He said further:

"At this minute you are the leader of the Morgans—the Rockefellers—the Kuhn Loebs—and the elder statesmen who want war but are too old to fight. Wendell Willkie is your lieutenant. These, your newfound friends, join in praising the war program which you have raised in the ashes of social and economic reform. Aren't you, Mr. President, a little chagrined by your newfound friends?

"You, President Roosevelt, are creating intolerance and bigotry. You are turning class against class—race against race—and sect against sect—in a country where all races, classes, and all religions have lived together peacefully and tolerantly for centuries.

"I am opposed to Fascism, nazism or communism. If there are those within the hearing of my voice who prefer any foreign 'ism to Americanism, I say, go to Russia, Germany or Italy, but stay there.

"The American people are firmly resolved to avoid this war. If I know anything of public sentiment or the temper of the American people I fear the fate of those who would take them into the hell of war today. . . .

"I greatly admire the English, they are smart people. Today with the identical tactics that preceded our entry into the first World War they would take us into another world war. Then as now they were fighting our war. Then as now we were to be enslaved. Then as now South America was to be invaded. Then as now the Germans wanted our country . . .

"The American people are still moved by noble emotions but they learned 25 years ago to their eternal sorrow that there is no idealism in war. They know—after fighting a war to make the world safe for democracy—that the four freedoms of our form of government cannot be imposed upon all the people in all the world. Democracy and freedom spring from within."

Army Rejects Bids On Huge Coffee Order as Too High

Acting on the advice of the OPM purchases division, the Army has rejected bids for 11,000,000 pounds of coffee because of "unwarranted" spreads between the cost of the coffee and the offered price, it was announced yesterday.

The OPM said that the bulk of the coffee had been imported from Brazil at a price not exceeding 9 cents per pound. The rejected bids ranged from slightly more than 11 cents to about 12½ cents for a standard grade. The quoted prices, if accepted, would not be reflected in higher returns to the South American producers, the OPM explained, since the present quota of Brazilian coffee has been filled for some days.

Navy Yard Workers Add $4,254 to British Aid

Rear Admiral George Pettengill, commandant of the Washington Navy Yard, announced yesterday that Yard employes have contributed $4,254 to the Bundles for Britain hospitals day fund.

In commending employes for their donations, Admiral Pettengill said that "while aiding Britain, we are aiding ourselves, for Britain is now at war with powers who are avowedly hostile to democracies and to our way of life."

Hillman Denies 'Stimulating' Strike

Sidney Hillman wrote to the Senate Defense Investigating Committee denying a charge made before the group Wednesday that he had "stimulated" a strike at the Vultee aircraft plant last fall.

Hillman, associate OPM director and then labor member of the Defense Commission, said that Harvey W. Brown, president of the Machinists Union (A. F. L.) was "completely in error" in his accusation.

Smith, Davis, Cox Appeal For U. S. Unity

By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—Three former Democratic Presidential candidates, speaking from widely separated cities, appealed tonight for unity during the present national emergency.

The broadcast, sponsored by the Committee to Defend America by Aiding the Allies, was carried by the Columbia Broadcasting System, with Alfred E. Smith speaking from New York, John W. Davis from Albany, N. Y., and James M. Cox from Dayton, Ohio.

Smith, four times Governor of New York and Democratic standard bearer in 1928, who opposed President Roosevelt's reelection last fall, said the unity needed now "does not mean the suppression of the right to think or to speak, but it does mean that we must be careful to see that we do not confuse, rather than clarify our problems."

Davis, who sought the Presidency in 1924, urged every American to "promise that, if he cannot help" in the emergency, "at least he will not hinder."

Cox Praises Vision, Courage

Cox, who ran for President in 1920, when Mr. Roosevelt was his Vice Presidential running mate, said: "Our duty is to muster our material and spiritual strength to keep it (Hitlerism) as far from our shores as possible by supporting England, the front line of resistance, and, if we come ot grips with it, then destroy it."

"It is untrue and unkind," the former Governor of Ohio said, "to assert that the President deliberately seeks to create conditions that will lead to war.

"He has the vision to see the spread of the most terrible pestilence of all time and the courage to oppose it. Without reservation, I support the policy of our President. There must be leadership in every great movement, and he is our leader."

"The President, as our leader, calls upon all loyal citizens to give precedence to the needs of the United States for the preservation of her liberty," Smith said. "He calls upon our workmen and our employers to forget their differences and to put a strong united effort behind the defense program in order that the only kind of government which recognizes the rights of labor and of capital can survive.

"Who—who, I say, can possibly take exception to these principles?"

Davis asserted: "Capital, as the President has said, must be satisfied with less profit and a narrowed freedom of choice. Labor must be content to perform without interruption.

"The citizen must be prepared to meet higher taxes and to abridge his comfort. But what does all this count if, in the end, we emerge—as I profoundly believe we shall—a free and happy people, still in possession of the rights and liberties we and our fathers have cherished?"

Needy Americans Must Forego Free Butter to Aid Britain

Needy Americans were told yesterday that they will have to go without Government gifts of surplus butter so that Great Britain may be supplied with more dairy products.

As the Agriculture Department made known this sacrifice for Britain's cause, Lord Halifax, the British Ambassador, received from President Roosevelt a detailed report on United States arms production.

Secretary of Agriculture Wickard said that severe drought conditions east of the Mississippi River, cutting milk output, made necessary withdrawal of butter from the surplus foods list available to the needy under the stamp and direct relief distribution programs.

Butter prices have gone up reflected British demands for cheese and evaporated and dried milk, as well as lower milk production, he explained.

While emphasizing that it was "too early" in the season to become alarmed over a possible food shortage, Wickard said latest weather reports indicated that the drought was spreading westward into the vital corn and hog and Midwestern dairy and poultry producing regions.

He said surpluses of corn and other feed crops from past years were available to fill any gap in the production of essential raw materials for meat, dairy and poultry production.

Mr. Roosevelt conferred with Lord Halifax for two and one-half hours. The President's epochal declaration of Tuesday night took up some of the conversation. The British envoy told reporters he thought it was a "fine" speech.

John Maynard Keynes, economic adviser to the British government, accompanied Halifax to the White House.

The Ambassador told reporters: "The President gave us a report on American production. We had general conversations stressing national policy. There was no discussion of further steps to protect shipping. That is his business."

Roosevelt Talk Well Received In Congress

By Hedley Donovan

Post Staff Writer

Congressional reaction to President Roosevelt's fireside chat and full emergency proclamation was predominantly favorable yesterday, though marked by uncertainity as to the specific steps implied by the President's speech.

Isolationist opinion appeared divided. Several members of the non-interventionist bloc condemned the speech as a step toward undeclared war, to be undertaken without the consent of Congress, but another group of isolationists professed to be encouraged by Mr. Roosevelt's address.

Typical of the latter view was a statement issued after a "strategy meeting" of some 40 Senate and House isolationists, who declared:

"The President has not yet been won over to the war party. In his fireside chat of last evening he did not close the door on the millions of voters who believed his unequivocal promise of the Presidential campaign."

Brown Sees "Middle Course"

Senator Brown (Democrat), of Michigan, an Administration supporter, voiced the reaction of many legislators when he said the President had adopted "a middle course."

The speech "left for future determination" the point at which America would resist a threat of aggression against the Western Hemisphere, Brown said. "Just how we will further aid in delivering materials to the British is also left undetermined," he added. "Neither of the extremists in the war issue can get much support for their views."

Senator George (Democrat), of Georgia, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, whose interpretation was later confirmed at President Roosevelt's press conference, told reporters the speech indicated "extension and intensification" of the Navy's patrol activities, but no convoys and no revision of neutrality law.

"Forceful and Clear"—Rayburn

House Speaker Rayburn called the speech a "forceful and clear" message which should prove "very satisfying and encouraging not only to the people in the Western Hemisphere, but to the democratic peoples throughout the earth." He said he saw no indication in the address that the President wanted additional legislation to carry out his emergency powers.

Majority Leader McCormack, of Massachusetts, joined in this view and described as "pure bunk" assertions that the emergency proclamation has made the President a dictator.

"The President is doing all he can to keep America out of war," McCormack said, "and I believe there are many ways to aid the democracies short of war."

Yesterday's conference of isolationists from both houses of Congress, one of a series of informal meetings, brought several proposals for an intensified campaign against intervention in the war, but adoption of no definite program.

Members of the group indicated they were not sympathetic to a proposal for an informal national referendum on the war issue, placed before them by Richard A. Moore, of New York City, a representative of the America First Committee.

Other Comments

Their statement on the President's speech asserted that "the voice of the 80 per cent of the American people opposed to war has been heard in Washington above the clamor of the 'war now' spokesmen, including members of the President's Cabinet. Public opinion still functions in the United States. War is not inevitable."

Other Congressional comments on the speech follows:

Senator Wagner (Democrat), of New York: "A noble and momentous message . . . He charts the only realistic course America can take for the full and vigilant defense of our freedom to live and work in a peaceful world of good neighbors."

Senator Vandenberg (Republican), of Michigan: "The President says that 'the war is coming very close to home.' Certainly he brings it much 'closer home' when he puts us in a state of full emergency. Nothing has been said which alters my conviction that America should stay out of this war."

Senator McCarran (Democrat), of Nevada: "A tentative declaration of war without constitutional or legal authority . . . challenges every law and precedent in American history."

The Virginia delegation in the House: "We . . . pledge ourselves to support his policies in defense of our traditional principles of freedom and liberty, as reaffirmed by him in his address."

D. C. to Rally Volunteers For Defense

By Howard F. Wentworth

Post Staff Writer

Washingtonians will be called upon to render "any and every type of service" essential to carrying out the President's proclamation of an unlimited emergency, Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, executive officer of the District Defense Council, announced last night.

Plans to rally civilian volunteers—and he stressed the point that all services will be voluntary—will be thrown into high gear, Whitehurst declared. Citizens desiring to take part in municipal defense activities may register for duty on June 10, 11 and 12, he added.

Some 40 public schools—the names are to be announced later—will be designated as places of registration, Whitehurst said. Hours of application for volunteer service will be from 3:30 to 8:30 p. m.

Arrangements for the three-day registrations are in charge of Mrs. Harry S. Bernton, wife of a local physician, who is chairman of a special committee on volunteer services of the defense council.

Whitehurst to Remain

"We want to do everything within our power to cooperate in the President's program," said Whitehurst. "The purpose of the registration days is to obtain information on everyone who is willing to do anything whatsoever in our local civilian setup."

The urgency of the present situation as outlined by the President has apparently altered the plan of Whitehurst to relinquish his post as local defense council director because of the "press of other duties."

Although Commissioner John Russell Young said he expected Whitehurst to offer his resignation yesterday, the highway chief declared:

"As long as there are enough hours in the day to accomplish my work as executive vice chairman of the defense council, I expect to continue."

Robert E. Bondy, director of public welfare, who is chairman of the council's committee on welfare and consumer interest, also said he planned to remain in his defense position, although he recently announced his intention to resign as welfare director to go with the American Red Cross.

Air Raid Spotters

Perhaps one of the most important divisions of the volunteer service program is the civilian corps of air observers. They will be known as "air raid spotters" and both men and women may offer themselves for duty.

Maj. Ernest W. Brown, superintendent of police and chairman of the civil protection committee of the defense council, has recommended appointment of 1,600 men and women to serve as an auxiliary police force.

His proposal has yet to be approved by the Commissioners, but there is every indication that such a unit will be formed. Brown also has asked for an additional 282 men for his regular force.

Of the 1,600 volunteers for auxiliary police service, 100 women would be placed under the Metropolitan Police Women's Bureau, 100 men under the Park Police and the balance under the command of Maj. Brown for distribution to the various precincts.

Axis Scoffs at Speech London Calls 'Iron Pact Between Allies'

By the Associated Press

President Roosevelt's speech was hailed in London last night as "an iron pact between Allies" and evidence that the United States means war if need be; but in the Axis capitals unofficial commentators professed to see nothing particularly new in it.

Italian newspapers published only a 750-word summary of the speech, and the newspaper Tribuna summed up Fascist reaction with:

"We know what we knew before; namely, where Roosevelt wants to go. But the position of the United States remains internationally turpid and perhaps even more equivocal than before."

In Japan the influential newspaper Nichi Nichi termed it "one step nearer to participation in the war;" but most issues on the Tokyo Stock Market moved upward, apparently due to a belief in financial quarters that the speech contained little to upset Japanese-American trade relations.

In Germany the press late yesterday had not yet published any report of the speech, but the authoritative commentary news service Dienst Aus Deutschland said the President's arguments "apparently do not differ from numerous earlier American declarations."

The German radio, in a broadcast for foreign consumption, accused the President of aiming at "nothing short of unlimited control by Washington of the world's sea lanes," and argued that it was not Germany but "certain circles in the United States" which constitute an imperialistic threat to the world.

No Change—Vichy

In Vichy, the semiofficial reaction to the President's mention of French North Africa and Dakar was that it failed to change the situation between France and the United States; as for the rest of the speech, it was regarded as an affair strictly between the United States and Germany.

Government officials in Argentina were reluctant to comment formally, but one foreign office source said the speech "should wake up those still dozing in the face of the European situation."

El Mundo, the only morning newspaper in Buenos Aires to comment editorially, said that Mr. Roosevelt had replied yesterday to "a series of insults to civilization."

In Mexico the comment was generally favorable. In Brazil the Rio De Janeiro newspaper Correio Da Manha, pro-Ally, said the speech showed "the cause of the United States was identified with humanity itself."

In German-dominated Bulgaria the official radio spokesman saw "no dangerous surprises" in the speech, and interpreted it to mean there would be no war unless Germany undertakes an attack against the United States.

Australia Approves

Australia approved the speech in official and unofficial comments. The Labor leader, John Curtin, said: "Every Britisher and Australian who is a democrat and lover of freedom . . . must offer a prayer of gratitude for all the speech says and involves."

In Ottawa, Canada's Prime Minister, W. L. Mackenzie King, declared: "The life-line now stretches from America to Britain . . . Germany will have to draw her own conclusions as to what may be involved through an attempt by force to frustrate delivery from America of munitions and food to Britain."

In London and the other British Commonwealth capitals the encouragement derived from the speech was offset, however, by the increasingly dark reports from Crete.

These, in detail, were some of the responses from the Americas:

Premier Carlos Saladrigas of Cuba: "Cuba has not changed its policy about the war (a stated policy to back the United States), which has been clearly expressed several times."

Honduras—The newspaper "La Epoco," saying that Mr. Roosevelt thoroughly merited the loyalty he asked, declared:

"We are on the very threshold of war."

British Bomb Tunisia; French Build Airforce

By the Associated Press

Vichy, May 28.—British warplanes pursuing a Libya-bound Italian convoy attacked the important French Tunisian port of Sfax today, setting a French steamer afire and hitting two Italian vessels.

This outburst of air war in French North Africa, coupled with fighting between British and French planes over Syrian airdromes at the other end of the Mediterranean, brought a dangerous worsening of relations between the former allies.

It was disclosed here almost simultaneously that Axis powers had relaxed the armistice to permit France to rebuild a continental air force "for defense of the French empire."

Almost all members of the Vichy government save Chief of State Petain were in Paris tonight for collaboration negotiations with the Germans.

Official information said the attack on Sfax, which caused an unstated number of French and native casualties, began with British bombing of an Italian merchantman which was hit and took refuge in the Kerkennah Islands, about 20 miles off the Tunisian shore.

When the ship attempted to leave, the British attacked again, extending their raid this time to include another Italian merchant vessel and her destroyer escort which hove into view.

British Sink French Tanker

One of the Italian ships raced for Sfax harbor, and the British bombed the port, hitting harbor installations and a phosphate storehouse and setting fire to the 4,999-ton French steamer Rabelais, the account stated. The fire was extinguished later, but at least eight persons aboard were injured.

[The British said nothing about an attack on Sfax, but the R. A. F. announced that it scored several direct hits on two merchantmen off the North African coast and that both were seen emitting volumes of smoke.

[The Admiralty in London also reported British submarines had sunk a French tanker in an Italian convoy and conuted as destroyed an Axis transport of 18,000 tons, carrying probably 3,000 men to Libya.]

A French government announcement today said one of Britain's American-made Martin bombers had been shot down in Syria by French fighter planes yesterday.

Today, dispatches from that French mandate told of new British raids on Tripoli de Syrie (not to be confused with Italian Tripoli in Africa), and on Deir es Zor, Palmyra and Rayak airports, all carried out by Martin planes.

The French said antiaircraft fire drove the British away and damage was slight.

These reports came upon the heels of an inspection trip by Marshal Petain to the revitalized Aulnat air base near Clermon-Ferrand—a trip which resulted in disclosure of French aerial rearmament.

Original terms of the armistice called for dismantling of all airfields and air force installations in unoccupied France, and for months only dismantled planes could be seen on the Aulnat airdrome.

No one would say how big the new French air force may be. However, the official French information office said in a statement that in view of the British attack on the French fleet at Mers-El-Kebir and the De Gaullist assault on Dakar last year, "where France had to defend her territory against attack, German authorities granted this (the aviation) arm the proper means to resist any foreign aggression."

Among 15 planes Petain saw were the most recent models, including the Devoitine 520, which is characterized here as a fast and very maneuverable pursuit plane. He also looked over depots containing 835 new airplane motors.

threatening when he was sent back to a prison camp with other captives.

While a contingent of New Zealanders were mopping up a new group of parachutists, Schmeling seized a wounded man's rifle and tried to escape, whereupon he was killed, the informants said.

Schmeling, who was born on September 22, 1905, in Klein Luckow, near Prenzlau, was the son of an officer of the merchant marine. He started his sporting activities as a wrestler but did not achieve much success in this sport and he soon changed to soccer.

In 1923 he entered amateur boxing and a year later was runner-up at the German championships tournament. At that time he decided to become a professional boxer.

On June 12, 1930, he met Jack Sharkey for the world title. Sharkey, who had won the first three rounds, struck a low punch in the fourth and was disqualified. Schmeling thus was declared the world champion.

In June, 1932, he met Sharkey again and the latter won the decision and championship.

The high point of his career was his defeat of Joe Louis in 1936. No one conceded that he had a chance, but he knocked out the negro, who later was to become champion, in the twelfth round. In a rematch —Schmeling's last fight — Louis knocked out Max in the first round.

Latin American Studies Urged

John W. Studebaker, U. S. Commissioner of Education, yesterday urged "prompt enlargement" of study of Latin American countries in the public schools of this country as an aid to total defense of this hemisphere.

Commissioner Studebaker made the appeal in a letter to the Nation's public school officials.

He urged that schools plan to form a unit on Latin America in social studies courses, running from six weeks in grade schools to a semester in high schools. He also urged that educators assign teachers to such courses this spring so that they may prepare for their subjects by special study and travel.

borhood the first day were wiped out.

"It took two days before Jerry was able to land any planes at the field," he said. "Then they started a terrific attack and drove us a mile and a half down the road from the airdrome until the Maoris turned the tables with their bayonets.

"Some members of the ground staff of the airdrome who never had handled a bayonet in their lives lined up with the Maoris.

"It gave you a queer kind of feeling to watch them. Death meant nothing to them. It was awe-inspiring with a touch of the hideous as the green-painted Nazi parachute troopers went down screaming when the dark-skinned little warriors sliced through them, laughing, cheering and shouting as they plunged cold steel into the bodies.

2 Asked to Be Shot

"And our amateur bayoneters took quite a toll. Two Nazi prisoners kept asking to be shot. It seemed to us that they had gone out of their minds. And no wonder."

Meanwhile a petty officer of the fleet air arm, who had been captured by the Germans in Malemi, told how he escaped under heavy fire and tipped off Royal Marines who tackled the enemy with bayonets and wiped out the unit.

The petty officer was a member of the ground staff at the air field on Crete. He was cut off by the mass parachute landing of German invaders. The crew took shelter in trenches as the Germans advanced over the field, firing like madmen with Tommy guns.

"We threw ourselves in the trenches just as the enemy began a murderous barrage with grenades," the petty officer related. "We were sheltered under the bodies of our own dead. Then the Germans caught us and took us to a commanding officer who sought to use us to get the resisting British forces to surrender.

Shouted to Fellows

"They forced us to march into No Man's Land carrying flags under cover of their tommy guns. We were given the mission to proceed a certain distance, then shout to the British to surrender.

"When we had reached the half way mark we broke into a run and shouted to our fellows to show that we were English.

"The Germans got my friend with a burst of the tommy guns, but I kept on."

The British force to which he fled proved to be marines. He gave them the information he had regarding the German positions, and the marines "went in with bayonets and cleaned out the Jerries who were terrified because they expected a walkover."

The petty officer said it seemed evident that the Germans never had encountered such tough fighting.

"As one Anzac said," he commented, "all idea of pity had gone long ago and every one of us had the single thought—to kill and go on killing."

Other members of fleet air arm crews told hoy they escaped in the confusion as the Germans fired wildly and sought to consolidate their positions at the Cretan air fields.

"The air was thick with parachutes, while you could see the gliders sailing in tow," one said.

Awards Given 4 At Flower Show

Four women were presented with special awards at the Chevy Chase Garden Club annual flower show yesterday in the Chapel of All Saints Church, Chevy Chase Circle.

They were Mrs. Egbert Clarke, winner of the most blue ribbons: Mrs. Laurence E. Voorhees, most points; Mrs. P. G. Nutting, outstanding entry, and Mrs. Stanley Young, best rose.

With more than 400 entries in the show, blue ribbons were awarded to more than 75 winners.

Nazi Big Guns Hammer Coast

By International News Service

London (Thursday), May 29.—German long-range batteries on the French coast, already pounded for the second successive night by a new R. A. F. offensive, early today hurled their giant shells onto the English coast while Nazi air raiders soared over western England and northern Ireland and dropped a few bombs.

The bombardment began shortly after midnight. Buildings on the southern English coast shook with the blast of exploding shells which the German artillery units fired at intervals of 10 minutes.

[Late yesterday the Royal Air Force struck at the German positions on the French coast, drawing a defense barrage which British observers considered one of the heaviest daylight blasts of the war, a United Press dispatch said.]

[R. A. F. planes shot down a German fighter in an aerial fight over the French coast, it was authoritatively learned by the Associated Press. Another German plane was reported destroyed over Britain.]

Other British warplanes were busy over sea as well as land. One unit of coastal command bombers was credited with attacking a German convoy near Brest. An official announcement said a 5,000-ton ship was left listing heavily after sustaining direct bomb hits.

Earlier, two enemy vessels were reported sunk, one off Holland; the other off the Bay of Biscay.

For hours Tuesday night, violent explosions shook the region of Boulogne and Calais as the R. A. F. struck.

Other raiders lashed at airdromes in Lannion in Brittany Tuesday afternoon. An official statement said heavy damage was wrought also in an attack on Cologne. Still another swarm of British bombers raked the Nazi airdrome at Caen.

Helgoland Raid Foiled

Berlin (Thursday), May 29 (U.P.).—German defense guns thwarted attempts by British planes Wednesday evening to attack the French coast and Helgoland Bight, the official D. N. B. news agency reported early today.

It said two British Spitfire fighter planes were shot down in the Channel before they reached the French coast, and three Bristol-Blenheim bombers spotted flying low over the Frisian Islands were destroyed by German fighter planes.

Berlin Claims Dive-Bombers Have Sunk Five British Troop Transports in Crete's Suda Bay

By the Associated Press

Berlin, (Thursday), May 29.—German dive-bombers were reported early today to have sunk five British transports in Crete Island's Suda Bay, and to have inflicted heavy losses on British and Greek troops trying to board them.

Two other transports were reported damaged in the fierce fighting which was believed here to be in its final victorious stage for the Germans.

Bitter fighting raged around the strategic bay after the high command's announcement of the capture of Canea, the nearby capital.

Many prisoners, including the Greek naval commander of the island, have fallen into German hands, the official news agency D. N. B. said.

Parachute troops continued to pour into the island and, with Canea in German hands, it is regarded as likely here that reinforcement and provisioning of German troops will be greatly simplified.

Nazis Seize Pass Near Salum

Berlin, May 28 (U.P.).—The high command announced tonight that Axis troops on the North African front had occupied Halfaya (Hellfire) Pass southeast of African Salum, just inside the Egyptian border. (The British confirmed the occupation.)

The communique said that south of Crete the air force scored direct hits on a heavy British cruiser and a destroyer and set fire to an enemy tanker.

The high command reported new attacks by German bombers on shipping around England. Three freighters totalling 17,000 tons were reported sunk and another merchantman was hit severly. Other German planes attacked southwestern and southeastern English seaports and the Thames Estuary, the communique said.

"Weak" Royal Air Force units were admitted to have bombed Cologne and other areas in western Germany Tuesday night, causing civilian deaths.

On the north African front, around Salum, the German high command said Axis forces had captured several armored cars and considerable material. "Heavy bloody losses" were suffered by the British, it was reported, and a number of prisoners were taken.

Mrs. Roosevelt Opposes Censure Of DiesCommittee

Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt opposed a motion that the Washington Newspaper Guild condemn the Dies Committee, at a Guild meeting last night when she said that although she does not like the committee, such a resolution would constitute an attack on an arm of Congress. The motion, made by Andrew Odet, employe of Happy Days, a Civilian Conservation Corps publication, was tabled.

The membership eligibility of Mary Spargo, Dies Committee investigator and former reporter for the Washington Daily News, was questioned at last night's Guild meeting on the ground that she is no longer employed in newspaper work. Miss Spargo said she would abide by the decision of the membership committee. The matter was referred to that committee which will make a study of the eligibility of all Guild members.

John Moutoux, president of the Washington Newspaper Guild, presided at the meeting in the board room of the District Building.

Red Cross Plans Nurses School

In order to increase the Nation's supply of registered nurses the Red Cross will establish a school for nurses in collaboration with Bryn Mawr College and the Woman's Medical College of Pennsylvania, Miss Mary Beard, director of the Red Cross Nursing Service, announced yesterday.

The schools, first to be established during this emergency, will train 200 college graduates to be nurses in less than the usual 36 months. Classes will be held at Bryn Mawr from June 23 to September 13. A tuition fee of $106 per student will be charged.

District headquarters of the Red Cross announced yesterday that an evening group of knitters will meet each Monday at 8 p. m. at the District Chapter House, 1730 E Street Northwest.

Germans Capture Capital of Crete and others set afire.

Fighting still raged on about Malemi Airdrome, 10 miles southwest of Canea; at Betimo and Candia. At Candia, an informed person conceded here, the situation was "not too good."

So heavy were the continuing German aerial reinforcements that the invaders now apparently outnumbered the defenders.

Not only in Crete were British troops falling back; for the British command announced that in the far-away but related struggle of North Africa imperial troops had "temporarily withdrawn" from Halfaya ("Hellfire") Pass in the vicinity of Salum, the Egyptian village near the frontier of Italian Libya. (The Germans said British losses were severe.)

This retreat, it was added, was "in the face of pressure by numerically superior" Axis forces.

Late dispatches from Reuters, British news agency, reported that a 30-mile-wide German drive across the Libyan border into Egypt had been halted.

British cleanup operations in Ethiopia were declared to be progressing well. The Italian garrisons of Debra Tabor were reported surrounded and Fascist troops still at large in the lakes area were under heavy pressure.

Gen. Cafarti, commanding the Twenty-sixth Italian Davision, surrendered and all of his troops were reported to be coming in, the British Middle-East headquarters announced.

Excess Profits Tax Plan May Be Shelved

By the Associated Press

The House Ways and Means Committee concluded a five-week hearing yesterday on means of raising $3,500,000,000 additional revenue amid predictions of several members that the Treasury's excess profits tax plan would be ditched.

The Treasury proposed setting 10 per cent of invested capital as the maximum a corporation could earn without being subjected to an excess profits levy of 33 to 65 per cent.

Testimony of witnesses was overwhelmingly against the plan and many members reported a deluge of communications voicing opposition. Most of the protests centered around the Treasury proposal to abandon a present alternative method of computing the untaxable credit for excess profits tax purposes. This alternate permits corporations to count as untaxable "normal" profits 95 per cent of their average earnings in 1936-39.

Hundreds Protest

Chairman Doughton (Democrat), of North Carolina, placed in the committee's files what he said were "hundreds of telegrams—all of them against the Treasury's excess profits proposal." Although Doughton has not publicly expressed himself on the plan, he was a strong advocate of the average earnings formula when it was enacted last year.

Other members, asking anonymity, expressed belief that the Treasury proposal would "go out" early in the committee's closed sessions beginning next week. Predictions on how long these sessions will run range from two to six weeks.

Meantime, members were exploring the excess profits tax field for a substitute for the Treasury program.

Present law provides the average earnings method of computing the untaxable credit and also permits corporations desiring to do so to compute their credit as 8 per cent of invested capital.

Would Combine Formulas

Representative McKeough (Democrat), of Illinois, said he would suggest that the two formulas—average earnings and invested capital—might be combined. Under this scheme, a corporation would compute its credit under the average earnings method and also under the invested capital plan. These two amounts would be added and their sum divided by two to calculate the corporation's credit.

"It's purely arbitrary," McKeough said, "but it would have the advantage of catching some of the profits that the Treasury says are being lost by virtue of the alternate methods and at the same time would lessen the impact on concerns wtih low capital and who now use the average earnings formula."

Other members said that present levies might be stiffened by lowering the credit percentages and increasing the tax rates. The rates now are from 25 to 50 per cent.

Canada Given Almost All Wheat Imports

Copyright by New York Times

Because 85 per cent crop loans and other aids have driven the price of July wheat in the United States to 97 cents, a price with which Canadian wheat could pay the 40 cent a bushel duty and still compete, President Roosevelt yesterday imposed quotas on wheat imports into the United States but granted Canada nearly the whole amount of the quota allowed to enter.

President Roosevelt's proclamation today limited total imports of wheat during the next 12 months to 800,000 bushels. Of this, Canada will be allowed to supply 795,000 bushels.

Canada's Bins Full

If the quota had not been imposed Canada could have supplied 100 times as much. On August 1, last year, she had 834,000,000 of wheat to sell and little chance to sell it. She uses only about 120,000,000 bushels herself and almost her only other market under present conditions is Great Britain and Ireland, which take about 225,000,000 bushels. Her balance available for export on May 1 was 560,000,000 bushels. Canada's bins are bursting with wheat and the Canadian farmer would consider himself lucky if he could get 50 cents for wheat on the farm.

The President's proclamation also limited imports of wheat flour, semolina, crushed or cracked whea and similar products to 4,000,000 pounds. Of this, Canada will be allotted 3,815,000 pounds.

At the same time, House and Senate conferees on the $1,100,000,000 Agricultural Department Appropriation bill agreed to limit the farm parity fund to $212,000,000 instead of $450,000,000 as approved by the Senate.

Influenced by President

The agreement was influenced by President Roosevelt's signature on legislation which authorized payments totaling 85 per cent of parity on cotton, corn, wheat, tobacco and rice crops.

Mr. Roosevelt signed after with assurance that Federal money would not be spent under the program to bring prices of the five crops higher than 100 per cent of parity. Such a provision was written into the farm bill by the conferees.

It was understood that the conferees also eliminated $35,000,000 from the fund for expansion of the Agriculture Department's food plan. The House approved $100,150,000; the Senate $135,000,000.

Other aspects of the expansion plan include:

A recommendation that 125 more beds for indigent patients be added to Gallinger or Freedmen's hospitals, or both combined.

Construction of a Health Department polyclinic in the north central area.

Provision of hospital facilities for Negro private patients.

Introduction of a uniform cost-accounting system by all voluntary—that is, nonprofit making and charity-giving—hospitals.

Reopening of nursing schools to replenish supply of nurses.

Provision of small power plants in hospitals for use in case of interruption of supply.

Roosevelt Talk Bolsters Mediation Board

President Roosevelt's Tuesday night statement that the Nation expects "impartial recommendations" of Government mediation agencies to be followed by both capital and labor was seen yesterday as vesting new authority in the decisions of the National Defense Mediation Board.

Although board sources declined comment beyond general expressions of gratification, observers believed that the board's recommendations, hitherto depending only on public opinion for support, now appeared to be reinforced with official sanction, and that the Government would use all its powers to enforce compliance with whatever findings the mediation agency made public.

Chief among these, it was predicted, would be the taking over, by the Army or Navy, of plants which failed to obey board recommendations for settling disputes, and Federal penalties against striking workers who declined to return to their jobs in accordance with terms recommended by the board.

Although it is not clear what forms these penalties might take, the board has before it the pattern set by President Wilson in the last war when he wrote to employes of the Smith & Wesson arms plant, in Bridgeport, Conn., that if they refused to accept a strike settlement promulgated by the War Labor Board, they would be blacklisted from all other defense jobs for a period of one year.

This drastic measure, however, is not expected to be necessary. Informed sources believe, instead, that the prestige added to the board by the President's address, plus a direct appeal of the President in critical cases, will be sufficient to send workers back to their benches even over the opposition of recalcitrant union leaders.

Nutritionists Adopt Food Defense Program

tribution and the free school lunch plan were among the recommendations which will be sent to President Roosevelt.

Mobilization of all neighborhood, community, State and national organizations and services which can contribute to raise the nutritional level of the Nation also was urged by the conference, which called for a vigorous and continued attack on the problem of unemployment and inadequate rates of pay.

"I don't doubt for a minute," Mrs. Roosevelt said, "that in Germany today attention is being drawn to the fact not that the Bismarck was sunk but that we have acknowledged a great number of undernourished people. I am glad we have the courage to acknowledge it," she said, adding that she hoped "we are going to do something about it."

"There is a big job to be done in every community," Mrs. Roosevelt continued. It would be much more exciting, she said, to learn how to drive an ambulance and to shoot troops which drop out of the sky—which, she added, might have to be learned some day. She stressed the necessity now for the less dramatic job of improving nutrition in the communities.

She referred to a writer's description of troops in the campaigns in Belgium and Northern France, and especially the apparent health, energy and endurance of the German soldiers. He commented on the difference between the English and Germans, she said, and mentioned that he thought many boys of this country would line up with the English, in this respect.

"There isn't any excuse for that comment to be made," she declared.

She said the excuse might be given that "we can't find the wherewithal" to improve the nutrition situation.

"When it became a question of military defense, have you heard anyone say we can't afford it? This should give us courage," she said, for the meeting of future needs and for "non-military things that need to be done now."

"If Great Britain can afford what it is doing . . . the United States can afford to do all things necessary for defense on every front," she added.

Mrs. Roosevelt said "we can be proud" of the fact that out of the depression and the intensity of the problem "we have made a real beginning through Government programs." She mentioned the food stamp plan and the school lunch program.

She spoke of the nutritional lacks discovered in this country during the last war, and pointed out the increase of knowledge along that line in the last 20 years. "We'll be even stupider if we do nothing about it now," she added.

Dr. Parran spoke of potentialities in extension of the food stamp plan.

He said if it should be necessary for this country to conserve certain foods because of the needs of others, the machinery of the food stamp plan "could be put into reserve" for equitable consumption in proportion to need.

All needy children should get the school lunch, and their families must be given opportunity to get adequate milk, Dr. Parran said.

He said that lack of food lost the last war for Germany, and that this country must see that the tables are not turned.

Anglo-American coperation for food in defense may lay the basis for later world policy to meet this elemental human need, Dr. Parran said.

He expressed the hope that President Roosevelt would make the nutrition program the sole responsibility of a competent body for immediate Nation-wide application of knowledge to needs. He spoke of the need of substantial Government aid to meet the demands of the nutrition program.

America Has the Power

Given the national will America has the power to build a race more fit, more vigorous, with better morale and more toughness of body and strength of mind than the world has ever seen, Dr. Parran said.

M. L. Wilson, director of extension work, Department of Agriculture and chairman of the Nutrition Advisory Committee to the Coordinator of Health, Welfare and Related Defense Activities, gave the conference's summary statement, embodying the recommendations to be sent to the President. They were culled from numerous section reports presented yesterday, and will be reworded and edited before formal presentation to the President.

The statement pledged full support to the President in the mobilization of national resources to meet the emergency. Nine hundred persons, including nutritionists, doctors, social workers, representatives of farm, labor, consumer and other "cross section" groups, attended the three-day conference called by the President.

Paul V. McNutt, Federal Security Administrator and chairman of the conference, presided at the closing session at the Mayflower Hotel yesterday.

The recommendations pointed out that the "newer knowledge of nutrition" should be made available not only for the armed forces but for workers in industry and for all civilian population, because modern wars are won or lost by such factors as the health and calmness of whole populations.

The poor diets and undernourishment which are widespread are serious enough to be a genuine cause of weakness in the emergency, the summary pointed out.

The "yardstick" of recommended allowances for daily diet, made public at this conference, was urged as a goal to be translated into everyday life.

Further recommendations of the "lines of attack" on the problem included: More widespread education of doctors, dentists, social workers and teachers in the newer knowledge of nutrition; mobilization of educational methods of schools, motion pictures, radio and the press in the program; efforts to improve food distribution and curb unfair trade practices; encouragement of greater production of milk and milk products, eggs, vegetables, fruits, lean meats; enrichment of certain staple food products such as flour, with the method to be used "with discretion."

700 Groceries Offer to Handle 5-Cent Milk

fare director. "It's what we proposed before the program was started last August.

Agriculture Dept. Said "No"

"But for some reason which I've never learned, the Department of Agriculture decided against it. The 11 dispensing stations, all in District-owned buildings, was the result."

The Surplus Marketing Administration, Department of Agriculture, operates the 5-cent milk program here, as in the five other cities where it is in effect. O. M. Reed, chief of the dairy division, was out of the city yesterday and unavailable for comment.

Isaac Jacobson, president of the District Grocery Stores, and David Hornstein, secretary and general counsel of Independent Food Distributors, made the following proposition:

Holders of milk certification cards, issued by the Board of Public Welfare under rules prescribed by the Surplus Marketing Administration, could buy their milk at any of the 700 stores affiliated with Independent Food Distributors. The store would receive a 1-cent handling fee.

Virtually to Front Door

At present, the dairy delivering the nickel quarts to the 11 stations gets 3 cents for each bottle sold. This payment covers not only pasteurization and delivery but also collection of receipts.

According to Jacobson and Hornstein, the grocery plan of distribution could be effected at no greater cost to the Federal Government, which subsidizes low-cost milk, and probably less. And, as far as the beneficiary is concerned, it would have the tremendous advantage of bringing the product virtually to his front door.

Members of Independent Food Distributors are the District Grocery Stores, United Food Stores, Nation-Wide Service Grocers, Capital Food Stores and Good Will Food Stores. Each of the five is an organization of independent grocers.

As welfare and social workers have continued to point out, slim participation in the 5-cent milk program cannot be attributed to indifference and dismissal.

The 11 dispensing stations necessarily are widely scattered. Some eligibles have to travel 5 miles there and 5 miles back home to get their milk.

Three are open only two hours daily, the remainder four hours. All are closed on Sundays and holidays.

Many of the potential buyers are physically unable to go for their bottles, at least to go the distances required in many instances.

Reopening of this matter of distribution by the Surplus Marketing Administration would appear to be definitely indicated. Meantime, efforts by public and private welfare workers to smoke out the Maryland-Virginia Milk Producers Association, which is obstructing extension of 5-cent milk to all needy families, should not be relaxed.

40 to Compete For Title 'Miss American Legion'

Forty of the District's prettier girls will compete for the title of "Miss American Legion" of the District on the Mount Vernon, of the Wilson Line, on the evening of July 3 under the sponsorship of the District Department of the legion.

The winner of the contest will lead the parade at the annual convention of the District Department to be held here next August.

Each contestant will be selected by one of the 40 posts of the District department. Winners of the preliminary contests held by the posts will be announced in the future.

Officers of Fort Stevens Post No. 32 of the legion is holding a dance at the Indian Spring Country Club Saturday at 8 p. m. to select its entry for the final contest.

Max Bogen is general chairman of the boat ride committee of the District Department. Vice chairman is D. G. Stanley.

Fort Belvoir Selects Given Gas Baptism

A company of fledgling engineers, 250 strong, received their introduction to the deadly gases of warfare today at Fort Belvoir, Va.

Recent selectees, they were members of Company A, Fifth Training Battalion, Engineer Replacement Center, and they went through the routine gas demonstration with the loss of only a few tears. Demonstrations followed a lecture by officers of the Chemical Warfare Service detachment under Capt. Ralph Johnson.

After the lecture, the recruits watched half a dozen of their number, in training masks, go through a smoke screen. Then an enlisted man of the chemical detachment encased himself in rubber clothing and showed how a place must be decontaminated after being subjected to gas attack.

This demonstration was followed by the gas identification tests, in which the selectees rushed into faint clouds of gas, set free by exploding glass containers. They learned by their own noses that Lewisite smells like geraniums and mustard gas has the odor of slightly used garlic.

As a garrison finish to their first experience with gas, the 250 young soldiers were sent through a room filled with tear gas. They wore masks and sat in a cloud of gas to give them confidence in their protective qualities. Then they took off their masks to get a brief whiff of tear gas, to teach them why masks are useful, and stumbled out into the sunlight, blinking and weeping.

Officers explained that the effects of such small doses of the gas were not dangerous and wore off quickly.

All selectees passing through the reception center for basic training, on their way to tactical regiments, will receive the same course in gas instruction.

9 of 10 in NYA Held Suffering Health Defects

Nine out of every ten young persons employed in the National Youth Administration's out-of-school program appear to be suffering from health defects, the Journal of the American Medical Association disclosed yesterday in a preliminary report on medical examinations of NYA workers.

However, most of the defects can be remedied by proper care, according to the report, based on examinations of 10,000 young men and women in 21 States, made as part of a program to build up the physical fitness of youth workers.

The Journal also reported:

One out of every four persons examined reported he had never been to a dentist, and 18 per cent reported they had never been to a physician.

Fifty-six per cent were in need of dental care and 10 per cent had 10 to 30 decayed teeth.

Refraction of the eyes was recommended for 15 per cent.

Another 15 per cent needed tonsil removal.

Special diets were recommended for 10 per cent and minor surgery for 6 per cent.

Recommendations for venereal disease treatment were necessary for only 2 per cent of those examined.

Five per cent were poorly nourished and 3 per cent had organic heart disease.

Apparently approximately 80 per cent are fit for any type of work, with 9 out of every 10 having health defects which can be remedied provided suitable treatment is made available.

Winant Reaches Lisbon on Way Here to Report

Lisbon, Portugal, May 28 (AP).—John G. Winant, United States Ambassador to Britain, arrived here by plane from England this afternoon on his way to Washington to report to President Roosevelt. He will take off for New York aboard a clipper tomorrow.

London, May 28 (AP).—United States Ambassador John G. Winant left England today en route to Washington to see President Roosevelt. He expects to return here within two weeks.

Winant was accompanied by Benjamin Cohen, economic adviser at the United States Embassy. Cohen is expected to remain in the United States for some time longer than Winant before returning to London.

The Ambassador was advised that the plane trip from England might be hazardous because of the number of German planes operating over the sea as a result of the battle in which the Nazi battleship Bismarck was sunk yesterday.

Winant was not deterred by this, contending the urgency of the moment called for an immediate report to the President and Secretary of State Cordell Hull.

D. C. Recreation Hearing on Today

Washington's organized citizenry will be given a chance to be heard on proposals for legislative reform of administration of public recreation at a hearing of the District Recreation subcommittee at 10 a. m. today in the House District Committee room.

Representative John F. Hunter (Democrat), of Ohio, chairman of the subcommittee, yesterday announced he has been advised by Irving C. Root, superintendent of National Capital Parks, that Potomac Post of the American Legion has been readmitted to use of the Pallisades Field House.

The Legion's permit to use the field house was canceled recently.

Mrs. Steadman Gets 15 Years In LoveSlaying

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 28.—A calmly and clearly pronounced plea of guilty to manslaughter by attractive Mrs. Ruth Steadman brought to an abrupt end today her sensational trial for the slaying of her married sweetheart, Robert Emery, 26, whose ring she wore as she rose in the prisoner's cage.

Mrs. Steadman was taken immediately to the Women's Reformatory at Sherborn to begin a 15-year term, half of which must be served before she is eligible for parole.

Spectators who crowded the courtroom hopeful of hearing the blonde, Harvard Business School secretary tell of the last tragic weekend she spent with Emery, heard only the single word—"guilty."

The plea was made after Assistant District Attorney Edward M. Sullivan and Defense Counsel Edward F. Flynn announced an agrement which left the defendant no longer in the shadow of the electric chair, charged with first-degree murder.

The State had charged that Mrs. Steadman strangled Emery, father of two children, after he was stupefied by sleeping tablets. The defense contended he died in a suicide pact after his finances and their love affair became hopeless.

Emery's body was discovered in her apartment January 21, as she herself lay suffering from liquor and drug poisoning.

Evidence was offered to show that a $10,000 insurance policy on Emery's life could not have been collected by his family if he died by his own hand.

Rallying to Mrs. Steadman's defense was her estranged husband, Kenneth, now residing in Pittsburgh with their year-old daughter, and her graying father, Francis Stanwood.

Bill to Create Women's Army Auxiliary Offered

Establishment of a Women's Army Auxiliary to release soldiers for the fighting lines in the time of war was proposed yesterday in a bill introduced by Representative Edith Nourse Rogers (Republican), of Massachusetts.

Mrs. Rogers told the House the legislation was needed to give "intelligent women" a chance to "demonstrate their patriotism" in necessary military tasks to be performed away from possible battle fronts.

The bill proposes establishment of a volunteer corps of women under the Secretary of War. It would be similar to women's "armies" now operating in England, Mrs. Rogers said, and to women's corps organized in this country during the last World War in which she served.

Eddie Bey's Fez, Beard Pose Army Problem

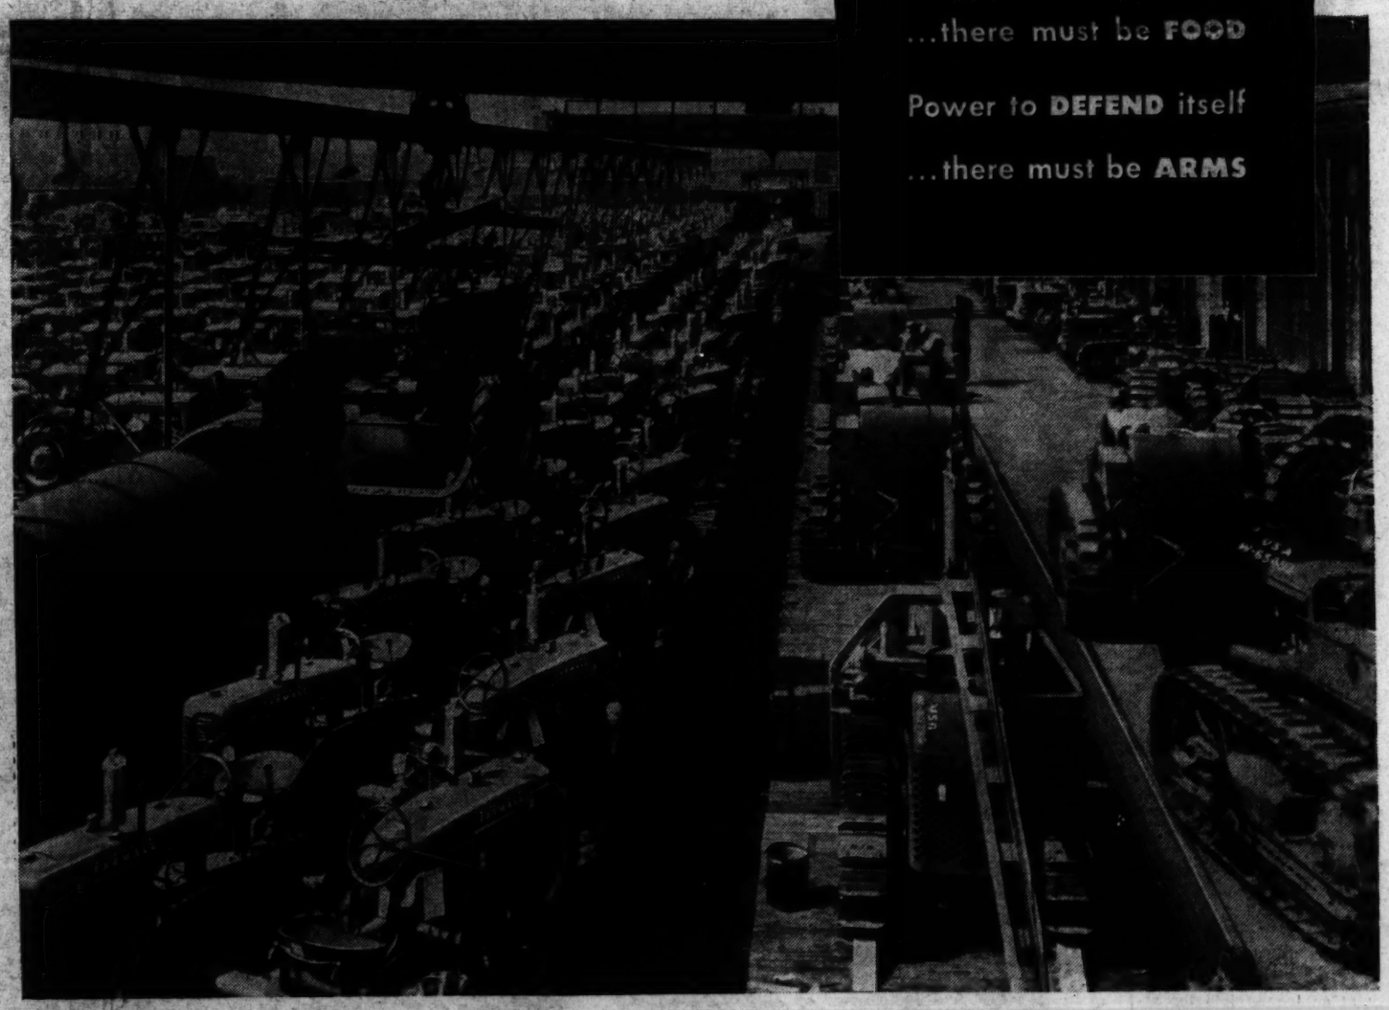

Fort Dix, N. J., May 28 (AP).—Fort Dix officers promised today "every consideration" possible to make Army life confortable for Eddie Stephens Bey, but how Eddie's full black beard and red fez would blend with Army dress regulations was problematical.

Inducted yesterday, Eddie told induction officers he was a "Moorish American" born in Macon, Ga. His religion, he said, would not permit him to shave, dispense with his fez or eat Army food.

He declined to eat the box lunch provided for inductees, dining instead on a sizable food parcel he brought along.

PRODUCTION! for FOOD... for ARMS

Two Things Our Nation Must Have In These Times:
Power to SUSTAIN itself
...there must be FOOD
Power to DEFEND itself
...there must be ARMS
THE PICTURE above symbolizes the double-barreled job to which this Company and the farm equipment industry are dedicating themselves today. Side by side at Tractor Works in Chicago, finished and ready to go, are trainloads of the machines of agriculture and the machines of war.
One train carries sturdy Farmall tractors, outward bound to the family farms of America, bringing new power to the essential job that must not stop, particularly in days of peril—the cultivation of the soil and the production of essential food.
The other train carries husky, Diesel-powered TracTracTors, painted olive-drab and stenciled "U.S.A.", important parts of the new mechanized army. Hauling the big guns or doing other work, these tractors will be on the job wherever the loads are heaviest and the going toughest.
Farm tractor and Army tractor are made in the same factory, by the same skilled employes, from the same raw materials. They're both designed with the same engineering know-how, and held to the same rigid standard of quality. For farms or arms, in harvest field or on the march, these two tractors pull together toward the same imperative goal—the strength and security of the United States.

British Sink French Tanker Escorted by Italian Warship

By the United Press

London, May 28.—More than 100 British warships pressed their search today in the Atlantic for the German cruiser Prinz Eugen, escort of the sunken battleship Bismarck, as the admiralty announced that further heavy blows had been inflicted on the Axis in the Mediterranean.

Attacks by submarine on Axis reinforcements bound for Africa sank a French tanker of 5,000 tons escorted by an Italian warship, probably sank an 18,000-ton liner believed to have 3,000 troops aboard, probably sank a 5,000-ton supply ship and hit a second oil tanker of 4,000 tons, the admiralty said.

An admiralty communique announced, however, that the submarinse usk was overdue and must be considered lost. Janes Fighting Ships does not list a British or other submarine by this name.)

British warships ranging from battleships to torpedoboats, aided by scores of planes, participated in the search for the 10,000-ton Prinz Eugen which slipped away when the 35,000-ton Bismarck was overhauled and sunk yesterday. Silence was an essential part of the search and no details were revealed by the Admiralty.

n the meantime, an Admiralty recapitulation of enemy sea losses since the start of the war stated that up to the middle of May 561 German and Italian ships totaling 2,873,000 tons had been sunk, captured or scuttled. Since the close of this period several additional Axis ships have been sunk, including the Bismarck, the most powerful in the German navy.

1st French Ship British Sunk

The French steamer mentioned in the communique was the first French ship, other than a naval vessel, sunk by the British since the start of the war. It was not known whether the vessel was a French ship which had been captured or by whom she was manned.

The admiralty recapitulation of Axis sea losses gave German losses as 346 ships totaling 1,773,000 tons. Of these, 61 vessels totaling 274,000 tons were reported captured or seized, and 285 ships, aggregating 1,499,000 tons, sunk or scuttled. Italy was said to have lost 215 ships totaling 1,100,000 tons, of which 39 ships of 183,000 tons were captured or seized and 176 of 917,000 tons were sunk or scuttled.

In addition, 38 vessels totaling 67,000 tons, of other countries but sailing on behalf of the Axis, were disposed of.

Nazis' Latin Dealers Linked To 3 U.S. Firms

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, May 28.—The New York Herald Tribune is able to shed light today on the mystery of German profits from the patent medicine trade of the 21 American republics.

Evidence has come to hand that manufacturers in the United States are supplying German dealers south of the Rio Grande with products exactly the same as those made in Germany, in similar boxes under exactly the same labels and trade marks.

On one portion of the trade, estimated at $4,000,000 annually, Germany receives 75 per cent of the profits, but in a larger trade, estimated as high as $20,000,000 a year, the terms of profit-sharing remain unknown.

The problem has puzzled Washington ever since the early days of the war, when American products began turning up under German labels in Latin America despite the British blockade which cut them off from Germany.

This trade not only keeps the German products before the market ready for a resumption of trade after the war, but also supplies Nazi agents in Latin America with funds for propaganda.

To date three companies have been found engaged in the German-label trade in Latin America—the Bayer Co., Inc., of New York; the Schering Corporation, of Bloomfield, N. J., and the Bilhuber-Knoll Corporation of Orange, N. J.

Chief of these is the Bayer Company, Inc., manufacturers of aspirin products. This company has a contract with I. G. Farbenindustrie, the German dye trust, by which 75 per cent of the profits from the sale of aspirin products in Latin America goes to the German trust, whether the products are manufactured in the United States or in Germany. The remaining 25 per cent goes to the Bayer Company in New York.

Until the war, the German company manufactured all or almost all of the aspirin products sold in Latin America. Recently the American company has taken over that trade, selling the same products under the same labels as those used by the German company.

What resulted is shown by two packages bought by Walter Kerr, Herald Tribune correspondent, in Caracas, Venezuela. Both contain "cafiaspirina," a combination of aspirin and caffein, and both are exactly the same except for the manufacturer's name.

In one case the label, translated from the Spanish, reads "Made by I. G. Farbenindustries Aktiengesellschaft, Leverkusen, Germany, for La Quimica Bayer, Weskott & Cia., Caracas."

On the other box the label reads "Made by the Bayer Co., Inc., New York, N. Y., U. S. A., for Farma Pan-Americanan, S. A. Caracas."

Supplied From U. S.

When the German sources of supply were cut off, Bayer in the United States began supplying aspirin products to German dealers in Latin America, and agreements were made governing the use of the Bayer trade mark in that area.

The name of Bilhuber-Knoll was found on two packages in Caracas, one containing "bromural," a sedative, and the other "cardiazol," a heart stimulant. In each case the same product was bought under labels similar in all respects except that the name of the manufacturer was "Knoll A.-G. Ludwigshafen, German."

Questioned in his factory, Dr. E. A. Bilhuber, president of Bilhuber-Knoll and of E. Bilhuber, Inc., said he knew nothing about what happened to his goods after he sold them to shipping agents, but in any case his Latin-American trade was very small.

Dr. Bilhuber, said the idea of imitating the German labels originated with the Latin-American buyer.

Dr. Bilhuber denied that he had any connection with Knoll, of Germany, although he admitted that before the last war he had acted as its agent in the United States. He also admitted that some of his products were made under patents obtained from the German company.

Officials of the Schering Corporation, four of whose hormone products were bought in Caracas under the same trade-mark as used by Schering A. G., of Berlin, told a somewhat different story. Dr. Julius Weltzien, president, said he sold his products, some in bulk and some in packages, to importers in Latin-American countries. Delta Pharmaceutical Co., Inc., a subsidiary, handles the sales.

These importers, called in most cases "Quimica Schering S. A." own the trade-marks they use and pay no royalties to any one. They are owned by "a Swiss company," Dr. Weltzien said, adding that he had made sure of that before trading with them. Until recently these companies were all owned in Germany.

Trucker Absolved In Traffic Death

A 21-year-old truck driver was exonerated by a coroner's jury yesterday at an inquest into the recent traffic death or Max Cohen, 80, of 1424 Ninth Street, Northwest.

The driver, Edgar J. Sampson, colored, 21, of 1723 Willard Street, Northwest, was freed after it was testified Mr. Cohen walked into the side of his truck at Ninth and P Streets Northwest, Monday.

The jury decided the death was accidental.

While Washington roasted, the Weather Bureau reported that the continued absence of rainfall in the Eastern United States has created, at least potentially, a decidedly serious drought situation. Conditions resemble those of the spring of 1930 when one of the worst droughts in the history of the East caused widespread agricultural losses, the bureau said.

In the drought-ridden Washington area, the bureau said, but 1 inch of rain has fallen since May 1, against a normal fall of 3.23 inches for this period. And since December 1, the District has had but 61 per cent of its normal rainfall. Last rain here came Friday and that was a brief thundershower which failed to relieve the dryness.

Previous high temperature this year was 96, last Friday, previous high for May was 96.8, set in 1925, previous high for the date was 93 recorded in 1916.

Officials of three Government agencies reported that employes again will be sent home from their offices this year when heat makes working conditions intolerable.

The companies involved were alleged to operate 196 retail stores here, which sell more than 20,300,000 pounds of bread worth $1,600,000 every year. The defendants were alleged to have conspired to fix the price of bread in Washington at noncompetitive levels.

The unions were alleged to have aided this design by watching the price of bread in local stores, initiating protests at reductions and refusing to deliver bread which was to be sold for less than the price fixed by the defendants.

The investigation was conducted by H. L. Schilz, special assistant to the Attorney General, Warren P. Cunningham, special attorney, and Elmo D. Flynt, economic expert.

Work Due to Start in 2 Weeks On $450,000 Girls' Hotel Here

Bids on the 250-room, $450,000 hotel for single Government girls will be received next week, and work probably will begin on the streamlined "dormitory" within two weeks, Philip M. Julien, architect of the building, announced yesterday. The four-wing hotel should be ready for occupancy in the late fall, he said.

Approval on another 1,000-unit hotel for Government clerks was given last week by President Roosevelt. Other dormitories are contemplated to house the surplus Federal workers who are crowding Washington's housing facilities.

The 250-unit structure will be built on O Street Northwest between Twenty-first and Twenty-second Streets. Ralph S. Scott, who houses over 500 guests in some rehabilitated homes in that neighborhood, and feeds them in a central dining room, will be the manager of the new dormitory.

The Government hotel is a personal triumph, the culmination of 12 years dreaming and planning for Architect Julien, who has made Government housing his life's hobby. Four years ago the designer of the Congressional Country Club, Chastleton Apartments, and other of Washington's better known buildings, took plans he had made of a 1,500-room Government hotel to the RFC officials, who reported them "perfect." But they said, such a building would create a great hue and cry for more, and the Government doesn't want to go into the hotel business. So the project was abandoned until the present housing crisis revived it.

The new hotel will have four wings, each a separate entity. The whole ground floor will be turned over to dining and entertainment space, with a 45 x 60 foot ballroom, where free motion pictures will be shown each week.

Each of the five floors will have a completely equipped laundry. Each room will have a telephone and a wash basin, and there is a full bathroom available to each wing. Already there is a waiting list for accommodations.

The hotel will have maid service, and a house mother will chaperone the guests and advise them on personal problems. Rentals will be $30 a month for room, $50 a month for room and board.

U. S. Aircraft Gains Outlined By Douglas

By Donald W. Douglas
President, Douglas Aircraft Co.

Santa Monica, Calif., May 28.—America's rearmament problem rapidly is taking shape as a human equation in terms of man power.

Creation of an army of production workers to build the backbone of air security is task number one of industry today. Speed is the watchword, for as in all defense production, time is the universal bottleneck.

That the problem is being solved swiftly and efficiently is a tribute to American skill and ingenuity, and is further assurance that free democracy can take in stride whatever obstacle it may confront.

While on January 1, 1940, airplane, engine and propeller manufacturers employed only 63,000 men and women, the aircraft industry today has on its pay rolls nearly 250,000 employes. It is estimated that by the close of this year another 150,000 workers will have joined those now building wings of defense.

With approximately 5,000 new employes being added each week, the eventual employment peak in this industry is something only a seer can foretell.

Payroll Up 5-Fold in 2 Years

Typical expansion is that of our own organization at Douglas Aircraft. Large-scale additions have been completed at two present plants, and two huge new factories are under construction. Where Douglas employment two years ago approximated 6,000, today it totals 28,000, and in the near future will exceed 55,000, with an annual payroll of more than $90,000,000.

How the aircraft industry is doubling and then redoubling its personnel without interrupting the smooth rhythm of accelerating production lines is a story that brings a whole new chapter to the history of industrial training.

Pre-employment aviation training is being stepped up tremendously by trade schools, Colleges and high schools, NYA and CCC, with this industry cooperating closely in the outlining of useful courses and the furnishing of instructors, equipment, sample parts and blueprints.

Considerable material formerly relegated to waste piles by aircraft factories now finds great educational utility. Much scrap dural, instead of being baled for resale to mills, is made available to schools for riveting practice. Scrap steel is furnished to machine shop and bench classes teaching metal-fitting operations. Large test assemblies used for proof-loadings are afterward put to instructive uses.

How Employment Needs Are Met

To bring home to the public this industry's vocational needs and requirements, educational experts are making frequent addresses before interested groups on the various aspects of designing and constructing modern military airplanes.

A close working liaison is maintained with all Federal and State employment services to assure opportunity for interviews to every potentially qualified applicant on their rolls.

As the aircraft industry moves ever closer to the mass-production goal, jobs become more highly specialized, making it possible to hire, place and promote men with a single skill. Since such skills can be acquired through short, intensive courses at qualified institutions, there is made available thereby to airplane manufacturers a vast reservoir of "trainables."

To augment the training contributions of various schools, the aircraft companies themselves are establishing apprentice courses and trainee camps on a large scale.

Within the plants an educational offensive is being waged on every front to increase the training and technical understanding of employes and afford opportunity for advancement through "up-grading." Shop-training courses are maintained, educational talks and motion pictures are provided, home study courses are offered and free aeronautics libraries operated.

All Types Are Needed

All types of production workers are and will continue to be needed in this industry, but principal demand currently for sheet metal fabricators, tool and diemakers and machine operators.

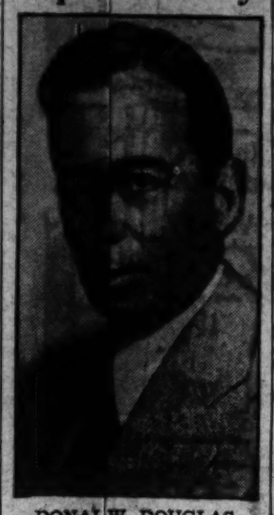

Selective Service has as yet proved no unreasonable handicap to aircraft manufacture, for draft boards, studying each case individually, are judicious in deferring men who cannot be easily replaced and are deemed essential to the Nation as builders of airplanes for the armed services.

What about women in aircraft production? Large numbers of girls already are rendering valuable assistance as clerks, stenographers, typists, nurses and telephone operators, and it is not beyond possibility that in the future they may play additional roles in actual production work.

Skilled engineers and craftsmen and efficient machines are on the job, and to a nation united in love of freedom and loyalty to American ideals, no task will be too great and no achievement impossible. Whatever may lie ahead, America's aircraft industry is ready.

New YorMay 28.—A yarn has been ratti around Manhattan about a gu in a bughouse who found one the inmates industriously whitshing the lawn with a big brush.

The inm noticing the bailiff's baffiement, plained: "I don't have to do this, u know—I've got a lot of money ied right near here."

"The gu waxed interested and inquired it the matter.

"You go out a half-mile straight out from gate," the screwball explained, nd you come to a big old oak tr about 50 feet high. You go 50 pa due west of the oak tree and re's a big rock, and down sbo 9 feet under the rock I've got $50 buried in an oak cask."

And He Iot—Nothing

As soo she could get away, the guard hied out and followed the formula. e found the oak tree, and the rock nd dug down under it, and found nothing. So he went back to the ium and reproached the whitewair for fibbing.

The inmat terrupted his brush work. "Didou do exactly as I told you?" asked. "Did you go a half-mile m the gate to the oak tree, an 0 paces west to the rock, and di down under the rock 10 feet?"

The guard aid he had.

"And you n't find the $50,000?"

"Nope," th guard said.

"O. K.," rned the nut. "Get a brush!"

Not So Scre

All right, it's the story. All the sophisitted souls of New York thought it was very funny, until the oth day officials at the Kings Park ti Hospital out on Long Island osed that inmates suddenly hadtarted going around flashing $20 an 50 gold certificates —those old-fa ned bills.

There was a investiation, and they traced dthe source of the money to a lo odd-job man who had contact ti the inmates and who had bee various times an inmate of the titution.

It turned ot he was getting the bills from a ache of money he had discovred and kept quiet about, in a of abandoned building about a mile away.

Americas Act To Ban War Goods to Axis

By Lloyd Lehrbas
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bulwarking President Roosevelt's unmistakable challenge to the Axis, the 21 American Republics yesterday planned strict control of all exports of war materials as economic defense against Nazi threats to the peace and security of the Western Hemisphere.

Inter-American diplomatic negotiations already under way, it was learned authoritatively, are designed to achieve continental solidarity, in the words of President Roosevelt, "against the common danger" by having each American nation impose export control systems.

Such systems would:

1. Conserve all strategic raw materials and manufactured products required for defense of the hemisphere (and aid to embattled Britain) by placing restrictions on export of war supplies to areas outside this continent.

2. Prohibit re-export of vital materials and goods (except to other American nations) which have been imported from another country, in order to plug any leaks through which Germany, Italy, or Axis-dominated countries might secure supplies.

At least seven South and Central American Republics already have adopted export control systems of varying degrees, and negotiations inspired by the United States now are in progress among other republics.

System Like Ours

Brazil, Colombia and Cuba, it was said, have set up control systems which closely approximate the export control administration here, requiring licenses for the shipment of arms, munitions and a long list of strategic raw materials and manufactured products.

Argentina requires licenses for the report of strategic minerals, and Chile, Guatemala and El Salvador have some form of export control over war materials which are needed by the American nations.

The other American republics are sources of supply for numerous raw materials and minerals required in defense production here and, at the same time, are largely dependent on the United States for many articles needed in their national life.

To encourage the "unity of action" asked for by the President of the United States, it was learned, is prepared to:

1. Buy from the other American republics materials which in the past they exported to European or Asiatic nations, particularly rubber, tin, copper, mercury and a long list of strategic minerals.

2. Grant general licenses for exports to the other American republics of United States materials and supplies, at present strictly rationed and exportable only when individual licenses have been obtained for each shipment.

The United States adopted the export control system not only to conserve scrap metal, aluminum, machine tools and other vitally needed raw materials and products but to prevent their reaching the Axis or Axis satellites.

Removal of restrictions on export of those goods to South and Central American nations, and other proposed liberalization of trade, officials said, necessarily depended on unity of action by the other American republics to insure that the goods would not reach hte Axis countries by roundabout routes.

British Sink French Tanker Escorted by Italian Warship

By the United Press

London, May 28.—More than 100 British warships pressed their search today in the Atlantic for the German cruiser Prinz Eugen, escort of the sunken battleship Bismarck, as the admiralty announced that further heavy blows had been inflicted on the Axis in the Mediterranean.

Attacks by submarine on Axis reinforcements bound for Africa sank a French tanker of 5,000 tons escorted by an Italian warship, probably sank an 18,000-ton liner believed to have 3,000 troops aboard, probably sank a 5,000-ton supply ship and hit a second oil tanker of 4,000 tons, the admiralty said.

An admiralty communique announced, however, that the submarine usk was overdue and must be considered lost. Janes Fighting Ships does not list a British or other submarine by this name.)

British warships ranging from battleships to torpedoboats, aided by scores of planes, participated in the search for the 10,000-ton Prinz Eugen which slipped away when the 35,000-ton Bismarck was overhauled and sunk yesterday. Silence was an essential part of the search and no details were revealed by the Admiralty.

n the meantime, an Admiralty recapitulation of enemy sea losses since the start of the war stated that up to the middle of May 561 German and Italian ships totaling 2,873,000 tons had been sunk, captured or scuttled. Since the close of this period several additional Axis ships have been sunk, including the Bismarck, the most powerful in the German navy.

1st French Ship British Sunk

The French steamer mentioned in the communique was the first French ship, other than a naval vessel, sunk by the British since the start of the war. It was not known whether the vessel was a French ship which had been captured or by whom she was manned.

The admiralty recapitulation of Axis sea losses gave German losses as 346 ships totaling 1,773,000 tons. Of these, 61 vessels totaling 274,000 tons were reported captured or seized, and 285 ships, aggregating 1,499,000 tons, sunk or scuttled. Italy was said to have lost 215 ships totaling 1,100,000 tons, of which 39 ships of 183,000 tons were captured or seized and 176 of 917,000 tons were sunk or scuttled.

In addition, 38 vessels totaling 67,000 tons, of other countries but sailing on behalf of the Axis, were disposed of.

SUNDAY'S POST

Copyright by New York Tribune, Inc.

New York, May 28.—The New York Herald Tribune is able to shed light today on the mystery of German profits from the patent medicine trade of the 21 American republics.

Evidence has come to hand that manufacturers in the United States are supplying German dealers south of the Rio Grande with products exactly the same as those made in Germany, in similar boxes under exactly the same labels and trade marks.

On one portion of the trade, estimated at $4,000,000 annually, Germany receives 75 per cent of the profits, but in a larger trade, estimated as high as $20,000,000 a year, the terms of profit-sharing remain unknown.

The problem has puzzled Washington ever since the early days of the war, when American products began turning up under German labels in Latin America despite the British blockade which cut them off from Germany.

This trade not only keeps the German products before the market ready for a resumption of trade after the war, but also supplies Nazi agents in Latin America with funds for propaganda.

To date three companies have been found engaged in the German-label trade in Latin America—the Bayer Co., Inc., of New York; the Schering Corporation, of Bloomfield, N. J., and the Bilhuber-Knoll Corporation of Orange, N. J.

Chief of these is the Bayer Company, Inc., manufacturers of aspirin products. This company has a contract with I. G. Farbenindustrie, the German dye trust, by which 75 per cent of the profits from the sale of aspirin products in Latin America goes to the German trust, whether the products are manufactured in the United States or in Germany. The remaining 25 per cent goes to the Bayer Company in New York.

Until the war, the German company manufactured all or almost all of the aspirin products sold in Latin America. Recently the American company has taken over that trade, selling the same products under the same labels as those used by the German company.

What resulted is shown by two packages bought by Walter Kerr, Herald Tribune correspondent, in Caracas, Venezuela. Both contain "cafiaspirina," a combination of aspirin and caffein, and both are exactly the same except for the manufacturer's name.

In one case the label, translated from the Spanish, reads "Made by I. G. Farbenindustries Aktiengesellschaft, Leverkusen, Germany, for La Quimica Bayer, Weskott & Cia., Caracas."

On the other box the label reads "Made by the Bayer Co., Inc., New York, N. Y., U. S. A., for Farma Pan-Americanan, S. A. Caracas."

Supplied From U. S.

When the German sources of supply were cut off, Bayer in the United States began supplying aspirin products to German dealers in Latin America, and agreements were made governing the use of the Bayer trade mark in that area.

The name of Bilhuber-Knoll was found on two packages in Caracas, one containing "bromural," a sedative, and the other "cardiazol," a heart stimulant. In each case the same product was bought under labels similar in all respects except that the name of the manufacturer was "Knoll A.-G. Ludwigshafen, German."

Questioned in his factory, Dr. E. A. Bilhuber, president of Bilhuber-Knoll and of E. Bilhuber, Inc., said he knew nothing about what happened to his goods after he sold them to shipping agents, but in any case his Latin-American trade was very small.

Dr. Bilhuber, said the idea of imitating the German labels originated with the Latin-American buyer.

Dr. Bilhuber denied that he had any connection with Knoll, of Germany, although he admitted that before the last war he had acted as its agent in the United States. He also admitted that some of his products were made under patents obtained from the German company.

Officials of the Schering Corporation, four of whose hormone products were bought in Caracas under the same trade-mark as used by Schering A. G., of Berlin, told a somewhat different story. Dr. Julius Weltzien, president, said he sold his products, some in bulk and some in packages, to importers in Latin-American countries. Delta Pharmaceutical Co., Inc., a subsidiary, handles the sales.

These importers, called in most cases "Quimica Schering S. A." own the trade-marks they use and pay no royalties to any one. They are owned by "a Swiss company," Dr. Weltzien said, adding that he had made sure of that before trading with them. Until recently these companies were all owned in Germany.

Trucker Absolved In Traffic Death

While Washington roasted, the Weather Bureau reported that the continued absence of rainfall in the Eastern United States has created, at least potentially, a decidedly serious drought situation. Conditions resemble those of the spring of 1930 when one of the worst droughts in the history of the East caused widespread agricultural losses, the bureau said.

In the drought-ridden Washington area, the bureau said, but 1 inch of rain has fallen since May 1, against a normal fall of 3.23 inches for this period. And since December 1, the District has had but 61 per cent of its normal rainfall. Last rain here came Friday and that was a brief thundershower which failed to relieve the dryness.

Previous high temperature this year was 96, last Friday, previous high for May was 96.8, set in 1925, previous high for the date was 93 recorded in 1916.

Officials of three Government agencies reported that employes again will be sent home from their offices this year when heat makes working conditions intolerable.

Work Due to Start in 2 Weeks On $450,000 Girls' Hotel Here

Bids on the 250-room, $450,000 hotel for single Government girls will be received next week, and work probably will begin on the streamlined "dormitory" within two weeks, Philip M. Julien, architect of the building, announced yesterday. The four-wing hotel should be ready for occupancy in the late fall, he said.

Approval on another 1,000-unit hotel for Government clerks was given last week by President Roosevelt. Other dormitories are contemplated to house the surplus Federal workers who are crowding Washington's housing facilities.

The 250-unit structure will be built on O Street Northwest between Twenty-first and Twenty-second Streets. Ralph S. Scott, who houses over 500 guests in some rehabilitated homes in that neighborhood, and feeds them in a central dining room, will be the manager of the new dormitory.

The Government hotel is a personal triumph, the culmination of 12 years dreaming and planning for Architect Julien, who has made Government housing his life's hobby. Four years ago the designer of the Congressional Country Club, Chastleton Apartments, and other of Washington's better known buildings, took plans he had made of a 1,500-room Government hotel to the RFC officials, who reported them "perfect." But they said, such a building would create a great hue and cry for more, and the Government doesn't want to go into the hotel business. So the project was abandoned until the present housing crisis revived it.

The new hotel will have four wings, each a separate entity. The whole ground floor will be turned over to dining and entertainment space, with a 45 x 60 foot ballroom, where free motion pictures will be shown each week.

Each of the five floors will have a completely equipped laundry. Each room will have a telephone and a wash basin, and there is a full bathroom available to each wing. Already there is a waiting list for accommodations.

The hotel will have maid service, and a house mother will chaperone the guests and advise them on personal problems. Rentals will be $30 a month for room, $50 a month for room and board.

U. S. Aircraft Gains Outlined By Douglas

By Donald W. Douglas
President, Douglas Aircraft Co.

Santa Monica, Calif., May 28.—America's rearmament problem rapidly is taking shape as a human equation in terms of man power.

Creation of an army of production workers to build the backbone of air security is task number one of industry today. Speed is the watchword, for as in all defense production, time is the universal bottleneck.

That the problem is being solved swiftly and efficiently is a tribute to American skill and ingenuity, and is further assurance that free democracy can take in stride whatever obstacle it may confront.

While on January 1, 1940, airplane, engine and propeller manufacturers employed only 63,000 men and women, the aircraft industry today has on its pay rolls nearly 250,000 employes. It is estimated that by the close of this year another 150,000 workers will have joined those now building wings of defense.

With approximately 5,000 new employes being added each week, the eventual employment peak in this industry is something only a seer can foretell.

Payroll Up 5-Fold in 2 Years

Typical expansion is that of our own organization at Douglas Aircraft. Large-scale additions have been completed at two present plants, and two huge new factories are under construction. Where Douglas employment two years ago approximated 6,000, today it totals 28,000, and in the near future will exceed 55,000, with an annual payroll of more than $90,000,000.

How the aircraft industry is doubling and then redoubling its personnel without interrupting the smooth rhythm of accelerating production lines is a story that brings a whole new chapter to the history of industrial training.

Pre-employment aviation training is being stepped up tremendously by trade schools, Colleges and high schools, NYA and CCC, with this industry cooperating closely in the outlining of useful courses and the furnishing of instructors, equipment, sample parts and blueprints.

Considerable material formerly relegated to waste piles by aircraft factories now finds great educational utility. Much scrap dural, instead of being baled for resale to mills, is made available to schools for riveting practice. Scrap steel is furnished to machine shop and bench classes teaching metal-fitting operations. Large test assemblies used for proof-loadings are afterward put to instructive uses.

How Employment Needs Are Met

To bring home to the public this industry's vocational needs and requirements, educational experts are making frequent addresses before interested groups on the various aspects of designing and constructing modern military airplanes.

A close working liaison is maintained with all Federal and State employment services to assure opportunity for interviews to every potenally qualified applicant on their rolls.

As the aircraft industry moves ever closer to the mass-production goal, jobs become more highly specialized, making it possible to hire, place and promote men with a single skill. Since such skills can be acquired through short, intensive courses at qualified institutions, there is made available thereby to airplane manufacturers a vast reservoir of "trainables."

To augment the tranling contributions of various schools, the aircraft companies themselves are establishing apprentice courses and trainee camps on a large scale.

Within the plants an educational offensive is being waged on every front to increase the training and technical understanding of employes and afford opportunity for advancement through "up-grading." Shop-training courses are maintained, educational talks and motion pictures are provided, home study courses are offered and free aeronautics libraries operated.

All Types Are Needed

All types of production workers are and will continue to be needed in this industry, but principal demand currently for sheet metal fabricators, tool and diemakers and machine operators.

Selective Service has as yet proved no unreasonable handicap to aircraft manufacture, for draft boards, studying each case individually, are judicious in deferring men who cannot be easily replaced and are deemed essential to the Nation as builders of airplanes for the armed services.

What about women in aircraft production? Large numbers of girls already are rendering valuable assistance as clerks, stenographers, typists, nurses and telephone operators, and it is not beyond possibility that in the future they may play additional roles in actual production work.

Skilled engineers and craftsmen and efficient machines are on the job, and to a nation united in love of freedom and loyalty to American ideals, no task will be too great and no achievement impossible. Whatever may lie ahead, America's aircraft industry is ready.

Bughouse Joke About Buried Cash Backfires

By Gladwin Hill.
By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—A yarn has been rattling around Manhattan about a guard in a bughouse who found one of the inmates industriously whitewashing the lawn with a big brush.

The inmate, noticing the bailiff's bafflement, explained: "I don't have to do this, you know—I've got a lot of money buried right near here."

"The guard waxed interested and inquired into the matter.

"You go about a half-mile straight out from the gate," the screwball explained, "and you come to a big old oak tree about 50 feet high. You go 50 paces due west of the oak tree and there's a big rock, and down about 10 feet under the rock I've got $50,000 buried in an oak cask."

And He Found—Nothing

As soon as he could get away, the guard hurried out and followed the formula. He found the oak tree, and the rock, and dug down under it, and found—nothing. So he went back to the asylum and reproached the whitewasher for fibbing.

The inmate interrupted his brush work. "Did you do exactly as I told you?" he asked. "Did you go a half-mile from the gate to the oak tree, and 50 paces west to the rock, and dig down under the rock 10 feet?"

The guard said he had.

"And you didn't find the $50,000?"

"Nope," the guard said.

"O. K.," rejoined the nut. "Get a brush!"

Not So Screwy

All right, that's the story. All the sophisticated souls of New York thought it was very funny, until the other day officials at the Kings Park State Hospital out on Long Island disclosed that inmates suddenly had started going around flashing $20 and $50 gold certificates—those old-fashioned bills.

There was an investiation, and they traced down the source of the money to a local odd-job man who had contact with the inmates and who had been at various times an inmate of the institution.

It turned out he was getting the bills from a big cache of money he had discovered, and kept quiet about, in an old abandoned building about a half-mile away.

That's the screwiest news today. Get a brush.

Americas Act To Ban War Goods to Axis

By Lloyd Lehrbas
Associated Press Staff Writer

Bulwarking President Roosevelt's unmistakable challenge to the Axis, the 21 American Republics yesterday planned strict control of all exports of war materials as economic defense against Nazi threats to the peace and security of the Western Hemisphere.

Inter-American diplomatic negotiations already under way, it was learned authoritatively, are designed to achieve continental solidarity, in the words of President Roosevelt, "against the common danger" by having each American nation impose export control systems.

Such systems would:

1. Conserve all strategic raw materials and manufactured products required for defense of the hemisphere (and aid to embattled Britain) by placing restrictions on export of war supplies to areas outside this continent.

2. Prohibit re-export of vital materials and goods (except to other American nations) which have been imported from another country, in order to plug any leaks through which Germany, Italy, or Axis-dominated countries might secure supplies.

At least seven South and Central American Republics already have adopted export control systems of varying degrees, and negotiations inspired by the United States now are in progress among other republics.

System Like Ours

Brazil, Colombia and Cuba, it was said, have set up control systems which closely approximate the export control administration here, requiring licenses for the shipment of arms, munitions and a long list of strategic raw materials and manufactured products.

Argentina requires licenses for the report of strategic minerals, and Chile, Guatemala and El Salvador have some form of export control over war materials which are needed by the American nations.

The other American republics are sources of supply for numerous raw materials and minerals required in defense production here and, at the same time, are largely dependent on the United States for many articles needed in their national life.

To encourage the "unity of action" asked for by the President of the United States, it was learned, is prepared to:

1. Buy from the other American republics materials which in the past they exported to European or Asiatic nations, particularly rubber, tin, copper, mercury and a long list of strategic minerals.

2. Grant general licenses for exports to the other American republics of United States materials and supplies, at present strictly rationed and exportable only when individual licenses have been obtained for each shipment.

The United States adopted the export control system not only to conserve scrap metal, aluminum, machine tools and other vitally needed raw materials and products but to prevent their reaching the Axis or Axis satellites.

Removal of restrictions on export of those goods to South and Central American nations, and other proposed liberalization of trade, officials said, necessarily depended on unity of action by the other American republics to insure that the goods would not reach hte Axis countries by roundabout routes.

Five Police Forces

There is an excellent historic precedent for Representative Bolles' effort to consolidate Washington's five police forces in this critical period. The first move toward consolidation of the District's separate municipal areas came in 1861. The perils of the Civil War and the increased emphasis which it placed on law enforcement in the Capital induced Congress to create a metropolitan police district. The act set up a joint police board representing the "corporations of Washington and Georgetown and the county of Washington" outside the limits of those two "cities." The success of this move helped to prepare the way for the so-called territorial government in 1871.

But Washington's police are still inexcusably divided 80 years after this first consolidation took place. Recognition of that fact by the House District Appropriations Subcommittee is unquestionably a sign of progress. For many years The Post has been suggesting that all the men assigned to routine policing duties be brought together in one organization. It is patently absurd to keep up the division of inadequate forces by allowing the Park Police to remain under control of the Interior Department. Of course, the specialized White House and Capitol Police as well as Federal building guards should remain under Federal control. But even in these cases the routine police functions which some of them perform should be quickly transferred to the Metropolitan Police. If Congress can be induced to take that constructive step, it may even consider some other improvements in the makeshift government now serving the Nation's Capital.

Excess Profits

Interest in the new tax program has lately been focused on modifications of the excess profits tax system which would involve acceptance of an entirely new approach. The problem is extremely complicated, but, just the same, it is extremely important. It may be well, therefore, to think of it first of all as a problem in tax method. Under the existing system a corporation may claim exemption from excess profits taxation on earnings up to 95 per cent of its average earnings over the period 1936-39 or, alternatively, claim a credit of 8 per cent of its invested capital. The Treasury wants to substitute for this dual system a single exemption based on the average rate of return earned during the same four-year period. All earnings in excess of this average rate, however low, would be treated as taxable excess profits, but in no case would an exemption in excess of 10 per cent of invested capital be permitted.

While this sounds rather involved, it has two fairly obvious aims: (1) to get at the defense profits of companies which had low rates of earnings in the base period, but have succeeded in escaping excess profits taxation by claiming credits equal to 8 per cent of invested capital; and (2) to reach companies with very high rates of return on invested capital now able to claim exemptions up to 95 per cent of earnings, even though their profits may amount to 50 per cent or more of invested capital. Thus the aim is to do more than get at excess profits. Assistant Secretary of the Treasury Sullivan admitted as much in the committee hearing. The new plan would tax profits above a necessary normal return on capital regardless of whether they had been increased by the defense program. Even if profits in the base period were far below a normal rate of return, any increases above that level would be taxable. This may appear to be a method of getting business "going and coming." Yet it is undoubtedly true that the present system permits escape from excess profits taxation of some concerns that have benefited enormously from defense contracts and deals lightly with others that have exceptionally high rates of return from invested capital.

Mr. Sullivan made out a strong case for a change from this system by citing specific examples of such inequities. His recommendations, accordingly, should at least be studied in the light of past experience and future revenue needs, and not be dismissed merely because they set up a new, distorted definition of excess profits. His further proposal to graduate excess profits taxes in accordance with the rate of return on invested capital is unqualifiedly better than the present method of graduating taxes in accordance with the absolute amounts of earnings, since this latter method puts a penalty on mere size.

No More Strikes

President Roosevelt's proclamation of a national emergency should bring to an abrupt end all delays in defense production resulting from labor disputes. He has placed every loyal citizen under obligation to aid the defense of his country. Heretofore, failure of management and labor to cooperate with the Government in the production of war materials has been considered an unfortunate exercise of personal rights. Hereafter such failure must be regarded as disloyalty. In the face of this national emergency the Nation's requirements must be given precedence over the aims of individuals or groups.

In demanding the cooperation of every citizen the President used strong language. The production and transportation of defense supplies, he said, "must not be interrupted by disputes between capital and capital, labor and labor, or capital and labor." Where controversies arise, he added, the machinery of conciliation and mediation "must be used promptly — and without stoppage of work." And he left no doubt, and repeated himself at his press conference yesterday, that the powers of the Government will be used to prevent interference with the defense program by any minority group refusing to do its part.

The psychological effect of the emergency proclamation should thus be salutary and widespread. Too many factions have refused to take seriously the crisis which was fast approaching for the United States. Now the urgency of defense production can no longer be questioned. Full steam ahead is the order of the day. That order applies to the carpenter helping to build a munitions plant and the mechanic assembling an airplane as well as to the executives of huge defense factories. In an unlimited emergency any refusal to cooperate is unthinkable.

The President went as far as he could toward demanding a cessation of strikes in defense factories. Undoubtedly the great majority of American employers and workers will heed his appeal. In this perilous hour, however, even more positive safeguards are essential, and the President, speaking to his press conference, seems to have envisaged them, if necessity arises. But Congress, as well as the Executive, should lay upon employers and labor the obligation of adjusting all disputes without stoppage of work, and should do so without delay. That is where the Vinson bill comes in. Yesterday Mr. Vinson announced that he will strip his bill of every provision except the one forbidding strikes or changes in working conditions until every means of effecting a settlement has been employed. Strikes would be made illegal, moreover, until after the National Defense Mediation Board could make a detailed report on the dispute, including recommendations. The bill still contains a penalty clause which should be eliminated. With that adjustment it would notably strengthen the obligation which the President has laid upon employers and their employes. It is time for Congress to follow up the excellent lead which the President has given in this sphere.

A Voice Is Heard

It is estimated that more than 85,000,000 people were in the immediate radio audience which listened to President Roosevelt's address of Tuesday night. Whether this figure is an exaggeration or not, there is no way of knowing. It is clear, however, that no speech in years had been awaited with such intense interest by so many people.

In this respect the international situation has undergone a very marked change since 1938 and 1939. In those days it was Hitler's speeches which commanded the greatest attention. With the world teetering, as it was then, on the edge of war, the Fuehrer's remarks were awaited with a view to discovering what plans and stratagems were maturing in his dark mind, what new act of brigandage he was preparing to spring on a helpless world. And after they were made, they were subjected to minute analysis to find out what was said and what was left unsaid. But Hitler's speeches attract little attention now. The German blueprint of world conquest is too well known to need further elucidation by the Fuehrer, and so is his technique of muddying the waters. The world is not interested in what he says because it knows that what he says may have little if any relation to what he plans to do.

But the world now recognizes the significance of any far-reaching action the United States may take. For with our wealth, our industrial capacity, our scientific skill, we hold the balance of power in the world. That is why everybody waited breathlessly for the President to speak, and, in speaking, to expose the views and the program of the American Government. They listened to him throughout the length and breadth of the land. They listened to him, moreover, by the rebroadcasting device in far-off Australia, where it was noon of the next day. They listened to him in London and other British centers, where, at the hour he spoke, it was before dawn. And then his speech was translated in a score of tongues, and sent out to the world, to the captive countries where it will stir hopes of ultimate freedom, to aggressor nations whose dream of conquest his words will rudely disturb. Time was spanned as well as space. For the President's words will ring down the corridors of time as a trumpet call summoning the hosts of freedom to new endeavor against the minions of savagery and darkness.

Epic Of The Sea

It is easier, as a rule, to find a needle in a haystack than to track down a ship in the endless reaches of the sea. For that reason the hunt of the Bismarck which ended Tuesday morning with the destruction of that battleship, the newest, largest and finest of the German fleet, will go down in the history of naval warfare as an epic performance.

For this reason the story is worth piecing together. The Bismarck and its escort, the Prinz Eugen, were spotted in Bergen harbor, Norway, last week by reconnaissance planes of the coastal command of the R. A. F. When the two warships headed out to sea Friday, the British fleet was ready for battle. The British cruisers Norfolk and Suffolk went out to intercept them. They were followed by the Hood and the Prince of Wales, sister ship of the King George V. In the fighting that took place Saturday, an unlucky hit in the powder magazine of the Hood sent that leviathan to the bottom. The Prince of Wales was also hit but not sufficiently to put her out of action. At the same time the Bismarck did not come out of the encounter unscathed. In fact, the damage done to her by shellfire from the Prince of Wales made it impossible for her to move at top speed in her effort to elude her pursuers.

Only temporarily did she succeed in doing so. The Prince of Wales caught up with the German battleship Saturday night. A new British aircraft carrier, Victorious, joined the hunt and an aerial torpedo from one of the carrier's planes inflicted new damage on the Bismarck. In the meantime, the net around that ship was growing tighter. One squadron of British warships began to move north from the western Mediterranean. Another moved south from Scapa Flow. Two battleships, the Rodney and the Ramilles, left convoys which they were escorting and hurried to intercept the enemy. Bombers of the Royal Canadian Air Force scoured the seas off the North American coast. Yet when contact was lost between the German battleship and the pursuing British warships early Sunday morning, the Bismarck's prospects of making safe haven brightened perceptibly.

Indeed, almost a full day elapsed before the German battleship was again sighted, this time by an American-built Consolidated four-engined bombing plane belonging to the coastal command. Though hit by shells from the Bismarck, the plane was able to escape and notify the British fleet of the Bismarck's position. The Ark Royal, which the Germans have repeatedly claimed to have sunk, was nearby. Planes from that carrier sighted the German ship, and from then on contact with her was never lost. The decisive moment arrived when aerial torpedoes from the Ark Royal hit the Bismarck amidships. Shells from British warships and torpedoes from British destroyers finished the job. On Tuesday morning the Bismarck was sent to the bottom, three days after the destruction of the Hood.

The destruction of the Bismarck was a demonstration of how materially air power has modified naval warfare. But it was equally a demonstration of brilliant coordination between the British fleet, its air arm and the planes of the coastal command. In giving themselves over to unrestrained jubilation when the news of the sinking of the Bismarck reached them, the British people were not merely manifesting their satisfaction over the retribution which had befallen the Hood's conqueror. They were also showing their delight over the fact that the British fleet had lost none of its ancient skill and gallantry.

THE ENGLISH BOY

I kiss these ashes of my home,
I embrace the room,
still and grey in my fingers.
I look into the burning tomb and the voice of my mother lingers
there, sweet and clear.
I am tutored by the harsh teacher of flame and all I hold dear
I must in these ashes name.

I point to the scattered stone;
I pray amidst this frightening din;
I say this is what I own,
from these things I begin.
I am the pupil of the dangerous night,
I am the child of the wicked harvesting.
I kiss these ashes of the fight;
I am the subject of My King!

United Front

An aroused people have now awakened to the grim reality that this Nation is faced with a grave national emergency, an exigency of such serious proportions that we are forced to arm to survive in a world of aggression. Unquestionably, a vast majority of the American people have confidence in the patriotism and wisdom of our great President, Franklin D. Roosevelt. It is his destiny to guide this Nation safely through the most critical period of our national existence. None of his predecessors, not even the immortal Lincoln, encountered difficulties of equal magnitude or was called upon to assume such vast responsibilities.

President Roosevelt's sole reliance is on the patriotism and resolution of a united people determined that liberty and representative government shall not be destroyed. All history proves the indisputable truth that unless sustained by a military despotism, no man ever molded the destiny of any nation without the support of public opinion.

With a full realization of the gravity of the world situation and conscious of the ominous threat to our own security, the urgent necessity of our presenting a united front to the aggressor nations cannot be overestimated.

It is the patriotic duty of every American to support the President in this hour of peril and not weaken him before the world by facetious opposition. Assuredly, the seriousness of the situation transcends all personal and political aspirations.

The U. S. And Vichy

Twice lately I have read in The Post that President Roosevelt had "rebuked" France or the Vichy government, and still later it is reported that Secretary Hull "reprimanded" the French Ambassador. The meaning of these words may possibly be stretched to cover the cases in point, but their use seems to me to betray an arrogance which will do nothing to improve our relations with France or any nation. Such things are not lost on the Latin-American peoples. E. G.

Race Against Time

To the writer it is not inconceivable that France, having been betrayed, knocked down, kicked in the face, and had her eyes gouged out by traitors within, should have disintegrated. But it is inconceivable that we in this country should continue to invite a like fate.

It is inconceivable that, although with fervid eloquence we are being told "time is of the essence," many defense establishments in vital industries should limp along on work schedules of 40 hours a week and that many of our shipyards should be dark and silent more hours than they are in action. It is inconceivable that, while producers of defense equipment were crying out for steel, one willful labor dictator could have closed the coal mines, thus so cutting the fuel life line of the steel industry that one-tenth of all its blast furnaces went cold. It is inconceivable that, in these crucial days, the gangster tactics of brutal coercion and extortion in labor relations should be permitted to stop and defeat orderly democratic processes, and that the thoroughly ignorant or dishonest attempts to belittle the seriousness of strikes in defense industries should go practically unchallenged.

It is inconceivable that our office-holding public servants should now continue to play politics on the brink of disaster, that taxpayers should continue to support New Deal "emergency" agencies which have long outlived their usefulness, except as political machines, that the American people should take seriously the pleas for "unity" which have become established technique for the promotion of divisive policies, or that the cherished principles of our Government and our "way of life" should be subjected to further pressure in order to assure the political preservation of the New Deal. It is inconceivable that we should have so far lost our sense of common honesty and integrity and so scuttled our "guts" in the Atlantic Ocean that we now find it necessary to go around the Cape of Good Hope in order to rediscover the freedom of the seas.

If this Nation is now engaged in a race against time, there is abundant evidence that among us are some persons or groups who are doing all they can to throw the race.

Plea For France

There has been for about a year in America among patriotic and respected people a growing anti-French feeling, promoted by the unwise foreign policy of the United States. When we French residents of America, still loyal to our country right or wrong (as we expect true Americans to be under the circumstances), endeavor to present (not to defend) the case for France, we become suspected and, in many cases, the victims of slanderous brandings.

Why should well-fed and secure people hand a blow below the waist to a prostrate France? Our nation is trying to survive, while she is held in the vise of the victor.

Do not condemn France. Our history does not end or start on June 24, 1940. In spite of our frightful mistakes in the last 20 years of the republic, we have given enough to the world in artistic, intellectual and religious realms to expect a "moral" loyalty from our friends. There will always be a France so long as we have the Cathedral of Chartres, the jeweled Sainte Chapelle, Montaigne, Descartes, La Marne and Verdun.

This transcends our failings. There are millions of people in France for whom the words blood, sweat, tears and hunger are realities. We do not wish to be pitied; we are guilty, but so are England and America. We don't want emotional sympathy, we want your silence around our misery, and if we are bearing our cross the people of England and America should not make it heavier by injustice, criticism and sarcasm.

Hornet's Nest For Mr. Pegler

Mr. Westbrook Pegler's recent diatribe on "France for the French" is so unjust to a fine and courageous people, who are passing through an hour of trial and humiliation such as we ourselves are headed for if we do not soon wake up to the realities of our situation, that Americans who know France and the French can only read it with disgust and indignation.

Of the last 30 years I have spent more than ten in France; I have had my home in Paris; I know the provincial cities, the villages, and the countryside. I know the French for a hard-working, generous, and kindly people, worthy of admiration, respect and affection. My wife and I have been in their homes; we have experienced their hospitality, and we know the sincere quality of it, as we know the fine character of their family life.

Their intellectual and artistic culture is a focal point of western civilization, and we are immeasurably in their debt for the contributions that they have made to our own culture, and for the complete generosity with which they have made their intellectual and artistic resources available to us.

Mr. Pegler insults the intelligence of his readers in characterizing the French as he does, and lowers himself to the level of those Italian commentators whom he professes to detest, who describe the Americans as a nation of gangsters.

WALDO G. LELAND.
Washington, May 26.

I am an American citizen of French birth, and my love for both of these countries is equally strong. I only wish I were strong enough to hold tight with my hands that precious bond that has always existed between the country of my birth and the country of my adoption.

I highly protest Mr. Pegler's article. When he attacks the morality of the French people, I think he is going too far. I know that everything has not been perfect in France. She was beaten this time, we know, and the cause was because the people loved peace too much, asking nothing else but the right to live in their work and happiness. They hated war so much that they did not believe that some day they would have to fight again. They were not prepared to meet such a monstrous, brutal force—and that alone.

I would like to say directly to Mr. Pegler: Do not be so severe in your criticism of those people whom you know are reduced to the misery of a slave life under the tyrannic will of a conqueror. Can you realize what it is to be hungry, so hungry that you feel the ground giving away under your feet? So cold that you feel yourself ready for the sleep of eternity? And all this with the tiny hands of your loved ones raised in vain to you for a morsel of bread? No, and I hope you will never know, but do not condemn so easily those feeble, bleeding, beaten people.

Have you forgotten also that once that faraway country was like ours? I mean a lovely place where people were living happily in a land of plenty and where you would always find many doors open to the more unfortunate ones? This was the heart of France of yesterday and it will be the same tomorrow.

I forgive you for the ignorance with which you attack the women of France because I can see that you have never met the real "femme de France." If you had, you would know that "these females," as you call them, have a mighty sense of the honorable and generous deed, and so much pride for their family that they are always ready to do their duty. They are just like the mother you love.

Your remark about the Frenchmen being stingy is absurd and untrue. When you say, "I hereby offer a prize of a quart of the best Scotch in town to any American who can present an authenticated case in which any Frenchman has ever bought a round of drinks or a meal for anyone but himself," well, here again you are wrong. The Frenchman always shares his drinks with his friends, and if it is within his means he invites them for a hearty meal.

I hope with all my heart that America will always live in the sweetness of peace, with her magnificent youth happy under a clear sky. And I pray that all the oppressed will be free again, and that France will loose her infamous chains and rise again with the spirit of the old "Gaule," which spirit is now in the hands of him who bears the same name.

A last admonition, Mr. Pegler! Look closely around the world, and if you can find one, only one, country where everything is perfect, no defects, no guilt, then I will allow you to throw the stone at the broken, fallen people of France. JEANNE M.

The Post Impressionist

City Of Good Air

The recent flurry of interest in Latin America these past few years, with the sudden realization that there is a great culture "South of the Border," is viewed with sympathetic amusement by one who experienced this same interest and realization more than 35 years ago and tried to tell the story then, only to be rebuffed by stony indifference, if not incredulity. But a lifetime of roving in most parts of the world, and memories that go back to the middle of the gay 90's, have taught me that everything is relative and temporary. I remember when these United States, in the pre-Spanish War era, were as unknown in Europe as Latin America was little known here 10 or 12 years ago. And now the chief of staff and admirals of the Latin-American republics are brought here as guests of this Government, and feted and flattered. But, I remember, I remember . . .

For me it all started in January of 1906, when the greatest of American travel-lecturers (who is still alive and still lecturing) gave a series of Sunday evening lectures, illustrated by colored slides, and occasionally by a few feet of shaky "Biograph" moving pictures. My mother and I attended the course, driving from our home in the upper west side of New York City to the lecture hall in one of the quaint electric broughams of the period. Most of Europe we already knew well, having spent more of our lives there then here, but Latin America was terra incognita. And when the incredible pictures on the screen and the suave voice of the lecturer disclosed and described Buenos Aires, second only to Paris among Latin capitals, we could hardly believe our eyes and our ears. I felt that I had to see it!

There were no passport formalities in those halcyon days; you simply boarded a steamer and went. And that's exactly what I did.

Three week later I got my first astounding glimpse of the City of Salubrity, for Buenos Aires means literally "Good Atmosphere." I've seen it many times since, and watched it grow, and with each visit I like it more. I wish I could live there; perhaps, some day, I shall.

In 1906 it was not so big—about a million inhabitants—and was emerging from the "provincial-capital" stage, on its way to become, in my opinion, the finest city of the Americas. But in that year there were still wooden sidewalks to be found in some of the side streets, and there was only one first-class hotel, judged by the standards of Europe and North America. What a contrast today, with hotels unexcelled anywhere, and miles of avenues, boulevards and streets, perfectly paved, maintained and cleaned in a city of 2,500,000.

Driving away from the dock that first time in an ancient hack, I heard military band music, and gasped with surprise at the sight of German troops marching through the streets. I learned why afterwards: The excellent conscript army was German-trained and equipped; the navy, however, was British-trained. The inhabitants of the city called themselves "Porten(y)os," i. e., "people of the port," for it was and is the greatest port of entry south of New York City. They had already begun to build a docking system, which developed into the finest I have seen in my travels. With the true Latin love of civic beauty, these docks are camouflaged by parkways, so that you can be near them, and not know it.

In those days, the average racecourse here in the North consisted of wooden grandstands, stables and hot-dog stalls. The luxurious racecourse in Buenos Aires, already built then, has served as the model for the splendid tracks that have been built in the U. S. A. in recent years. But there still isn't an opera house in a North American city as fine as the Teatro Colon, which is more than 30 years old. Already conscious of the growing importance of this city, the Portenos spent lavishly and built grandly. For the celebration of the first centenary of Argentine independence, in 1910, they condemned whole blocks of buildings, and cut the straight, broad Avenida de Mayo, connecting the Presidential Palace with the Capitol. For the last 40 years, or more, there has been intense rivalry between Buenos Aires and Rio de Janeiro, and whatever each city accomplishes in civic betterment the other tries to improve upon. The results are good—for both towns!

The Portenos are mostly of Spanish and Italian descent, with other bloodstreams, of course, but they take their social cue from neither Madrid nor Rome, but from Paris, the spiritual mother city of all good Latins, which they try to emulate in many ways, patent to the trained observer. Due to their mixed descent, with both Spanish and Italian spoken in thousands of families, they are in process of creating a new language, which some day will be called Argentine, I suppose. It still looks like Spanish on the printed page, but the spoken language shows traces of Italian influence to such an extent that a Spaniard has difficulty in understanding it.

Portenos of American and British descent are numerous, including at least one traffic cop stationed in the famous Calle Florida, whose parents came from Kansas—incidentally he spoke no English. The mutations of British-American family surnames after several generations in Buenos Aires are such as to make some of them almost unrecognizable.

Buenos Aires is gay, lively, sophisticated and "open all night." In good weather the sidewalk cafes of the Avenida de Mayo are as crowded at 3 a. m. as at 3 in the afternoon. This avenida bears comparison with the best boulevards in Paris—before the Nazis got there.

I could manage only a fortnight, that first visit in 1906, and then returned to New York City to try to convince my friends what a glittering capital existed to the south of us. I brought picture post-cards and snapshots back with me, and I talked to anyone who would listen, but watching the half-veiled skepticism in their eyes, and the polite indifference which greeted my enthusiastic descriptions, I knew how Marco Polo must have felt when he tried to describe Peking to the doubting Venetians.

In 1906 this Government never thought of entertaining chiefs of staff and admirals from south of the border. P. F. J. ENATS.

Today And Tomorrow

By Walter Lippmann

There Is No Other Course

LIPPMANN

IN THE FIVE days preceding the President's address the Nazi high command itself provided the overwhelming proof that the American policy, now clearly and irrevocably declared, is the only sound policy open to this country. The President announced, in an address which will rank in history with the Declaration of the Monroe Doctrine that the Western Hemisphere is to be defended by measures which will prevent an attack before an attack can be organized and launched from the shores of Europe and Africa. The story of the Bismarck should remove the last lingering doubt in any thoughtful mind that there is in fact no reasonable alternative and that the American policy is dictated by necessity.

ON THURSDAY of last week the Bismarck was at Bergen in Norway, and before she was finally caught and sunk she made a run of 1,750 miles on a course which took her last Sunday morning well into the Western Hemisphere and about as near to Newfoundland as Newfoundland is to Boston. Yet all of that time she was being hunted by the most powerful navy in the Atlantic Ocean. The hunt was conducted by a navy based on the British Isles and, therefore, able by means of scouting planes to observe the departure of the Bismarck from the Norwegian port. Yet the Nazi ship ran past the great British naval base at Scapa Flow in northern Scotland, past the Shetland and Faroe Islands, past British-occupied Iceland, before she was finally brought down south of Ireland.

Imagine our position in defending the Western Hemisphere if all Europe, including the British Isles, and of Africa as well, were as available to Hitler as is Norway. Imagine our position if it were impossible for our scouting planes to get near enough to Europe to know whether a Nazi fleet was assembling at Bergen in Norway or at an Irish port or at Lisbon or at Gibraltar or at Dakar. The British, because they have flying bases, knew about the Bismarck as soon as she sailed. We should have no means of knowing where the Axis fleet was. Our commanders would be like blindfolded men trying to catch a bandit in an open field. Imagine our position, furthermore, with the British navy sunk or captured, when we tried to repel an attack which we could not foresee, launched from any one of 50 good harbors against the 15,000-mile sea frontier of the Western Hemisphere. With a powerful navy, with nearby bases for scouts, in the narrow waters of Scotland, Iceland and Greenland, it nevertheless took the British five days of concentrated pursuit to find the Bismarck and run her down. Imagine our position if, with no British navy in existence, no advance base in Europe, the whole vast Atlantic to patrol, we had to stand blindly on the defensive.

IF MEASURES, any measures necessary, to prevent this happening are not measures for the defense of the Western Hemisphere, then the word defense has no meaning. In recognizing this fact the President has done his plain and inescapable duty in the defense of the United States and of the Western Hemisphere, which the United States are bound by their vital interests and their solemn pledges to defend. Had he failed to take the position he has taken, he would by his inaction have made it impossible to defend a very large part of the Western Hemisphere and immensely difficult and dangerous to defend any of it. A commander-in-chief who willfully let his country be put in such a position would have failed to do his duty.

Nor would he have done his duty had he hesitated any longer to recognize that the situation which has made necessary this declaration of policy is one of such gravity that this Nation must now place itself materially and morally on a war footing. There will be some who cry out that in doing this we are abandoning our democracy. They are mistaken. We are defending our democracy. Our democracy will not be destroyed if we mobilize our power, discipline ourselves, and win the security which is our objective. But our democracy can and will be destroyed if we are weak, if we let ourselves be encircled by overwhelming forces, if we allow ourselves to become divided and confused and demoralized by endless debate.

WHAT HAS DESTROYED democracy and freedom in Europe is ruthless force victorious over the weak and confused democracies. Only defeat will destroy our democracy and deprive us of our freedom. Only the whole power of this Nation, aroused from its lethargy and concentrated to one end, can surely preserve democracy and insure the perpetuation of its liberties.

We shall not fail and we cannot retreat. For if we tried to retreat, our peril would grow stronger. If we failed to resist, our defense would become weaker. For we should be like a man who, having failed to call the police and resist the burglar before he entered his house, was then compelled all alone to resist him inside the house.

Fair Enough

American Fetish

WOULD IT BE un-American, do you suppose, to take down from the mantel one of our dearest and most cluttersome items of bric-a-brac, a sort of spiritual China dog, and bust the same against the wall in the interests of individual and national safety and common sense? I refer to the precious but idiotic fetish of sportsmanship as applied to situations from which sport obviously is absent.

PEGLER

PEGLER notably fights, whether informal fracases in saloons or wars between nations.

The rules of sportsmanship were devised to govern contests between pairs or teams of players in games, and they impose artificial restraints and are admirable in their proper sphere. Thus, in a boxing contest, whether between amateurs or mercenaries, it is prescribed that neither man shall intentionally poke the other fellow below the plimsoll or butt, heel, bite or use the knee. These are the refinements of civilization and are of comparatively recent origin, for time was not so very long ago when spikes were worn and used to rip the legs of the adversary and tripping and gouging were allowed.

But a fight is a struggle for no mere moral advantage but for victory, and, it may be, for life itself. Starting impromptu between strangers over an issue of manners at the bar of a conflict of opinion, it is guarded by no guarantees of proper behavior on either side, and he who, through chivalry, disarms himself of certain weapons assumes a handicap which may be rejected by the other.

HOW IS ONE man to know that if he should be knocked down the other will not stamp on his countenance or jump up and down with emphasis on his abdomen? And if he feels that, in the words of our anthem, his cause is just, why should he restrict his action to a code prescribed for an utterly different sort of situation? Is he not wiser to conk the other quickly with seidel, bottle or gobboon—to end the matter quickly and victoriously?

Animals are primitive fighters and, when fighting to live or love, fight all-out, as the British say, and to conquer by any use of the weapons nature gave them. We have endowed the rattlesnake with a sporting character, because he gives warning ere he strikes, but there, again, we are romancing at the expense of our intelligence, for we know that he rattles his buttons only because he is alarmed, alert and trembling.

In war we, more than any other people, except the British, from whom we derive our code, are likely to assume that the enemy will not do this or that in certain situations, because such conduct would be unchivalrous, and to feel unhappy when he does just that. But we are still thinking in terms of sport, and the reason is, I suppose, that for a long time sport has been one of our main interests.

We are shocked that the Germans should turn the smiling face of friendship on the Norwegians, Dutch and Belgians and suddenly, without warning or declaring war, blast to ruin cities in which they had been more or less trustfully received as guests. We were disturbed, too, by the contrast between the size and the arms of these flyweights and that of the Nazi giant, but if we study the lesson coldly it should teach us that the Nazi is an enemy from whom it is always best to expect the worst and, if possible, to beat him to it and, if necessary, to outfrightful him.

THE NAZIS now have a great advantage over the British in the matter of hostages, and they are very quick to threaten reprisals at the rate of ten to one for executions or other ill-treatment of their people by the enemy. But in the event of this Nation going to war against Adolf Hitler there would be a better balance, and the only question would be one of our willingness to employ Hitler's own method on Hitler's own people who could be rounded up here.

In that situation the Americans, no doubt, would hesitate to proceed against Germans in the United States in a manner like that of the Nazis in Poland, for example, and Prague, where high school students were executed for "demonstrating" against the invader. But after a few factory explosions and train wrecks involving American soldiers, American sportsmanship might yield to practical considerations, for pressure on his Germans here, applied in Hitler's own blunt way, surely would tend to humanize him. Hostages are very valuable in time of war and we would start, at least, with an advantage over Hitler of thousands to one.

Hungry Nations

Feeding Occupied Countries

THERE IS NO doubt that the food situation in the occupied countries is bad and getting worse. When we make this statement we think first of Belgium. It is not a mere routine, because America has already had a successful experience in feeding Belgium. The food situation in Belgium now is much worse than in any other occupied country.

And here are the reasons: Belgium's population density is the highest in the world—710 inhabitants per square mile. (The State of New York's density is but 275). Eight million four hundred thousand Belgians live in 11,500 square miles, or 7,500,000 acres. Five million acres are farmed, but only 1,325,000 are devoted to human foodstuffs; the rest is allotted to cattle-fodder crops. As a result of this agricultural policy Belgium grew in 1938 548,000 tons of wheat and imported 1,039,000 tons. Belgian home production thus amounted to but one-third of her total consumption. (These figures were given me by a distinguished Belgian economist, Prof. S. B. Chlepner, presently with the Brookings Institution.)

Devoting herself mainly to cattle breeding, Belgium made herself almost self-sufficient in meat and butter. And she developed her poultry to such a degree—28,000,000 hens—that in the last years she was exporting over 200,000,000 eggs yearly.

But to develop her cattle and poultry, Belgium was obliged to import yearly over 2,000,000 tons of fodder, about 1,000,000 tons of which was corn.

One can readily realize what the suspension of imports of wheat and cattle fodder meant to Belgian economy. But if the shortage of fodder induced many farmers to slaughter a part of their cattle and poultry, this shortage alone cannot explain their low food rations and the incredibly high prices paid on the "black markets."

BELGIANS are, for instance, allowed 6 kilograms 750 grams of bread monthly, while the Germans, both in the Reich and in occupied countries, get 10 kilograms 285 grams. The Belgian ration of butter is 150 grams monthly, to which have to be added 250 grams of margarine and 50 grams of lard—a total of 450 grams, compared with the 2 kilograms 142 grams of fat which is the monthly German ration. Meat, fresh, chilled and canned—20 per cent bones included—is limited to 1 kilogram 50 grams a month!

Expressed in calories, the Belgian ration is 1,200, but since many articles, such as potatoes, are hardly obtainable, it does not exceed 900 calories daily, compared with 2,600 calories allowed to Germans.

On the other hand, on the "black market" a kilo of wheat is quoted from 60 to 120 francs, a kilo of butter from 80 to140 francs, and an egg costs from 4 to 5 francs.

If we assume that the scarcity of eggs is due to the slaughter of hens, we could expect reasonable prices for chickens. But the latter cost on the "black markets" from 150 to 200 francs apiece!

And meat is getting so scarce that dogs and cats find their way to the "black markets." This writer received a letter from a woman in Brussels, who described not without humor, how her mother was lucky to find for 200 francs a lamb shoulder and how disappointed and how disgusted they were to discover, fortunately before the meal, that the "lamb" was a dog.

WHO THEN MUST be held responsible for this terrible food situation in Belgium? The British blockade certainly deeply shocked the Belgian economy, but the acute food situation in Belgium after one year of the blockade can only be explained by the methodic looting of the Nazis.

The Belgian statesman and newspaperman, Albert Wauters, who was several times minister of public health and of information and who is now with the Belgian government in London, writes in Belgium, a magazine published in New York, that "the Belgians knew where to put the blame for their destitution. The huge food reserves accumulated in Belgium were poured out into Germany. The arbitrary cutthroat exchange rate helped Germany loot Belgium." Mr. Wauters underlines the cynical contradiction between the boasting of the "Institut fur Konjunkturforshung in Berlin" that Nazi Europe is 90 per cent self-sufficient as far as food is concerned—and the present political exploitation by the Nazis of the food shortage in Belgium. He says that Nazi promises regarding a few pounds of rice or macaroni are worth just as much as their promises to respect the integrity of Czecho-Slovakia and the neutrality of Belgium.

He reminds that article 43 of the Hague Convention of 1907 imposed on the occupying nation the obligation to feed the occupied territories and concludes that the quickest way to solve the food problem in Belgium and in the other occupied countries is to help Britain liberate the oppressed nations.

But cannot something be done while waiting for that liberation?

There is no doubt that the Belgians, particularly the 2,000,000 children, are suffering greatly. The new harvest will to a certain extent improve the situation But in winter not only Belgium but also the other occupied countries will have to expect greater sufferings.

THE BELGIAN GOVERNMENT in London—as the other governments in exile—says: "We want to feed our children and our sick, provided it can be done without weakening the British blockade."

The Germans naturally welcome any American proposal to help them feed the population of the occupied countries, the economy of which is linked to the economy of the Reich.

"The British say: "We sympathize with the sufferings of the children and the sick. But our first aim is to win the war. The occupied countries are our allies and carry on the fight on our side. We ask them to help us by sharing with us our sufferings and our sacrifices."

Is any compromise possible between these three points of view? I believe that such a compromise is possible, particularly as concerns the children and the sick. But to reach this goal it is necessary to leave all the initiative in the hands of the governments in exile. Some people say that, being in London and dependent on the British, these governments cannot have real freedom of action. This is an insult not only to the British but to the moral courage, the humanitarian feelings and the intelligence of the European statesmen now gathered in London.

The vital interests of their citizens are at least as near to their hearts as they are to that of the American friends of small democracies. For but one example, there is Mr. Paul-Henri Spaak, the Belgian foreign minister, who is well known both for his moral courage and his good heart. But the statesmen in exile are not only humanitarians. They are also politicians, and as such they know that their political career would be finished should they not do all that is humanly possible to relieve the ordeal of their countrymen.

SO LET THEM first of all come to an agreement with the British, for surely no one would say the British are less human than the Nazis. When an agreement has been reached between the governments in exile and the British, a proposal should be submitted and contacts should be established with some exclusively humanitarian American organization—the Red Cross for instance—the leaders of which would be strictly nonpolitical personalities.

The Germans should be asked to grant the necessary authorization for sending food supplies to the occupied countries, according to a proposal elaborated by the governments in exile, the British authorities and the American humanitarian institutions.

Should the Germans then refuse this authorization, everyone in the occupied countries, and in this country, would be able to determine the exact responsibility of each party interested in the feeding of occupied democracies.

The Once Over

The Papers Of Private Purkey

Dear Ma:

I have not been feeling so good for the last couple of days and I guess a good deal of it was because I got quite a scare. The Jab Brigade (that's what we call the Army doctors) took another blood test of our outfit and found I had corpussels. But do not worry ma as it is only a slight case of corpussels. It scared me a lot at first on account it was such a serprise to find I had any. I never heard of 'em before, but it seems I got 'em in two colors, white corpussels and red corpussels.

The doctors keep looking at me like they was disappointed because I have got no blue corpussels and I guess they are going to do something about it. They would not diskuss it with me but Sergt. Mooney says every patriotic American has red, white and blue corpussels and while I might get away with it in civilyun life without no blue ones I can't get away with it in the Army.

One of the doctors told me I had more red corpussels than whites but not good enough more. From what he says I gess if you have nothing but white ones you get sent home as you are pretty weak. If you have nothing but red ones you are so tough you send the rest of the Army home or something I gess ma. I asked him if I had many corpussels in these two shades and he said I had millions. It upset me because I had a idea that even if I had corpussels I couldn't have more than a few dozen. But when I looked very scared he laffed and said to never mind as everybody had millions.

In my case I have got to eat food to make red corpussels such as liver and green vegetables but I don't expect to get any speshul meat orders in the Army so will have to do it on spinnitch and celery and maybe raw eggs. (If you have any liver around the house you mite send me some although I do not care for it much and always thought it was for the cat.)

Take care of yourself ma as I gess you probably have corpussels two witch will serprise you as much as me and maybe pop has 'em also and I gess he has mostly white ones too from the way he sits around the house all the time and wants to do no work.

I had a tooth pulled by the Army the other day and believe me no matter what else the draft Army is short of it is short of kind hearted dentists. So far as this dentist was concerned he was for a all out war on anybody witch got into his grips and I bet he worked on horses befoar coming into the Army. Either he uses instruments five times too big for the job or I got a mouth five times too small for him.

Thinking it over while nursing my soar jaw I come to the conklushun it was more of a test of courage than a piece of dental work and he is just weeding out the brave from the weak and from the way I yelled I guess he will not put me on the list of heroes. So far as I know my teeth was all good and I still think he picked me from a general descripshun and got the wrong man witch will be okay unless it turns out he mistook me for my old boss Bixby.

Well I will close again. Love,

OSCAR.

P. S.: Send me som more wool sox. I put a radio wash powder in the water to wash the mud out of the last pair and it not only took the dirt out but took the socks out.

Rudolf Hess is reported truculent and demanding hospital extras. Well, truculence on the part of a Nazi leader ought not to command any notice. They can get along without a lot of characteristics, but truculence is compulsory.

And it would be natural for a Nazi chief to demand extras, even in the hospital of a strange country. We can imagine him now calling for a salute with every sponge bath.

All we hope is that he will be gentleman enough not to bite a nurse.

After The Speech

IN HIS HISTORIC message to the Nation, the President left some things unsaid. He did not tell the people, "I am ready to order the Atlantic fleet into action to clear the sea lanes to Britain." He did not tell the people, "I am ready, if necessary, to order preventive occupation of the Atlantic Islands and Dakar." And he did not tell the people, "By every practical test, we are now at war."

ALSOP

Yet although he did not say these things in so many words, there is no room for doubt that he meant them. Events with their remorseless logic have called on him to take the great decision. His speech was the solemn utterance of a man who had accepted the logic of events and faced the consequences. And the men close to him, who have seen him groping towards his choice, are unanimous in believing that the great decision has been taken, once and for all, for better or for worse.

THE GREAT DECISION was not taken easily or lightly. It could not be. Even the Roosevelt of eight years ago who so gaily rode the tempest in the spring of 1933, would hardly have reached such a decision without much pain and heart-searching. The Roosevelt of today is a much mellower, wiser and more cautious man, worn by a gruelling term of office, and taught by harsh experience to consider risks the Roosevelt of 1933 would scarcely have imagined. Before he could settle his own and his country's fate, the President naturally passed through a period of agonizing uncertainty.

The whole story will not be told for many years, but even now some details are known, that give an inkling of the atmosphere of the White House in this last month. It is known, for example, that a fortnight ago, when the speech was first scheduled, he had not made up his mind. Despite the widespread assertions to the contrary, he then planned merely to "clarify" the national situation without indicating lines of action to be followed. It is known also that only a week ago, when he first tackled the task of drafting his speech, he was so hesitant to commit himself that Secretary of State Cordell Hull warned him he had better not speak at all than say too little.

THREE INFLUENCES appear to have helped the President reach his decision in the end. First, the progress of the war plainly dictated prompt American intervention. Second, when the President's speech was deferred, it somehow crystallized public feeling. He received word from all over the United States of a desperate impatience to hear what he had to say. This was interpreted for him by men who have been travelling through the country, studying opinion, as meaning that the great majority of the people were anxious to take their lead from him. And third, and most important, the wisest and ablest men in State, War and Navy departments daily told him, in the strongest terms, that he must act now or not at all.

His advisers' argument brought him face to face with his dilemma. If he acted, he could not avoid the risk of opposition from an intensely vocal, unrelentingly busy minority. But if he failed to act, he ran the far greater risk of seeing his policy frustrated, his own career crowned with tragic failure, and the country overwhelmed by a terrible catastrophe. He had only one possible choice when the alternatives were presented in these terms.

Few speeches have been more the President's own than the message telling of the choice he made. Of course there were the usual palace controversies over what the President was to say. The most serious was between the few remaining exponents of caution and the faction led by the chief officials of the War and Navy Departments, who would have liked to hear the President make even more explicit the things he left to be partly inferred. There was also a minor tug of war over the labor paragraphs of his speech. Firm and clear as his declaration of labor policy was, it would have been even tougher in tone if he had not made certain trivial concessions to satisfy representatives of the New Deal and the labor groups.

OF COURSE there were also the usual amanuenses. Harry L. Hopkins unquestionably worked on the speeech. The playwright, Robert Sherwood, is reported to have concocted certain purple passages. The oldest of the President's literary collaborators, Judge Samuel I. Rosenman, was admitted on hand to help, as he always is when there is something important to be said. But the President himself settled the controversies in his own way and wrote the final draft of his speech in his own language. On Tuesday night it was he who spoke, and no one else.

KINTNER

While he was revising his final draft, he told the men working with him he considered it "an act of Providence" that his illness had forced him to wait two weeks to make up his mind. Now, unless appearances deceive, unless his mind is not really made up, the time of words is over and the time of action is at hand.

Reilly Will Head Chest Drive Unit

John A. Reilly, president of the Second National Bank, will serve as chairman of the Metropolitan Unit in the 1941 Community Chest drive, it was announced yesterday by J. Clifford Folger, general chairman of the campaign.

He will be assisted by E. K. Morris, president of the Federal Storage Co., and B. M. McKelway, managing editor of the Evening Star.

The Metropolitan Unit solicits chest gifts in homes and in small firms from persons not reached by other volunteer units in Government departments and larger business houses.

Torpedo Plane Inventor Finds Satisfaction in Bismarck Fight

By W. W. Chaplin

International News Service Staff Writer

New York, May 28.—The man indirectly responsible for sinking the Bismarck, and thus giving Britain her greatest naval victory of the war to date, told me the story today.

The new battleship Bismarck was really sunk from one point of view almost 29 years ago when Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, U. S. N., retired, obtained his patent for the first torpedo plane in history.

Admiral Fiske, now 86, looked back today over the stormy years during which he saw other countries adopt his invention while America still disregarded it, and nodded with satisfaction at the final vindication of his dream.

It was an added satisfaction, he indicated, that the torpedo bearing planes which caught and crippled the Bismarck so that the British navy could sink her, were planes which followed original American designs. Admiral Fiske said:

"I got my patent in 1912 and I tried without avail to interest the then Secretary of Navy who felt it was impracticable. Other countries took it up, though, and during the World War the records show that both Germans and British used it to sink enemy ships. By the end of the war we did have one squadron and I suppose we have a lot of them now."

The torpedo plane invented by Admiral Fiske, developed to meet modern needs, is in use now by every navy in the world, all the outgrowth of an idea that no one thought was practical.

"They just wouldn't pay any attention to it," said the aged hero of the Battle of Manila.

It was suggested that the patent on such a vital weapon as the torpedo plane must have brought a fortune to the inventor, but Admiral Fiske smiled and shook his white head.

"I didn't need the money," he said. "I just forgot all about my rights and let anyone use the idea."

Other inventions of the retired naval hero are the system of electrical communication used in warships, an electric range finder, the naval telescope sight and mount, wireless control of moving vessels, systems for detecting submarines and exploding torpedoes under ships by magnetic attraction.

He also was one of the first to conceive the idea of tanks and wrote an article about "Land Battleships" before the tank appeared on any World War battlefield.

Admiral Fiske engaged in bitter controversy over his criticism of naval unpreparedness before the World War and finally resigned as naval aide of operations shortly before his retirement in 1916 because of official opposition to his program.

F. Reid Wallace Elected by Ad Men

F. Reid Wallace, advertising manager of Goldenberg Co., was elected president yesterday of the Advertising Club of Washington at a meeting in the Raleigh Hotel.

Other officers elected were: First vice president, N. Ward Guthrie, of Guthrie Lithograph Co.; second vice president, Louis Krakow, advertising manager of the District Grocery Stores; treasurer, Ernest S. Johnston, a partner of the Lewis Advertising Agency, and Charles J. Columbus, reelected secretary.

Elected to the board of directors were Donald M. Bernard, advertising director of The Washington Post; Alvin Q. Ehrlich, vice president of Kal Advertising, Inc., and W. Richard Harvey, advertising and publicity manager of the Palais Royal Department Store.

Reserve Officers Favor Strike Ban

Lieut. Col. R. C. Bishop, of Washington, was elected treasurer of the Reserve Officers Association of the United States yesterday in New Orleans at the close of its convention, which adopted a resolution favoring a national policy to end strikes in defense industries.

Lieut. Col. James P. Hollers, of San Antonio, was reelected president of the association. Another resolution praised President Roosevelt's declarations of hemisphere defense in his address Tuesday night.

Stephen Vincent Benet Lectures Here Today

POET BENET posed for this picture publicizing the Stag Cook Book, 1922

By Charles Mercer
Post Staff Writer

The works of Stephen Vincent Benet are revealed in six cases on the main floor of the Library of Congress this week in honor of the writer's appearance in Coolidge Auditorium of the library at 8:45 o'clock tonight.

Benet today becomes the fourth poet to discuss the role of poetry in a democracy in the current series sponsored by the library and Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer. Robinson Jeffers, Robert Frost and Carl Sandburg have preceded him on the Coolidge Auditorium platform. Tonight's lecture ends the series for this spring.

Benet's fame as a writer is not limited to "John Brown's Body," his epic of the Civil War which is perhaps his best-known work. The exhibit demonstrates this.

His mind has recaptured phases of American life in many periods of our history in the forms of the short story and the novel as well as verse.

Benet family history from Gen. Stephen Vincent Benet, Army chief of ordnance and the poet's grandfather, through the poet, his three children and wife, Rosemary, and brother, William Rose Benet, the writer, is presented in the exhibit in photographs and written material.

Under glass in the exhibit lies "John Brown's Body," from stray sheets of the first draft when it was entitled by Benet "The Horses of Anger" through the latest printed edition which has brought circulation to the 200,000 mark.

Here also is the progress of Benet's prize-winning "The Devil and Daniel Webster," from a short story in the Saturday Evening Post, to inclusion in a volume of short stories; as a special volume in itself; as an opera; as a play from the opera; and finally by photographs from the forthcoming motion picture based on the story.

Benet isn't hiding in an ivory tower, but is interested in the struggle for freedom being waged in these times, it is seen in a collection of his pamphlet writings.

The collection was loaned the library by Capt. Louis Henry Cohn and by members of the Benet family.

By Bill Cunningham

Even if Mr. Ancil Hoffman hired Lawrence Tibbett and the Eight Guardsmen to help him sing that lonely lament of the larruped, "We Was Robbed," with the full blessings of ASCAP and the complete orchestral dressing of the Livermore, Calif., Philharmonic, he couldn't get anywhere claiming the Louis-Baer decision should be voided—and he knows it.

Still, it's good for business.

It's so good for business and for so many different kinds of business that even if he runs out of words or starts to wheeze through lack of wind, Onkle Mike Jacobs can be depended upon to rush him new sets of lyrics and to endeavor to reinflate him. There may be some occasions when silence is golden but this is one of those where squawking is green backed.

The aroused manager of the truly gallant younger Baer, who in six savage rounds on that Washington rostrum Friday night rearranged the spelling of "bum" to read "bomb," isn't stopping any more with the lone charge that Referee Arthur Donovan permitted Louis to slug his battler illegally and almost lethally after the bell. He's pressing a bill of particulars against Donovan that covers practically the run of the fight.

Donovan's Bad Night

He's charging inefficiency and implying favoritism. There's no question that Donovan, long New York's front-window arbiter, had himself a very bad night. He was a weak and uncertain third man in this cyclonic controversy, whereas Hoffman emerged from it as a truly brilliant manager.

The one really important item is the claim that Louis struck the ultimate and terrifically felling sixth-round right-hander after the bell. The truth of the matter is that it was a very sorry bell at best and had foozled a couple of times previously during the fray. One time it would clang with a true ringing peal. The next, it would sound like a tired dish pan dropped on a thin carpet.

At this climactic juncture, it elected to have a bad moment, and, if it went off at all, it must have been a dry clank, for nobody except those immediately around it ever heard it. Of course, the crowd noise was of the sort called pandemonium. Louis, his left eye cut and the blood beginning to spurt in freshets, had torn into the huge white man, obviously to end it if he could. That orb was going to be a serious handicap if matters dragged out much further.

All at once, Baer sank to the calico in a weird, spiralling twist that turned him almost completely around backwards and dropped him flat on his face, the panting breath of his nostrils billowing the resin dust in little clouds. He came out of that one at seven looking dazed and unsteady.

Louis tore into him again, belting and flaying and rocking and riveting until he got another clean shot at that now drooling jaw, and he crashed it again with another screaming right-hander. From the flat of his huge back, the game Californian barely got himself upright in time to beat the double digit this time. He was helpless. His arms were hanging. He didn't even have his guard up. Louis had a free throw.

Did It Ring?

Right along in here in the midst of the wildest bedlam is where the bell rang, if, indeed, the ringer didn't grow too excited to remember to give it a yank. But that last Louis right landed like an explosion and the huge Baer went over in a regular swan-dive. All was immediately wildest confusion. Louis' corner men piled into the ring. Baer's husky seconds got him under the shoulders and dragged his limp form to the stool in his angle, while little Ancil Hoffman went for Donovan in a neutral corner.

HOFFMAN

Donovan's contention is that the bell and the final Louis sock spoke simultaneously. He further contends that if Louis had definitely struck the blow after the bell—which he, himself, steadfastly denies—the decision would still have been a matter for his own discretion. If he were convinced that Louis had done it deliberately, he'd have to score it a foul, and he could then either take the round away from Louis on a foul, or he could, if the breach were serious enough, disqualify him and give the title to Baer. He says, and he's right, that that would be a terrible way for a title to pass.

From the long look, Baer couldn't have lasted another round anyhow, and the canny Hoffman both saved his man and built the possibility of a really whopping later gate, possibly in New York, by pressing his protest as far as disqualification in the ring. He's serving the latter cause admirably now by keeping the argument alive.

Keep War Fears From Child Minds, Miss Major Advises Theater Group

By Jessie Ash Arndt
The Post Club Editor

There is emotional and mental danger to children in allowing them to reflect the hatred and the fear of war, Clare Tree Major, founder and director of the Children's Theater of New York, told the members of the Washington committee of the theater, yesterday.

Mrs. Major, whose productions for children have entertained audiences that have packed the National Theater on Saturday mornings for the past nine seasons, was guest of honor at a luncheon given by members of the committee, newly-formed for the purpose of enlarging interest in the project. It was held at the Parrot Tea Room with a large group of representative women present. Mrs. Harold Marsh is the committee chairman and Mrs. Lawrence M. Walters, Washington representative for the theater.

"Children should be given other things to think about than war," said Mrs. Major. "They should not be allowed to see war pictures in the magazines nor on the screen. Children under 12 years should have war removed from their consciousness as far as possible.

"Children are helpless," Mrs. Major pointed out. "They have no memory of any other kind of a world than that of the present. They know nothing about life as it has been before. If they are to work in a world of peace and promise, they must see that this war is a temporary thing which does not touch them—a thing which adults can handle."

Mrs. Major declared she believed whatever was taught of the war to children in the schools should be presented as an historical event, and not as something that was part of their personal experience.

"The theater has its part in diverting the minds of children from contemplation of the world at war," she said. "It absorbs them while they witness the play; they read books in connection with it and retain the memory of the theater. In order to grow into sane and well-balanced men and women, with sound judgment, children must be given the sense of security that is their inherent right," said Mrs. Major.

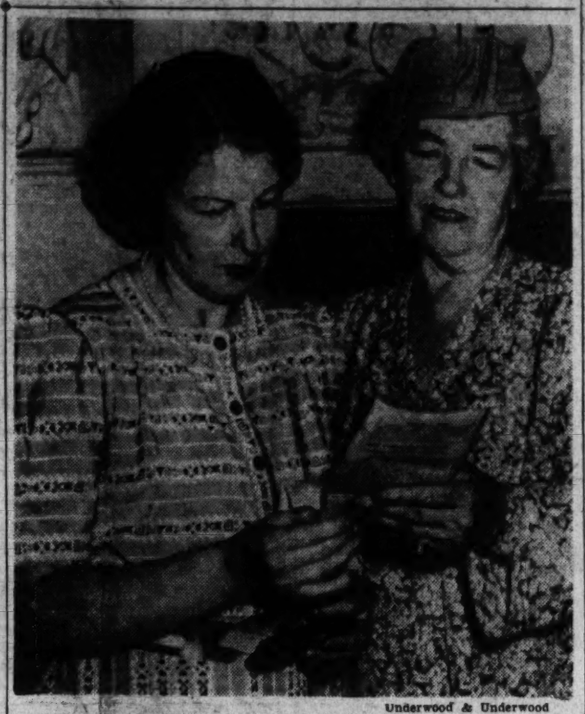

She cited, to illustarte the difference in the attitudes of children, two lads in Arizona who had spent months in building a scooter, completely absorbed with interest in it—to them there was no war. In contrast, there were two others, 9 and 11, whose mother found them painting on the top of their dog kennel the anxious inscription: "Hitler, Don't Bomb Me, Please."

Children should not go to bed and wonder in the dark if every plane they hear is a German bomber. Terrifying things, so far as possible, should be kept out of their world, she declared.

Because of this conviction, the plays given by the Children's Theater Company are free from frightening scenes, although they are filled with the kind of exciting situations children love, she said.

There are now six companies which tour from coast to coast and from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada, giving the same plays presented here.

Mrs. Major, who in private life is Mrs. John D. Kenderdine, was joined at the luncheon by her husband, Maj. Kenderdine, who is now on duty in the adjutant general's division of the War Department.

Child Welfare Resolutions Passed by District P.-T. A.

The District Congress of Parents and Teachers, closing its two-day convention yesterday at the department auditorium, passed a series of resolutions covering matters deemed to concern the welfare of children and their education.

The first affirmed support of the President's internal and foreign policy as set forth in his speech Tuesday night.

The second resolution urged strictest enforcement of liquor laws in regard to the issuance of licenses to establishments within 400 feet of the nearest boundary line of public property, and opposed the issuance of liquor licenses to any establishment catering to children.

The Congress reaffirmed its support of existing child labor laws and opposed the proposed amendment to allow children under 15 to appear on the stage professionally in the District.

It went on record as approving efforts of the Board of Education to have additional hearing testing aids in the schools and urged the employment of a qualified lip-reading teacher. It also asked that $9,000 be restored to the budget for a psychiatric clinic and that speech teachers be added to the faculties in the junior and senior high schools.

It urged continuance of sufficient appropriation to insure permanent teachers as vocational counsellors in the junior and senior high schools.

The congress also asked that $50,000 be appropriated to the Board of Education for 32 teachers, 5 hours per week, for teaching shut-ins and crippled children, and asked that this project be transferred from the Board of Public Welfare to the Board of Education.

The congress also asked that efforts of the Outdoor Cleanliness League be supported, urged that the D. C. Government provide sufficient receptacles on the street for trash and that the Health Department be given sufficient funds to conduct an efficient rat-eradication campaign.

It asked that safety education in the schools be continued and that money be appropriated for enough additional policemen for the proper protection of the city; that one judge be assigned to Traffic Court; that there be immediate trial of drunken drivers; that adequate traffic lights be installed in the city, and that the proposed site of the annex to the Red Cross building, as indorsed by the Secretary of the Interior, be opposed because of the additional traffic hazard it would create.

It also asked the United States Congress to provide an appropriation to maintain the National Symphony Orchestra and that the WPA art and music projects be continued.

The organization also went on record opposing the establishment of any race track in the District; approving cooperation among all recreation units in the District and reservation to the Board of Education of full control of all school properties, and opposing H. R. 4303, providing for a three-man recreation board.

Mrs. C. D. Lowe, retiring president of the congress, presided at the business sessions during the day and at the closing fellowship banquet last night at the Willard Hotel. Dr. Hugh Bone, of the University of Maryland, was the principal speaker on yesterday's program, discussing propaganda. Questioned as to the Gallup Poll, he asserted it was honest and as accurate as it was possible for a public poll to be.

Earlene White Addresses Petworth Club

The valuable contribution of the individual American citizen who keeps a high morale and bases his opinions on fact, rather than propaganda, was stressed last night by Earlene White, honorary president of the National Federation of Business and Professional Women's Clubs, in an address before the Petworth Women's Club.

Miss White was guest speaker at the club's annual banquet held at Hotel 2400. Speaking on "Women and Citizenship," she declared that the highest type of American citizenship, whether of man or woman, was more needed now than ever before in the country's history. There are two ways to render service in this period, she said—as individuals and as organizations, but either way, the stanch morale of the individual is indispensable.

The keynote of the banquet, "America First," was evident not only in the program but also in the decorations, carried out in red, white and blue, with candles and flowers on the tables and forming corsages for the honor guests.

The guests of honor included Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, retiring president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs; Mrs. Arthur C. Watkins, the newly-elected president; Mrs. LeVerne Beales, retiring first vice president of the federation and also one of the past presidents of the Petworth Woman's Clubs, and Mrs. Ellis Logan, godmother of the Petworth Club.

At the head table with the guests of honor were the retiring officers of the club, Mrs. Frank Stuart, president; Mrs. Frank MacMaugh, first vice president; Mrs. George Fuller, recording secretary; Mrs. J. S. Rogers, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. A. E. Printz, treasurer. Also there were the newly-elected officer, Mrs. Frank MacMaugh, president; Mrs. Edward B. Johnson, first vice president; Mrs. A. E. Printz, second vice president; Mrs. J. L. Cooper, recording secretary; Mrs. W. C. John, corresponding secretary, and Mrs. Sue Richwine, treasurer.

Mrs. H. W. Dorst was general chairman, assisted by Mrs. George Fuller, Mrs. A. E. Printz and Mrs. Harry Sigourney. Mrs. H. R. Norton gave the invocation.

Mrs. Van Zandt Entertains

The Washington branch of the Society of Woman Geographers met at the apartment of Lydia Van Hagan Zandt (Mrs. J. Parker Van Zandt) at the Westchester yesterday afternoon.

Mrs. Van Zandt received her fellow members dressed in a handsome Banares sari of light blue, woven with a design in solid silver threads and turned-up-toe embroidered slippers made by the chumars of India.

In an informal talk, "Reflections on Modern India," she told of experiences in the native states of Mysore, Udaipur and Jodhpur, where she and her husband were state guests in the guest houses of the Haharajas; of a flight across India in a British flying boat and of being in the gallery of the Legislature in New Delhi while amendments to the Child Marriage Act were being debated by Moslem and Hindu members, who quoted ancient religious tenets in support of child marriage.

To illustrate the variety of costumes worn in different parts of India and by the different religious sects, Mrs. Van Zandt showed a group of dolls which had been authentically dressed by Hindu child widows in a Christian rescue home.

Scout Leaders' Defense Course Will Be Given

A special course in "Training Girl Scouts for Defense" will be given June 19 by the District of Columbia Council of Girl Scouts, according to an announcement today by Miss Eleanor Durrett, local director. Miss Durrett will conduct the coure at Rockwood, an estate owned by the national organization, located on Conduit Road near Great Falls.

"This course is part of the National Girl Scout training program which is being instituted in more than 25 Girl Scout adult schools throughout the country," said Miss Durrett, "and is open to all women over 21 who are interested in learning the technique of youth leadership in the defense program, whether or not they are members of the Girl Scout organization.

"I feel that youth leadership, at this time, is as exciting and dramatic a defense activity for women as any in the entire defense program. Everyone is aware of the part that organized youth movements play in totalitarian countries. Few realize, however, that in scouting we have a youth organization directed to ideals and goals diametrically opposed to those of the totalitarian states.

"The three program fields of health and safety, outdoor activities and community service, as they aid in home defense, will be stressed. Women will be taught, in turn, how to teach girls to keep physically fit, so that they may help safeguard health in their communities.

"The saving and utilization of food, part of the national conservation project, will be included in the course, as will first aid, community service, camp craft and how to cook out-of-doors in the event of an emergency," Miss Durrett stated.

"Women who take advantage of this course will have the benefit of over 29 years of scouting experience in training for leadership of girls.

"This course is designed to serve a three-fold purpose," she explained. "First, to train leaders to organize new troops to take care of our rapidly growing waiting list of over 1,500 girls who want to become Girl Scouts; second, to prepare women to serve as members of troop sponsoring committees, and third, to prepare others for work on planning committees."

Registrations for this course are being accepted at the local Girl Scout headquarters, 1825 M Street Northwest.

Madame Chairman

THE PRO BONATA CLUB last night held its annual banquet and installation of new officers, with Mrs. Albert D. Butler heading the list for the coming year.

The affair was at Hotel 2400. Mrs. Lee D. Ritter, the retiring president, presided and a program was presented including songs by Mrs. Katherine Slowie and ballet dances by Kathleen Davis, both accompanied by Mrs. Claude Webb.

Another feature was the presentation of a silver loving cup to Mrs. John W. Lyles for the second year as the club's bridge champion. In 1939 it was held by Mrs. Butler. Should Mrs. Lyles win it a third year it will go to her permanently.

Mrs. Ernest Humphrey Daniel, retiring president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs, was the honored guest last evening.

New officers installed, in addition to Mrs. Butler, included: Mrs. Bert L. Williams, first vice president; Mrs. Ennis Almond, second vice president; Mrs. Lyles, treasurer; Mrs. Richard Moguin, recording secretary; Mrs. Silas Baker, corresponding secretary; Mrs. Ritter, director to the District of Columbia Federation, and Mrs. J. Edwin Reid, alternate.

MEMORIAL DAY—Plans for observance of Memorial Day by by Daughters of Union Veterans have been announced by Mrs. Amelia A. Yoder, president of the Ellen Spencer Mussey Tent. At 9 a. m. tomorrow she will place a wreath at the tomb of Gen. John A. Logan for the Department of Potomac G. A. R. At 9:45, the members will march in the parade to Arlington and services will be held at the Tomb of the Unknown Civil War Dead at 11:30, where Mrs. Yoder, assisted by the color bearers, will place another wreath.

Diplomats Numerous At Two Large Parties

By Hope Ridings Miller

TEATIME YESTERDAY found the Capital's party-going contingent—as well as many others—out and about at two large parties. Maj. and Mrs. Robert Montagu Stewart-Richardson (he's attache of the British Embassy) gathered in a large number of friends for their "after 5:30" fete on the terrace of their Woodland Drive home. At the same time, Mme. van Swinderen, wife of the former Netherlands Minister to London, and her daughter, Mrs. Hoyer Millar, were receiving a number of friends at the home of Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, sr., on Massachusetts Avenue. Mrs. Glover is Mme. van Swinderen's mother.

One of the longest and loveliest terraces in Washington looks out over the treetops at the Stewart-Richardson home, and there guests collected and stayed for well over two hours. Receiving informally, the hostess wore a powder blue crepe frock, made with an accordion plaited skirt and a straight blouse. A pearl necklace and earrings completed her costume. Miss Elizabeth Stewart-Richardson was smartly turned out in a white crepe dress, splashed with a handpainted floral design in dark red, green and blue, and set off with dark green shoes.

A number of the hostess' friends who had known her since the days when she lived in St. Louis and later, in Pittsburgh, were in the company that thronged the terrace and stayed on until dusk. Mint juleps and a variety of teatime dainties went the rounds, and even the heat was forgotten as guests looked out over the cool trees or took turns standing before the mammoth fan which blew across the entire company.

As would be expected, many members of the British Embassy were among those present. I saw Mrs. Nevile Butler arriving early; also Sir Owen and Lady Chalkley, Mr. and Mrs. Julian Chetwynd, Mr. and Mrs. S. L. Childs, the Commercial Secretary and Mrs. J. P. Summerscale, Mr. and Mrs. Redvers Opie, Mr. and Mrs. G. F. Thorold, the British Third Secretary and the Hon. Mrs. Heathcoat Amory, Angus Malcolm, Lieut. P. H. B. Otway-Smithers, Mrs. Anthony Coleby, Miss Craig McGeachey and several others.

Noted Explorer Among Those Present

Very much a center of attention was Miss Louise Boyd, the noted explorer, who formerly visited Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt here, and now is back for a brief stay at the Anchorage Hotel. Miss Boyd arrived with Mrs. H. Conger Pratt. The South African Minister and Mrs. Ralph William Close chatted with Sir Richard and Lady Tute. Miss Peggy Lansdowne came in with her stepfather, John Caswell, and presently was in the center of a group that included Mr. and Mrs. Allan Moulton and Miss Alice Barry.

The Undersecretary of the Navy and Mrs. James V. Forrestal were there, she wearing a cool-looking pink and white print with a wide-brimmed white hat. Mrs. George Rettengill lingered to talk with Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse, who left later for New York, where they will spend a few days. Mrs. Breckinridge Bayne, who has known Mrs. Stewart-Richardson since they both were girls, was among those present. Incidentally, Mrs. Bayne will leave today for Boston to visit her son, James Jones, who is attending school there.

Off to New England this weekend to visit Mrs. Rousseau will go Edward Van Devanter, who was also among those present yesterday. Ralph Hill stopped in before going on to the Van Swinderen-Millar party. Mrs. Foster Penick, who will leave soon to return to her home in New Orleans, was squired through the party crowd by Clarence Hewes. Fred Roy moved gayly from group to group as did William McComb and John Foster of the British Embassy. Mr. and Mrs. Walter R. Tuckerman were there; also, the Misses Laura and Ruth Tuckerman; Count and Countess de Castellane, Mrs. William P. MacCracken, who will be off to Auburn, N. Y., this weekend for a brief visit; John Logan, Mr. and Mrs. Carlton Holdrege, Mrs. Noyes Lewis, chatting with Mrs. Wallach Merriam; Mrs. Randall Hagner, Mrs. Edgar Prochnik, Mrs. Thomas Richard Cowell, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Watson, Mrs. Edward Wilber, and scores more.

Garden Party Is Order of Day

For once the Weather Bureau didn't disappoint any party-giver yesterday. Madame van Swinderen and Hoyer Millar called up at the last moment to see whether they could hold their party outdoors. The weatherman gave his O. K., so tables and chairs were set out on the lawn.

All Washington seemed to be gathered under the huge trees of the Glover estate. Mr. and Mrs. Charles Carroll Glover, jr., were on hand and their daughter, Miss Nancy Glover. As Mr. Hoyer Millar is with the British Embassy, many of his colleagues took time off from their labors to attend the party.

Mme. van Swinderen wore a long gown of grey chiffon with a narrow colored band at the waist. Mrs. Millar was also in gray—a street length frock.

Lady Halifax was an early arrival, wearing a yellow print and a becoming veiled straw hat. The British Minister and Mrs. Nevile Butler, the First Secretary John Foster and Mr. and Mrs. Julian Chetwynd were others from the Embassy group.

Countess van der Straten-Ponthoz, wife of the Belgian Ambassador, came in after a day's work at the Belgian sale at the British War Relief Headquarters. The Australian Minister and Mrs. Richard Casey and the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom were others present from the diplomatic corps.

Justice Reed Attends Fete

Justice and Mrs. Stanley Reed were among those from the official group at the party. Mrs. Henry Leonard chatted with Mrs. Glover, sr., on the broad porch of the Glover home. Miss Vera Bloom said that her mother, Mrs. Sol Bloom, was improving after an illness.

Mr. and Mrs. Jouett Shouse talked under a tree with Mr. and Mrs. Joshua Evans. Gen. Allen Gullion was among the guests, as were Mrs. Lewis Clark, who arrived with Mrs. Theodore Achilles; Countess van Rechteren Limpurg, all in white; Mme. Roell, lady in waiting to Crown Princess Juliana, down from Canada until Saturday, and Mme. Loudon and Mrs. Randall Hagner, who were among those pouring tea.

Others seen were Mr. and Mrs. Edward Burling, jr., Mr. and Mrs. Creighton Peet, Mme. Espil, Mrs. Frederick Atherton, Richard Sanger, Mrs. Bruce Wallace, Mme. Molekamp, George Abell, Mrs. William T. Mann, Mr. and Mrs. William Lacy, Donna Julia Brambilla, Mrs. C. Mathews Dick, who also has been working hard for Belgian War Relief; Mrs. B. Lauriston Hardin, who was accompanied by Mrs. Fred Eaton, wife of the OPM official, and half a hundred others, at least.

Weijermans Give Cocktail Party

The Military Attache of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Weijerman were hosts at a cocktail party yesterday afternoon at the Shoreham Hotel from 5:30 until 7:30 o'clock.

Mme. Weijerman received her guests wearing a simple black crepe frock. Headed by the Minister of the Netherlands Legation and Mme. Loudon, many members of the Dutch staff here were present. Also guests at the party were many of the military attaches and their wives who are stationed here.

Miss Suzanne Walker Is Wed To Capt. Treacy at Cathedral

Fall & Fall Studios.

MRS. EDGAR JOSEPH TREACY, Jr.

Ceremony Performed in St. Matthew's Cathedral; Couple Leaves on Trip to White Mountains; They Will Reside Near Watertown, N. Y.

White peonies, gladioli and palms adorned St. Matthew's Cathedral yesterday morning at 11 o'clock for the wedding of Miss Suzanne Carolyn MacLean Walker and Capt. Edgar Joseph Treacy, jr., of the United States armored force. The bride is the daughter of Commander Hugh MacLean Walker, U. S. N., retired, and the late Mrs. Walker, of Augusta, Ga. Capt. Treacy is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Edgar Joseph Treacy, of Cedarhurst, L. I.

Given in marriage by her cousin, Maj. Elvin Ragnvald Heiberg, U. S. A., the bride wore a white net gown ending in a train. It was made with a square neck, edged in ruching and short puffed sleeves. Her veil fell from a Dutch cap arrangement.

Mrs. Joseph M. Carey 3d served as matron of honor. She wore a shell-pink lace and net frock with a bouffant skirt. Her hat was of pink rose and delphinium and she carried the same kind of flowers. The remaining attendants were Mrs. Cunningham Browne, of England; Miss Miriam Scott and Miss Jean Heiberg, of this city; Miss Betty Lee Cushings of Groton, Mass., and Mrs. Edward Martin, of Alexandria. They wore net frocks made with wide skirts. They carried bouquets of yellow roses and blue delphinium and wore nosegay hats.

Capt. George Ruhlen served as best man, and among the ushers were Capt. Andrew Boyle, Kelso Clow and Maj. Frederick Drury. A small breakfast followed at their R Street residence. Only a few intimate friends and members of the family attended. When the couple left for their wedding trip to the White Mountains in New Hampshire the bride wore a green tweed coat and matching printed frock. They will live in Pine Camp, near Watertown, N. Y.

The bride attended Gunston Hall and Eastman School. Capt. Treacy attended the Danvers Preparatory School and was graduated from West Point Military Academy.

About the Town

with Dudley Harmon

INSTEAD OF going to one of the more ultra-ultra resorts this summer, the Australian Minister and Mrs. Casey have leased a small cottage near Galesville, Md. A little more than an hour's drive from Washington, Galesville is just near enough to the Capital to allow a busy diplomat to commute for weekends.

MRS. CASEY

"We have a little boat," says Miss Pat Jarrett, of the legation staff, "and plan to put-put painfully around the bay." The Caseys hope to add a sail to their boat, which Miss Jarrett plans to make herself. It seems that these amazing Australians think nothing of running up a bit of sail cloth—"It's as easy as folding a napkin," says Miss Jarrett.

The Casey cottage is right on the water near the West End Yacht Club, where a number of Government officials keep small boats. Sailing in Chesapeake waters is more exciting than is the climate there, as squalls are likely to come up suddenly of an afternoon.

A GLAMOROUS delegate to the National Nutrition Conference is Mrs. Sumner Sewall, wife of the Governor of Maine and sister-in-law of Mrs. Walter Edge, of Washington. Mrs. Sewall was born in Poland and met her future husband on a visit to this country about 15 years ago. Her hobby is home economics, and in Maine she takes a great interest in getting better school lunches for children and working with women's clubs on food problems. Mrs. Sewall is an excellent cook, but says despite all her hard work she still has one difficulty—she can't make her children like spinach.

Mrs. Sewall is afraid she and the Governor won't be able to come down for Camilla Edge's debut June 12, as the Governor is working 12 hours a day on defense problems, as well as his regular job. His wife is convinced that the nutrition conference now going on is vitally important in defense.

WHILE THE busy Washington hotels continue to put up cots in sample rooms for patrons, the Mayflower has built a special room just for the luggage of people who are waiting to get in. Formerly the luggage stood around in the lobby, but reached such proportions that guests were always stumbling over it.

You'd think that hotel men would be delighted with the way business is booming. On the contrary, they are worried that faithful patrons whom they no longer have room for will drift away and never come back.

Arnolds Entertain 35 at Dinner

The Deputy Chief of Staff for Air, Gen. H. H. Arnold, and Mrs. Arnold entertained a company of 35 last night at dinner at the opening of the Shoreham's outdoor terrace. Guest of honor was Gen. Fernando Melgar of the Peruvian Air Corps, chief of the Military Household of the President of Peru. He is making a tour, at the invitation of the United States Government, of aeronautical defense activities.

Guests at last night's dinner were all from Army and Air Corps circles. Other hosts at the opening of the terrace were Senator Clyde L. Herring, Representative and Mrs. Richard Kleberg, J. M. Elizalde, resident commissioner of the Philippines; former Senator Rush Holt, Mrs. Elonzo Tyner, Mrs. Gerald Lyons, and Mr. and Mrs. Lorenzo L. Snow.

Mrs. Fowler Entertains For Explorer and Wife

Mrs. Arthur Fowler entertained at a dinner party for 10 last evening at her home in Georgetown.

Guests of honor were Mr. and Mrs. Suydam Cutting, of New York City, who are here for only a brief visit. Mr. Cutting is the well known explorer.

Mrs. Alfred Howe Guest of Mrs. Hayden

Mrs. Alfred Howe, wife of Capt. Howe, U. S. N., is visiting Mrs. Edward Everett Hayden and Miss Bainbridge Hayden, widow and daughter of Rear Admiral Hayden, at their home, 2820 N Street.

Mrs. Howe will return next week to Charleston, where Capt. Howe is stationed.

Chilean Naval Chief Is Feted At Dinner Party

The Chilean Ambassador and Senora de Michels entertained at a dinner party last night at the embassy in honor of Vice Admiral Julio Allard, chief of the general staff of the Chilean navy. Admiral Allard, who with many other Latin American naval chiefs came here several weeks ago on the invitation of the Navy Department, will leave today for New York City. He will sail on June 6, aboard the Santa Elena for Chile.

Ranking guests at the dinner were the Mexican Ambassador and Senora de Castillo Najera. Also there were the Ambassador of Brazil and Senhora de Martins, the former United States Ambassador to Chile and Mrs. William S. Culbertson, Mr. and Mrs. Warren L. Pierson, Dr. and Mrs. Ricardo Alfaro, Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Meyer, Col. and Mrs. Robert Guggenheim, Mrs. Sims Snow and the Michel's daughter, Senorita Cristina Michels.

Louise Ransdell Becomes Bride

At an informal ceremony, Miss Louise Ransdell became the bride of James Justice Souder yesterday afternoon at 4 o'clock, in Walter Reed Chapel, with Chaplain Frank Miller officiating. The bride is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. M. D. Ransdell, of Independence, Kans., who were here for the ceremony. Also here for the wedding were the bridegroom's parents, Lieut. Col. and Mrs. Charles G. Souder, of Atlanta, Ga.

White peonies were used on the altar. Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a street-length, brown chiffon frock and a wide-brimmed, chartreuse hat. A cluster of white orchids completed the ensemble. Mrs. Harry Holtzman, of New York City, wearing a chartreuse ensemble and a cosage of African daisies, served as matron of honor. Lieut. Thomas J. Keeling was best man. A small reception at the bride's home followed the ceremony.

Following their wedding trip the young couple will be at home at 319 North Thomas Street, Arlington, Va.

Old Ties Renewed By MacJannets At Reception

Mr. and Mrs. Donald R. MacJannet, whose school in St. Cloud, France, was famous for years among members of the diplomatic set in Europe, renewed old ties yesterday at a reception held in the Pan American room of the Mayflower. Many friends of the school, including some former students, were on hand to welcome them to Washington from Sun Valley, Idaho, where they established a similar school following the German occupation of France.

Those present included Count and Countess Andre de Limur, Mrs. Laurence V. Benet, Miss Mabel Boardman, Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Cox, Miss Helen Coolidge, Capt. and Mrs. Paul Doerr, Miss Carolyn Nash, Dr. Anna Bartsch-Dunne, Mme. Blanche J. Bimont, Mr. and Mrs. Lynn F. Woodworth and Mr. and Mrs. Paul Banfield. Assisting the hosts were two alumnae of the school, the Misses Mildred and Rosemary Murphy, daughters of Robert Murphy, counselor of the United States Embassy at Paris.

A highlight of the afternoon was the showing of motion pictures, both of the new school at Sun Valley and of the MacJannet Camp on Lake Annecy in the French Alps. At present the latter camp is being operated as a child refugee colony by the American Friends Service Committee. A total of about 500 French children, most of them hospital cases, already have been guests at the camp.

Gladys A. Carter Gives Luncheon For Bride-to-Be

Miss Gladys Ann Carter entertained at a luncheon yesterday afternoon at the home of her parents on Foxhall Road. Honor guest was Miss Mary Eugenia Coleman, who will be married in June to Ensign Louis Roddis.

Guests at the party included Miss Edith Pearson, Miss Anne Hawley, Miss Tudor Morsell, Miss Nancy Davis, Miss Louise Chamberlin, Miss Marty Wilson, Miss Anne Barr, Mrs. John Gawler, Miss Aurelia Hutchison and Miss Nan Moses.

Brookes Entertain For W. B. Howe

Gathering in a few friends of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Bruce Howe—he has just returned from a flying trip to South America—Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Brooke entertained at a small party in the garden of their N Street home yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Howe accompanied Gen. Frank McCoy, head of the Foreign Policy Association, on a three months' tour of South America. Yesterday's party was in the nature of a "welcome-home" affair.

FLAT-TOPPED desks in the offices of the Counselor of the British Embassy, Stephen Childs, were transformed for an hour into buffet tables yesterday when Mr. and Mrs. Childs entertained at a wedding luncheon in honor of Mr. Childs' secretary, Anne Niblett, and her bridegroom, Carl Hoffacker.

The wedding took place at St. Thomas Episcopal Church in the presence of a few friends with more guests gathering for the luncheon afterward at the Childs' house—it is also Mr. Child's office—to toast the newlyweds. The bride is English and had to forego having her parents at her wedding. Mr. Hoffacker is American and his mother, Mrs. Anna Hoffacker, was present to do the honors for both sets of parents.

The bride was simply and charmingly dressed in the traditional white with veil and orange-blossoms, and her attendant, Barbara Wace, wore a long frock of hydranges blue with a becoming picture hat.

AMONG THOSE coming in to wish the newlyweds God-speed were the British Minister and Mrs. Neville Butler, Charles Peake, the Dick Amorys—these latter the parents of a month-old son; Squadron Leader R. S. Mills, William Elmslie and Gordon Etherington-Smith. Also present were Sibilla Skidelsky, stepdaughter of the Portuguese Minister; Sheila Broderick and Mr. and Mrs. Julian Chetwynd.

In the sheaf of telegrams received by the bride and bridegroom before they departed on a brief war-time honeymoon was one from Lord and Lady Halifax and another from the Lord Mayor of Cardiff in Wales. For her wedding trip Mrs. Hoffacker wore a tailleur of beige with blouse, hat and accessories of cocoa brown, a costume which was thoroughly sprinkled with rice, notably by several smartly uniformed young United States Marine Corps officer guests.

AT RALPH HILL'S very pleasant cocktail party the other afternoon the gentlemen took sartorial laurels. Smart tweeds in muted colors and striking patterns were the masculine order of the day. Our host wore dashing brown and white tweeds which made it easy to find him among the crowd. The Peruvian Ambassador, Dean of the Diplomatic corps, was distinguished looking in a light brown jacket and white flannels. Alex Legare and George Abell were two more who wore vocal—not loud, tweeds, which they insisted were much cooler than they looked.

Among the ladies present were the Misses Anne and Mary Randolph—Nannie and Polly to their intimates of all ages—both wearing summer flowered prints. Donna Julia Brambilla looked cool and attractive all in white from tip to toe. Madame van Kaathoven was confiding to a friend something said about her by a third friend and you can be sure it was nice, as Madame van Kaathoven is as averse to passing on unpleasant words as she is fond of repeating pleasant ones.

GUESTS WANDERED through the marbel-floored solarium out into the garden. Here some charming old vine-covered brick chimneys have built-in niches for marble statues. Pretty Mrs. Francis Colt de Wolf was so intrigued by a marble baby, modestly draped in vines, that she planned an immediate hunt for a statue for her own garden.

Helping Mr. Hill receive were his niece, Mrs. Royce Powell, and Mr. Powell, and three nephews, John, Snowden and Bobby Conkey. Also present were Mrs. Sidney Cloman, Mrs. James Hamilton Lewis, Mr. and Mrs. Hallett Johnson, Mrs. Ralph Worthington, Glenn Abbey, Frank Vanderlip and a number of others.

IT FELL TO the lot of a Washington newspaper to inform Mrs. Anthony Rumbold of the death of her father-in-law, the distinguished Sir Horace Rumbold. Due to wartime delay, the cable from her husband did not arrive until some time later. Sir Horace and Lady Rumbold made many friends in Washington when they visited the young Rumbolds in Georgetown before the war. The evening of their arrival saw the Rumbolds' block roped off for one of those cozy Georgetown fires which never seem to do much damage and which bring out the neighbors in force to offer aid and advice. I remember Sir Horace's pleased surprise when onlookers made a dash at his blocked taxi and carried the Rumbold luggage through the police cordon to its destination.

It is hard for his friends to realize that when Tony Rumbold returns to Washington from London about the middle of June he will be a baronet, 'Tenth of the line, and titled "Sir Anthony," and that charming little Felicity is "Lady Rumbold."

Capt. E. M. Everett, Mrs. E. H. Everett Here

Arriving from San Antonio last evening were Mrs. Edward Huntington Everett and Capt. Edward Milton Everett, who will visit Mrs. Everett Buchan on Massachusetts Avenue.

In honor of her guests Mrs. Buchan will entertain at a cocktail party on Wednesday, June 4, and will give a buffet dinner at her home on Saturday evening, June 7. Mrs. Everett visited in Washington a little more than a year ago, and has many friends in the international set, having lived in the Orient for many years.

Per Wijkmans Will Visit Wallaces Here

Back in the United States again with the new title of Swedish Minister to Canada is Per Wijkman, formerly attached to the Legation here. Mme. Wijkman is the former Miss Ruth Wallace, sister of Vice President Wallace, and Mme. Bruggmann, wife of the Minister of Switzerland.

The Wijkman's arrived in New York yesterday by boat from Lisbon and are expected to come here immediately for a visit with the Wallaces. Since their departure from Washington several years ago, Mr. Wijkman has served his government at Helsinki, in Finland, and then at the Swedish Foreign Office in Stockholm.

Tonight the Vice President and Mrs. Wallace will be honor guests at a dinner to be given by the Swedish Minister and Mme. Bostrom.

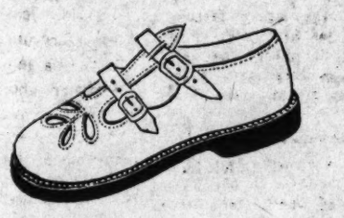

Mrs. Wilson Entertains

Mrs. Woodrow Wilson entertained at luncheon yesterday at her home, 2340 S Street.

Verve Is Woman's Greatest Asset Says Figure Expert and Nutritionist

Ida Jean Kain Visitor Here, Urges Simple Living

By Martha Ellyn

The Post Food Editor

WHAT the average woman should strive for is not so much beauty, as verve. That is the opinion of Ida Jean Kain, health and figure expert, who is the personification of all that she writes about in her daily column in The Washington Post.

This dynamic little nutritionist, who is a delegate to the National Nutrition Conference this week, is demonstrating in her own life how proper eating can produce bouyant health, a supple figure and spontaneity.

The idea of doing a column, advising women on health and figure, occurred to her while she was a dietitian at the Battle Creek Sanitarium. While in this work she was constantly being asked by both thin and fat women about improving their figures. This decided Miss Kain to be a specialist in weight, and so, after taking further special training in New York, she started her column on exercising and eating correctly.

Once a victim of paralysis, Miss Kain was able to bring herself again to be active—lithe, supple and bubbling with energy—and to enter into an extremely active and interesting life — all through the magic of exercise.

How does Miss Kain order her daily life? Does she practice what she preaches? What does she eat? What foods are included in her own menus? What exercise does she take? How much sleep does she get? How does she achieve verve?

Here is Miss Kain's detailed account of her daily life, which carries out her theory that one must establish work habits to accomplish the greatest amount of work.

Her Daily Schedule

Arises at 8 o'clock. Eats good breakfast, consisting of fruit juices, one egg, whole wheat toast, one cup of coffee. Works a half hour in garden in summer, or takes a walk other times of year. Goes to desk (in home) at 9 o'clock. Doesn't start work on too high key but works up to speed. Answers no telephone calls, girl takes messages. Works until 1. Eats lunch. Thinks there should be one hot dish for every meal. Usually eats a hot sandwich—perhaps bacon and tomato—cottage cheese, drinks milk. If she eats salad, has bouillon, whole wheat bread, milk and fresh fruit.

At 4 o'clock she takes calisthenics. Makes every movement count. Takes exercise for waist line, abdomen and hips. Goes on interviews in afternoon, never goes to luncheon. Attends teas and when invited to dinner does not diet, eats whatever is served, but no seconds. After 6 o'clock she becomes Mrs. Fred Beach.

A representative dinner is lean meat, two vegetables—greens and carrots — occasionally potatoes, whole wheat bread, butter, salad or relishes, fresh fruit (never pastries), milk. Reads after dinner. Goes to bed at 11 o'clock, must get 8½, preferably 9 hours sleep so that in morning feels as if she could lick the world. Never starts day feeling that work is too hard for her.

This program keeps her in good health and full of abundant energy. Whether or not the average woman can follow Miss Kain's schedule religiously or not, there are certain things that she can do if she would have the verve or buoyancy Miss Kain believes so essential for feminine charm. Here are some of her pointers:

A business girl can keep her figure if she exercises 10 minutes a day, but not haphazardly. If of fairly calm nature, she can start day with exercise, or end day with exercise. If an excitable person, she must not start or end day with exercises but take them—say at 5 o'clock, after office hours. If the business girl feels she can do but one calisthenics a day, she should do the side scissors because it helps the tummy, hips and thighs.

Most Are Swayback

The woman who spends her day at a desk should counteract this position with exercising of forearm bend and back stroke. Most women are swayback to some extent, and exercise should be taken to aid this weakness.

Walking in a sandpile in barefeet will strengthen both feet and legs. Women with undeveloped legs can do no better stunt than walk in sand. This also helps fallen arches.

Recreation is excellent for all as it stimulates mentally as well as physically. If the right food habits are established, anyone's weight can be corrected. Intelligent eating—not dieting—will correct anyone's weight.

When Miss Kain interviews celebrities she uses a different technique for the ones who have "arrived" and the "up-and-coming" ones. She thinks that the older stars deserve a lot of praise for they have worked diligently to improve their voice, posture and skin. Never do they mind saying that they have exercised. The young stars always say, "I don't exercise for I am lovely because I am." Miss Kain's answer to this is, "Some day you will to stay trim."

Miss Ida Jean Kain, known to many readers through her beauty column featured on this page, is in Washington this week as a delegate to the National Nutrition Conference. She, is shown above, sparkling with the verve that she recommends all women to strive and attain

Vitamin B2 Will Help You Stay Young

This is another in the series of articles by Ida Jean Kain on the adoption of new vitamin standards by the National Nutrition Conference. Miss Kain is a delegate to the conference.

By Ida Jean Kain

WE ARE INVARIABLY interested in anything that promises to keep us young longer, and vitamin B2 seems to hold out more promises of this kind than any other single food element.

Just to straighten out the record, this second member of the B complex is also known as vitamin G and, more specifically, as riboflavin. But under any name it is an extremely important factor in extending your best years.

The lack of this vitamin affects the appetite, muscle tone and digestive tract somewhat the same as lack of vitimin B1. Essentially, however, it is different. In combination with phosporus and protein, B2 forms a substance that is vital to all living cells and tissues. Scientists believe that premature old age may be largely due to an inadequate supply.

It has been stated by leading research scientists that "without liberal supplies of this vitamin, every cell must work at a disadvantage," and "it has been found that as the amount of vitamin G is increased, the evidence of greater health and vigor becomes more and more marked."

Essential Food Element

There is a suspicion that lack of B2 may be connected with cataracts of the eyes. Moreover, in some cases of night blindness, increased dosages of B2 have proved more effective than such treatment with vitamin A. There is plenty of evidence that this is one of the essential food elements. It is necessary for growth and for health and vitality at all ages.

Not long ago the National Food and Drug Administration recommended the addition of vitamin B2 along with vitamin B1 to enrich flour and yeast.

The council of nutrition for the defense program advocates this new standard of requirements: For the adult man, 1,000 Sherman-Bourquin Units daily; for the average woman, 932; adolescent girl, 1,000; boy, 1,333; child from 6 to 11, about 666 units; child from 1 to 5, 666 units; infant under 1, 333 units; expectant mother, 1,333 units; nursing mother, 1,667 units.

The Sherman-Bourquin Units contained in food rich in B2 are listed below. Clip and save this list:

Mary Haworth's Mail

Girl Learns That Young Man Whom She Has Loved Since Childhood Will Spend Summer Here; Theirs Is Formal Acquaintanceship; May She Call Him?

DEAR MARY HAWORTH: This problem has been bothering me for four years. I am a girl of 18 and have spent most of my life in New York—moving here to Washington with my parents two years ago. While living in New York, I fell in love with our minister's son, who is about my age. The only time I ever saw him was at church affairs. When our friends teased him about liking me, he always said he never thought of me except as a friend. And when they teased me about him, I always said I disliked him very much.

I don't know why I said this, because I was very much in love with him, even though I never had a date with him. My parents didn't permit me to go out with boys at that time. Although we often saw each other at church, we never spoke unless we had to. However, in church and Sunday school, we were always aware of each other, or so it seemed—because our glances frequently met. That was all. Now, I have been away from him for two years, and in the meantime, have fallen in love with another young man, but still I have never forgotten him. I am sure I will always be in love with him, even if I should marry someone else.

Some time ago his parents moved to this city—but he remained in New York to continue his studies for the ministry. However, he probably will spend some time with his parents this summer and I want to know if I should take the lead in getting in touch with him, if he comes. I have always felt that he loves me as much as I love him, but refused to admit it, just as I did.

After leaving New York I kept up correspondence with a girl there, who happened to be in his company one day and remarked that she had just had a letter from me. Immediately he asked how I was and where I was living. You see, when we moved, I never even told him I was leaving, so that was the first he knew of our coming here. Please tell me what to do about this summer, and I shall be forever grateful. R. T. B.

Proceed on Theory That Friendship Exists

DEAR R. T. B.: One of the compensations of growing up is the privilege of behaving in a grown-up way—which is to say, with poise and friendliness. Now that you are no longer a shy little girl who never had a beau in her life, but, rather, a young lady who (I assume) takes beaux as a matter of course—it would seem a natural, a graciously sociable gesture, for you to make arrangements to see John Smith (to give the boy a name) if and when he comes here to spend the summer with his parents.

The fact that your previous acquaintance consisted exclusively of strangled "hellos" and eloquent glances should be forgotten, and you should now proceed on the theory that you two are old friends—friends of four years' standing, whose parents know each other well and favorably and would casually endorse a reunion meeting between you youngsters.

With that as a premise from which to act, you might say to your mother that you hear (or believe) John Smith will be spending some time here with his parents this summer and you sure would like to see him—just to hear what he knows, if anything, about the boys and girls you knew in New York. Ask her if she doesn't think it would be all right to telephone John's mother and get a line on when he will be here—supposing he is coming. If she is a reasonable person she should amiably approve of the suggestion, and might even stand by, while you telephone, to put in a word of greeting to John's mother herself.

Then ring the Smith household, ask for Mrs. Smith, recall yourself and your parents to her (as former members of her husband's congregation in New York) and ask her, quite simply and frankly, if John is expected here for the summer. Say that you are not sure he will remember you—but you and he have several mutual friends, and you would love to see him and have him meet some of your friends here, if he is going to be in town for a while. Then you might say, "Mrs. Smith, mother wants to speak to you—" and then let your mother step in and take over. This should reassure Mrs. Smith that your social behavior is irreproachable—free of any taint of sly boy-chasing behind your parents' back.

Of, if your parents would let you give a party, you might wait until about the time you think John will be here, and then telephone his home to ask him to come as a very special guest—or even as honor guest, if you like. By this, I mean that you could make it clear to him that the party date is "movable;" that you want to plan the party for an evening when he can be there, because you want him to meet your Washington friends, and also to talk over New York friends with him.

The fact that you and he knew the same people, worshipped at the same church, and probably lived in the same community in New York City is sufficient justification for your extending a warmly welcoming hand to him here. Any reference, even by implication, to your school girl crush on him should be avoided—by you, at least. If he brings up the subject, that's a different story. In that case, agree with him cordially that you certainly did think, at the time, there was a spark there, although you would have denied it, then, with your dying breath. Then switch the conversation to other channels—your old friends in New York, his studies, his plans for the future, life in the Nation's Capital, etc., etc., giving both of you a chance to die over if you really do have anything significant to say to each other.

In other words, when and if given a chance, start from scratch in cultivating his acquaintance. If a substantial friendship develops, it will be time enough then to switch back to a light-hearted analysis of what was involved in you earlier "awareness" of each other. M. H.

Modern Touch to Period Rooms

The decorators are past masters of giving to period rooms a freshness of today—by accenting dignified eighteenth century furniture with a nineteenth century "Gone With the Wind" background—by using Pennsylvania Dutch details in early American maple rooms—by using Victorian cabbage roses with modern furniture.

Ornate Cages For Birds Date Back to Past

By Elizabeth MacRea Boykin

THE BIRDS in the gilded cages had pretty luxurious lives we'd say, to judge by the exhibition of antique bird cages we saw recently. Some of them, made for exotic tropical birds, put our first blithe robin very much in the shade.

The most regal abodes for birds were the Chinese cages, with all sorts of precious stones and metals used for ornamentation, gold, silver, coral, amethyst, jade, turquoise, ivory, amber, tortoise shell. We were particularly touched—and enchanted—by the service facilities too . . . one live worm holder was intricately carved and equipped with a pair of ivory tongs for feeding the birds fastidiously. While there were drinking troughs of jade, seed cups of ivory, carved perches and swings of ivory.

Italian cages were on positively palatial scale—one was of glass and Sheffield silver with gold trim. An iron and wood cage, also Italian, had the form of the famous Rialto bridge. An ambitious English cage of Chippendale design was a two-story affair with a balcony, the whole thing elaborately carved and inlaid. A Swiss cage, three stories high, fancifully carved and painted, was actually a miniature Swiss chalet. Dutch observatory towers and Japanese tea houses were also made in miniature to provide comfortable quarters for pet birds. American masterpieces included a cage in the shape of a tugboat, with deck space for the birds to exercise and a bamboo smoke stack.

THE GLAMOROUS clothes that headline the news—today it's the American designer who's behind them!

If you have a flair for style there may be a place for you in this growing field of dress design. ou can try out your talents in home study, in designing for yourself and your friends.

Charts and diagrams explain the rules of figure flattery, show you how to make your pattern.

Your first step is to sketch your idea and plan your trimmings. The parts of the body you will want to flatter specially are—neck, bust, hips.

The neckline is important as a frame for the face. A square neckline may be unbecoming to many, but a V or deep oval is generally flattering.

Be careful not to accent the curve of the bust too much; also a line encircling the widest part of the hips adds pounds to the wearer. Diagonal lines are kinder, slenderizing.

Next, with pins and shears, you start to work out your model in muslin on a dress form.

In our 40-page booklet, Dress Designing For a Smart Career, a professional designer gives easy lessons with charts and diagrams in dress designing and pattern making. Has information on fabrics, colors, sources of style; tips on job getting.

D.C. Employers Aid Draft, Hershey Says

We have had "no trouble" in Washington with employers not cooperating with local boards to determine occupational deferment of necessary men, an official of District draft headquarters reported yesterday, commenting on a speech by the acting chief of Selective Service.

Brig. Gen. Lewis B. Hershey, deputy director, said in Boston yesterday that a major problem of the Selective Service system is a lack of understanding of the general requirements for national defense by the people in general and the employer in particular in relation to proper classification of registrants.

The fact that Washington is not an industrial city was given by District draft headquarters as a possible reason for absence here of the problem mentioned by Gen. Hershey.

However, a member of Local Board No. 10 declared that his board had experienced "considerable difficulties" because employers would not ask occupational deferment of their employes.

Won't Ask Deferment

Neither the chief of police, the chief of the fire department nor the District Commissioners will ask deferment of their employes, he said. Yet when members of such organizations as the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the Navy were called for classification, he said, it was a policy of Board No. 10 to comply if the head of the respective department requested deferment on occupational grounds.

The spokesman for Local Board No. 10 said that he believed if the District Commissioners would ask exemption of their indivadual necessary employes on occupational grounds the police and fire departments would follow suit.

National draft headquarters in commenting upon Gen. Hershey's recent advocacy of inducting class 1-B registrants (men found fit for limited military service), said there is no definite plan at this time for induction of that group of registrants.

Then Becomes Reserve

A spokesman for national headquarters pointed out that each selectee automatically becomes a member of the reserve when he completes his 12 months' training. As the President has power to continue these men on active service, he said, no shortage of manpower is anticipated.

However, he said, no legislation would be necessary to call Class 1-B men to active service should they become necessary to replace more able-bodied selectees needed for more strenuous jobs. The local draft boards would simply notify Class 1-B registrants to report for induction.

Enrollment of nearly 400 volunteer workers to handle the Selective Service registration of approximately 5,000 Washingtonians July 1 was begun yesterday by defense committees of the District Department of the American Legion.

Cab Driver Asserts He's 'For' Not 'Against'

Donald Williams, a cab driver, of 1003 Seventeenth Street Northwest, called The Post yesterday to say he was misquoted Wednesday in a story reporting Washingtonians' reactions to the President's speech. Williams was quoted as follows:

"But there's one thing I'd like to know," he said. "Does a national emergency mean anybody who says anything against the Government will be thrown in jail? If so, I'm against it."

Williams says the quotation should have read, "If so, I'm for it."

Home Hygiene Class Enrollment Closes

Enrollment for a class in home hygiene and care of the sick, which will be sponsored jointly by the District Chapter of the American Red Cross and the Council of Social Agencies will close tonight, it was announced.

The class will meet at the Garnett-Patterson Community Center, Tenth and U Streets Northwest, every Tuesday and Thursday, from 7:30 to 9:30 p. m., with Mrs. Perle Wiseman as instructor.

Navy Acquires New Liner America

NEW ROLE FOR HER—The liner America, largest passenger vessel ever built in the United States, is being acquired by the Maritime Commission for delivery to the Navy

Liner America To Join Navy As Auxiliary

By the Associated Press

The $17,500,000 liner America, built to symbolize this country's marine comeback, is going to join the Navy.

In a brief announcement yesterday, the Maritime Commission said the America was one of several ships being acquired for the Navy as auxiliaries. The others were not identified.

Both the Navy and the Maritime Commission declined to speculate on what use would be made of the America. The liner, however, is regarded as ideal for carrying troops or marines. Another possibility was that it might be converted into an airplane carrier, but this was not thought probable because it would involve considerable work and expense.

Intended as the United States' bid for the glamorous transatlantic trade, the America never entered this service because of the war. Instead, she has been in the Caribbean cruise service.

Largest merchant ship ever built in this country, the America was constructed at Newport News, Va., by the Newport News Shipbuilding & Dry Dock Co., for the United States Lines.

The contract, the first awarded by the Maritime Commission in its long range construction program, was let in October, 1937, and she was launched in August, 1939, and delivered for service in July, 1940.

On her maiden voyage from Newport News to New York, the America carried many members of Congress and other notables.

With a "normal sea speed" of 22 knots, the America is capable of considerably higher speed.

Of 26,482 gross tons, the liner is 723 feet long, 93 feet 3 inches wide and 45 feet 4½ inches deep, and has a cruising radius of 11,000 miles.

Britain to Register Civilian Foreigners

London, May 28 (AP).—The Ministry of Labor announced tonight that it was ordering "industrial registration" of civilian foreigners in Britain, mostly refugees of nine European nationalities including Italian, French and German, during June and July.

Registration, a statement said, will apply to men between the ages of 16 and 65 and women from 16 to 50

Justice Welds U. S. and British, President Roosevelt Says

By the Associated Press

Albany, N. Y., May 28.—President Roosevelt asserted today law courts of England and the United States, surviving in "almost universal destruction of temples of justice," bind the two nations in a "common appreciation of the dignity of man."

In a telegram read at celebration of the 250th anniversary of New York's Supreme Court, the President declared "there is once again hardly another place on earth except this Western Hemisphere and the British Commonwealth where the scales of justice are still evenly held by a figure unashamed."

"In much of the rest of the world of 1941 the dispensation of justice has been made into a hollow myth by the mighty arms of aggressors and dictators," he said. "People there do not stand before the bars of justice as equals but as victors and victims, as racial and political superiors and inferiors. Whatever courts are still open are merely instruments to carry out the will of military rulers at the point of a gun.

"It is therefore of no little significance that the people and the government of England, through Sir Wilfred Greene, master of the rolls, as their representative, have joined with you in celebrating, in the midst of almost universal destruction of temples of justice, the survival of these citadels of modern civilized living."

Irish Veterans Pledged To Support President

Stating that he spoke in response to requests from various posts of the Irish War Veterans, G. L. Cassidy, national commander, issued the following declaration yesterday:

"We, the Irish War Veterans, pledge ourselves and sons to the annunciation of the President's speech, and for whatever action he may see fit for the preservation of this country. It is now time for action, instead of words."

BEER is the beverage of the people. It belongs to rich and poor alike. And certainly the poor man deserves as good a glass of beer as the rich man.

If a brewer makes enough beer and all of ONE quality . . . if the brewery has the latest scientific equipment, if the brewer sells most all of his beer close to the brewery, delivered by his own trucks . . . thus saving shipping costs and "middle men's" profits . . .

Then that brewer can use these savings to buy the highest-priced Malt and the Costliest Hops . . . and still sell that beer for a DIME!

Gunther's has accomplished this amazing fact. Gunther's has become so popular that we sell almost ALL of our beer within our own trucking area.

And as our volume grew by leaps and bounds we kept on buying finer machinery, finer equipment, finer grain, malt and hops.

TODAY NO BREWER in the U.S.A. IS USING COSTLIER MALT OR COSTLIER HOPS THAN GUNTHER'S. AND THAT GOES FOR BEERS SELLING HERE FOR 15¢ . . . or ANY PRICE!

You see, Gunther's order and pay for only the top 10% of the malt and hops; therefore 90% of the beer today must definitely be brewed from less costly ingredients. Only 10% of the hops and malt bought by all brewers cost as much as ALL the malt and hops used in Gunther's!

But that's not all! Gunther's has scientific controls and brewing equipment NOT possessed by any other brewer in this part of the country.

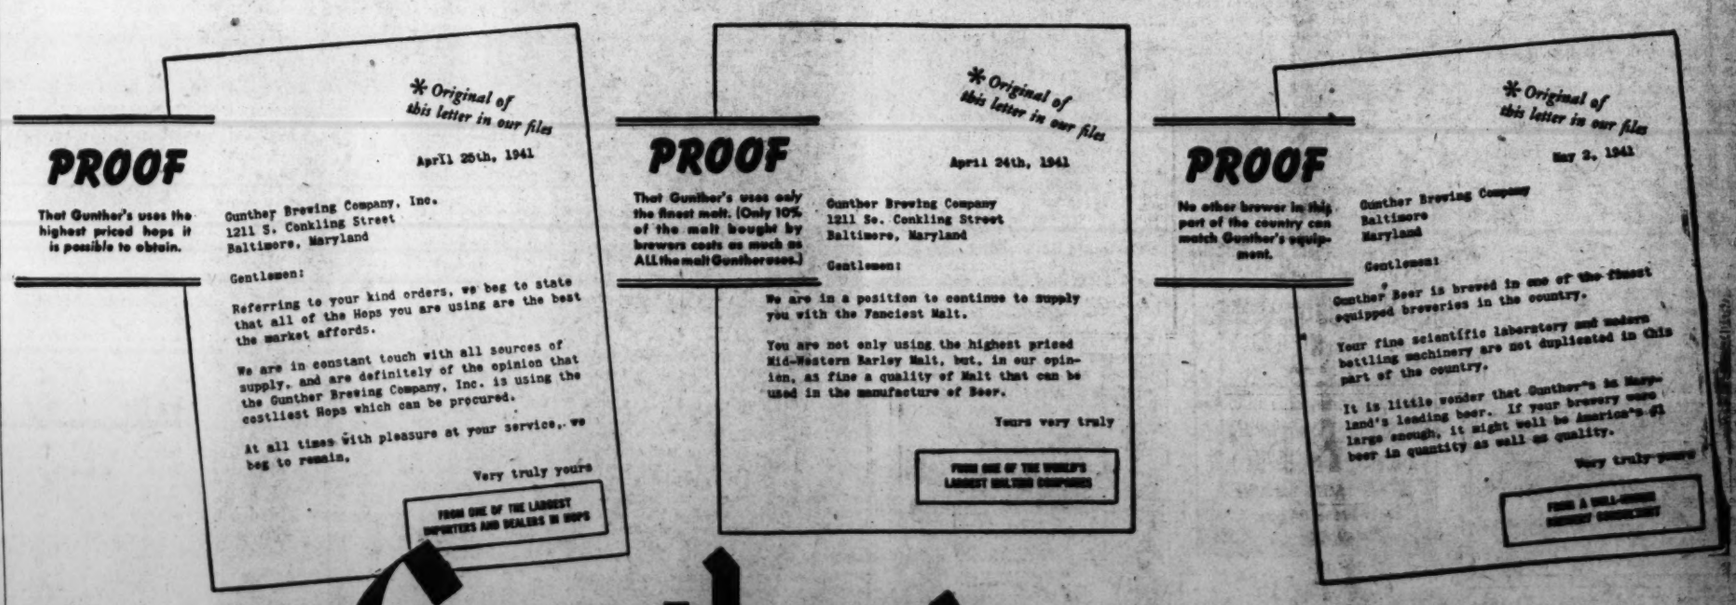

Gunther's even has a machine to take the air out of the top of the bottles . . . like a vacuum-pack . . . so you don't get flat tasting beer! There are only a few such machines in the entire world!

When ANYONE offers you a beer "as good as Gunther's" . . . stop for a moment—say "I'm from Missouri, show me the PROOF!" Words and claims don't make fine beer. Only the finest malt and hops, only the finest brewing equipment can make and bottle the finest beer!

No matter what beer you're drinking now . . . No matter what price you pay for beer . . . try Gunther's! Its dry, smooth beer-y flavor will grow on you. Drink it for a week and you'll want that Gunther flavor ever after!

The Federal Diary

By Jerry Kluttz

It was revealed yesterday by the Civil Service Commission that more than 182,000 Federal jobs—of which 23,932 are in Washington—are eligible to be covered under the merit system by the Ramspeck Act. This is 50,000 more than Civil Service officials predicted would be affected. The commission, after a survey of all departments and agencies, announced that 24,000 temporary jobs were tabulated, of which 1,160 were in the District. "It is probable," the commission announced, "that included in this group are some positions which are of a permanent nature which will be brought into the classified service, although the purely temporary positions will not be."

Agencies here and the number of employes in each that will be brought under the merit system: Agriculture, 5,451; Commerce, 175; Interior, 696; Justice, 6; Labor, 59; Navy, 342; Post Office, 20; State, 17; Treasury, 2,212; War, 1,290; Civil Service Commission, 19; Employes Compensation Commission, 76; Executive Offices, 219, and Federal Loan, 4,452.

Also Federal Power, 158; Federal Security, 417; Federal Trade, 279; Federal Works; 4,234; GAO, 3,049; Advisory Committee for Aeronautics, 42; Park and Planning Commission, 10; Gallery of Art, 46; Railroad Retirement, 7; SEC, 286; Smithsonian, 58; Tariff Commission, 7; Maritime Commission, 68; Veterans Administration, 23; NLRB, 171, and CAB, 34.

John B. Hutson has been appointed president of the Commodity Credit Corporation to succeed Carl B. Robbins and M. Clifford Townsend, former Governor of Indiana, has been appointed to succeed Hutson as director of the Office of Agricultural Defense Relations. The office was created to take over the agriculture duties of the old defense commission . . . Tariff Commissioner A. Manuel Fox has resigned to become an American member of the board to manage the new American - Chinese currency stabilization fund. He had been with the commission since 1923 . . . Maury Maverick, who was barely beaten for reelection as mayor of San Antonio, is being talked of as an assistant to Mayor LaGuardia in his civilian defense agency.

The space problem grows more critical as new employes are being hired here at the rate of 175 daily. The Post Office Department has asked Congress for $25,000 to equip and supply its hearing rooms, corridors and basement so that employes may be put to work in those places . . . Meantime, Clay Guthridge, space control chief, is dickering with the owners of half a dozen hotels and apartment houses for space. He has his eye on the Dupont Circle Apartment to house Leon Henderson's price control agency . . . Navy has banned parking in the rear of its building and now 250 employes are making a new attempt to get permission to park their cars on park land. The Navy land will be used to construct a new building.

Yesterday's executive order will tend to "freeze" Federal employes in their present jobs. It doesn't prohibit direct transfers, but it does forbid the commission from certifying a Federal employe to another job for the duration of the emergency. Employes are frequently on one or more registers and the commission has had no way of checking to determine whether a person it certifies from one register already has been appointed from another. Of course, the employe has been taking his choice of the jobs. The order also prevents an employe from taking Civil Service tests.

The only way in which an employe can get around the new restrictions is to get approval from his present employer. "Such assent," the President said, "shall be based solely upon the findings, after due consideration, by such department or office that the person can render better service for the Government in the position for which the examination is held or for which certification is requested." Thousands of persons had planned to take tests, particularly the stenographer and typist exam, to get status so they won't have to take noncompetitive exams under the Ramspeck Act.

The commission believes that these employes should be encouraged to take the tests and it is of the opinion that they won't have difficulty in getting approval.

No Regimentation Here

Delegates to the Nutrition Conference here yesterday ate lunch as follows: Security Administrator McNutt, soup, salad, buttermilk, strawberries; Vice President Wallace, cheese sandwich, milk, ice cream; Paul Cornell, N. Y., expert, 3 glasses beer; George Perrott, conference secretary, nothing.

Kissing Missing

Jean Cavanaugh paid her respects to the District Commissioners yesterday as "Miss Washington of 1941," according to precedent. But Commissioner Hazen broke a precedent by failing to plant a kiss on her cheek.

Why? Because there were no photographers present.

D.C. to Honor Its War Dead Tomorrow

Many Memorial Day Services Are Scheduled; Parade to Be Held

In the midst of a war-torn world the Nation will pause tomorrow to honor the soldiers who died for America in other wars.

With flags and wreaths and speeches, Washington will mark this solemn day in the traditions of Memorial Days gone by.

Federal and District workers will get a holiday as will employes of many business firms and retail stores. The National Gallery of Art will be open from 10 a. m. to 5 p. m. in anticipation of the large throng of holiday visitors.

The Memorial Day parade, with marching units of the veterans' organizations, Army, Navy and Marine Corps, will start at 9:45 a. m. The parade will go down Constitution Avenue from Ninth Street, past the reviewing stand at Sixteenth Street to Eighteenth Street. Brig. Gen. Albert L. Cox, director of the District's Selective Service program, is the grand marshal, and William Leo Collins, of the District American Legion, and C. Francis McCarthy, chef-de-gare of the Forty-and-Eight, are his aides.

Services in Arlington

At 11:30 a. m. the ceremonies at Arlington Cemetery will begin when Heywood Saunders, department vice commander of the D. C. American Legion, places the President's wreath on the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, in ceremonies under the auspices of the Grand Army of the Republic. James G. Yaden, past department commander, U. S. W. V., will place a wreath for the G. A. R. Memorial Day Corporation, of which he is president. A score other organizations will participate.

Following the wreath placing, the ceremonies will be continued in Arlington Amphitheater, with presentation of the colors. Brig. Gen. Frank T. Hines, Veterans' Administrator, will be the principal speaker, and James Melton, opera star, will sing, accompanied by the Marine Band.

Sergt. Alvin C. York, World War hero, will attend as the aide-de-camp to Joseph C. Menendez, commander-in-chief, V. F. W.

At the tomb of Admiral George Dewey, in Bethlehem Chapel of Washington Cathedral, the Navy will pay tribute to its honored dead on Memorial Day at 9 a. m.

The war dead in military cemeteries of Nazi-held France and Belgium will not be forgotten. Symbolic services in honor of the boys who fell in 1917-18 will be held at Arlington, in lieu of the usual rites at the cemeteries themselves. Symbolic crosses have been erected, representing the eight burial grounds in Belgium and France, where more than 30,000 Americans lie. The services, which will begin at 2:20 p. m. at Argonne Cross, will be sponsored by the American Legion.

G. U. to Honor Its Dead

Georgetown University Law School will honor its 29 students who died in battle, with exercises at the Memorial Tablet. Col. F. Granville Munson and Representative Paul Joseph Kilday will speak at the rites, which begin at 10 a. m.

In National Cemetery at Soldiers' House, Memorial Day will be observed with ceremonies beginning at 9 a. m. Representative Martin F. Smith, of Washington, will speak, and Samuel J. McWilliams, past department commander of the United Spanish War Veterans, will read Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

Chief Frank J. Wilson, of the United States Secret Service, and a group of his operatives will place a wreath on the grave of Robert K. Webster, Secret Service man who was murdered by a notorious smuggler.

A floral anchor will be launched on the Potomac by members of the Fleet Reserve Association, Branch No. 4, at the Watergate at 11 a. m., honoring sailors who died in action.

Vincent B. Costello Post, No. 15, American Legion, will hold services at the grave of Vincent B. Costello, in Arlington, at 11:30 a. m. tomorrow.

Bureau of Engraving Rites

The Bureau of Engraving and Printing, Post No. 23, American Legion, will hold its memorial services tonight, beginning at 8:15 p. m. in the Bureau of Engraving and Printing Annex Auditorium. Gen. Hines, Rep. Jennings Randolph, Maj. Edward Dolan, of the Treasury, and Department Commander Hargraves will be the speakers.

Memorial services under the auspices of the United Veterans of American Wars will be held today at the Government Printing Office, Harding Hall, at 8 p. m.

Young Pianist Is Presented

Felian Garzia presents Jean McCandlish in a piano recital Wednesday night at the Arts Club. Program of compositions by Bach, Brahms, Chopin, MacDowell and Mozart.

It was pleasant to observe last evening at the Arts Club the progress of Jean McCandlish, a young pianiste with a talent for poetic treatment of the instrument. Not only has her mastery of technique increased, but she is also disclosing a deeper insight into the matter of interpretation. She was not timid about humanizing Bach's B flat major prelude and fugue with an emotional flush that made it more than a formal pattern. The B minor intermezzo of Brahms was delicately inflected, and into the G minor rhapsody she put some of the necessary gruffness without overdoing it.

BROWN

Her Chopin group was uneven because the B flat minor scherzo is as yet beyond her intellectual grasp, and she will have to be more mature before comprehending the morbidezza and spiritual anguish with which the music is imbued. Her reading of the B major prelude, however, was delightful, and the berceuse was handled with suavity.

One commends Miss McCandlish for the attention she paid to Edward MacDowell by reviving his neglected suite of "Marionettes," a work of imaginative charm in the real romantic vein of Schumann. She also played his E minor polonaise, and one hopes that she will go on to a study of the sonatas. The finale of the recital consisted of two movements from Mozart's C minor concerto, for which Felian Garzia supplied the orchestral part at another piano.

Norman Frauenheim gives a piano recital Wednesday night in the Queen Elizabeth Room of the Raleigh Hotel. Program of compositions by Byrd, Bull, Couperin, Rameau, Bach, Debussy and Falla.

While Norman Frauenheim delayed his usual recital until the twilight of the season, it was well worth the wait. His program last evening in the Raleigh Hotel was informal in that the selections were announced from the platform with occasional comments. Possibly this informality was just what he needed to be completely at ease, for he played with an engaging naturalness to which his fine technique was subservient.

His program, well prepared as to form and length, was consistently chronological. He began with pieces by William Byrd and John Bull, and slipped down the years to Couperin, Rameau and Bach. The English and French exhibits were crisply delineated, and the Bach fantasia and fugue in G minor was handled with assurance. The fugue was taken at too slow a tempo for its tonal values, but the fantasia had a free and soaring flight.

In his treatment of several Debussy preludes he used tonal shadings to admirable effect, and the poesy of the music was projected with a glow of feeling. He closed with a vigorous performance of Falla's "Danza ritual del fuego." It was a recital which proved again, if proof be needed, that Mr. Frauenheim is a sensitive artist as well as an accomplished pianist.

Two Soldiers, Civilian Hurt In Auto Collision

Three persons, including Maj. Rufus R. Lutz, U. S. A., of 1740 P Street Northwest, were injured when an Army car was in collision with a passenger automobile at Fourteenth Street and Constitution Avenue Northwest, yesterday.

The major's car was being operated by Private Glenn J. Schmitt, 28, of 2115 C Street Northwest, when it struck the automobile of George Ludwig, 36, of Rochester, N. Y.

Mrs. Mary Ludwig, 32, wife of the driver of the private machine, suffered a fracture of the right shoulder, while the two soldiers escaped with cuts and bruises. Maj. Lutz and Mrs. Ludwig were taken to Emergency Hospital for treatment. Private Schmitt received first aid at the War Department.

Liquor Dealer, Cabbie Seize Fleeing Robber

Ben Atlas walked into his liquor store at 710 H Street Northeast Tuesday night and to his surprise was confronted by a strange young man behind the counter.

"Yes, sir," spoke the stranger, "what can I do for you?"

At the time Atlas entered, the stranger not only was behind the counter, but he had both hands in Atlas' cash register.

"You can put back that money," Atlas replied, "it belongs to me."

All was confusion for a moment. The young man started to run. Atlas grabbed at him, but he broke away. Outside, however, a cab driver seeing the commotion collared the fugitive.

Police were called; a crowd gathered. Atlas walked into his shop again, wondering the whereabouts of George Jocam, the store's clerk who was supposed to be present.

Atlas found him in a back room with both arms raised, held at bay by a young man with gun.

The gunman turned his weapon on Atlas, warned both men to remain where they were and started out.

At the front door he confronted the crowd, but his nerve never failed him. He waved his weapon, the crowd scattered and the man walked to his automobile and drove away.

His identity, however, was revealed by his companion and his arrest followed.

When questioned by police, the first suspect said Atlas frightened him. "I thought he was a holdup man, too," detectives quoted the suspect.

Both men were held without charges last night pending investigation of other recent robberies.

Keech to Draft Bill Paving Way for Early Congressional Study Of $44,000,000 Plan

Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech today is expected to start work on enabling legislation to pave the way for early Congressional consideration of the $44,000,000 Whitehurst highway planning survey.

He was instructed by the Commissioners yesterday to draft a special bill after the city heads had announced they approved "in general" the elaborate highway program.

The Commissioners, however, were divided over the proposal of Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, to boost the local gasoline tax by 2 cents in order to complete the various projects within eight years.

Commissioner John Russell Young came out strongly in favor of the gas tax increase. Commissioner Melvin C. Hazen, however, said a 1-cent increase "might be logical," but suggested all recommendations be deferred until it is known what new Federal taxes are anticipated under the national defense program.

Brig. Gen. Charles W. Kutz, the new engineer commissioner, reserved comment until he has had an opportunity to further study the Whitehurst report.

Northeast Businessmen Study Traffic Problems

The District's traffic problems were aired last night before a meeting of the Northeast Business Men's Association, at which Traffic Director William A. Van Duzer and Capt. H. C. Whitehurst, director of highways, were the guest speakers.

Capt. Whitehurst predicted the day when Washington's traffic headaches would be solved by a program that "must include" radiating highways from the center of the city, branch highways between all roads leading out of Washington, and widened downtown streets and terminals.

Members of the association voted to concur in principle, with Whitehurst's recently proposed, long-range traffic plan.

A Fair Trade Is No Robbery

Walter Metz, jr., 1727 Taylor Street Northwest, and Albert W. Shupienis, 1733 Twentieth Street Northwest, had their own autos back in their respective garages last night.

The trouble began when they both attended the same party Tuesday evening. Metz left in what he thought was his own auto until he drove into his garage and reached for the light switch. It wasn't there. In fact, his auto wasn't there. He was driving Shupienis' car.

He returned to the party to find Shupienis had driven home in his auto, thinking it was his own. After much hue, cry, apologies and the aid of police the autos were returned.

Police Get Rebuke for Dictograph

Use of Machine In Ecklund Case Investigation Called 'A Great Mistake'

Justice James M. Proctor of the District Court yesterday rebuked the Metropolitan police for eavesdropping on a conversation between a lawyer and John Eugene Eklund, 25-year-old accused slayer.

Eklund will go on trial before the justice Monday for the killing of three colored men here last autumn by a mysterious "lone sniper." His attorney, James R. Kirkland, asked Justice Proctor to suppress the evidence of some bullets the police dug out of a tree near the Hot Shoppe, across the Highway Bridge.

Kirkland asserted the police were led to these bullets by information they obtained by eavesdropping with a dictograph, when Eklund talked to Attorney Franklyn Yasmer at detective headquarters.

Summoned as a witness for Eklund, John A. Singerhoff, a Post reporter, identified the articles in which he exposed the fact that a dictograph was used in this manner. Singerhoff said that Inspector Bernard Thompson, chief of detectives, first denied and later admitted that the machine was used.

William R. Maloney, special assistant Attorney General, testified that when he was investigating wire tapping for the Senate Interstate Commerce Committee he talked to Thompson. The detective chief admitted the eavesdropping, said Maloney, and supplied a transcript of the conversation.

The transcript was in court yesterday but was not placed in evidence, so its contents remained a secret which Justice Proctor called "of the highest privilege." Justice Proctor said he would not even look at the document, unless Eklund's counsel placed it in evidence.

Justice Proctor said he would not for a moment approve the use of the dictograph, which he described as "a great mistake on the part of the police." However, he found that there was no evidence that there was any connection between the bullets and the eavesdropping and refused to suppress the evidence.

The District Attorney's office explains it had nothing to do with the eavesdropping.

Nelson B. Bell About the Showshops

Three Notable Pictures Receive Final Tributes

Continuing Films Worth Everyone's Attention; Glen Echo Park Prepares for Holiday Hordes; This, That and the Other About the Theater

FOR THE BENEFIT of those who tuned in late, it is worth a reminder that three of the most notable screen productions of the year still are on view on downtown screens.

"Fantasia," now in its third week as a "road show" attraction at the National, is an unparalleled phantasmagoria of sight and sound. There is nothing in the earlier history of the cinema with which it can be compared. Based on eight of the world's great musical compositions, played by the Philadelphia Symphony Orchestra, under the conductorship of Leopold Stokowski, it has been given imaginative screen animation by Walt Disney in several of his most startling moods.

BELL

"Citizen Kane," at RKO-Keith's, is the picture that has caused Orson Welles to be called a genius. The biographical study of a great publisher, it has been produced and photographed in revolutionary fashion, with Welles, in the title role, heading a splendid but little known cast. The story is tightly integrated and told with sweep and power.

"That Hamilton Woman," at Loew's Palace, costars Vivien Leigh and Laurence Olivier in the historical romance of Lady Hamilton and Lord Nelson, hero of the British navy. It is Alexander Korda in one of his most expansive efforts and accords Miss Leigh a little the better of the costellar casting. Mr. Korda, incidentally, has not failed to draw a few lessons on the value of national preparedness from the past.

All of these are "musts" for any discriminating picturegoer who wishes to be conversant with the best there is to be seen on the current screen. And these words are the last you will hear of them here.

If the Weather Will Only Hold

General Manager Leonard B. Schloss and his cohorts out at Glen Echo Park are practically breaking their backs. With Memorial Day, the first big holiday of the summer, falling on Friday, it is incumbent upon them to have everything in readiness by tonight for what is expected to be one of the greatest three-day weekends in the history of the 40-acre amusement resort. The Crystal Swimming Pool will open tomorrow morning at 9:30 and its turnstiles will not be stopped until 11:30 p. m. The amusements and concessions will begin operations at noon. Dancing begins in the Spanish Garden Ballroom at 9 p. m., and continues to midnight. Admission to the park is free and no concession or individual amusement charge will be increased.

"The Voice in the Night," another of those British-made hits in which Henry Hiser seems to be specializing at his Hiser Theater, Bethesda, Md., will open on Sunday. It has Clive Brook and Diana Wynyard, stars of the Academy Award winner, "Cavalcade," as its costars and was directed by Anthony Asquith, who presided over the making of "Pygmalion," George Bernard Shaw's first picturized play. At a recent "sneak" preview 90 per cent of the audience were enthusiastic on their report cards.

The War Fever Is Spreading

There is something about a soldier. There is also something about a Roxyette. Merge the best features of both and you ought to have something extra special. That, at least, is what they're hoping down at the Earle, where, beginning tomorrow, the Roxyettes will go completely military in honor of Memorial Day. Their first number will be a tap precision routine in the West Point manner; their second, a Greek creation in the skirted uniforms of the Evzone soldiers. The idea is to salute all the soldiers of Democracy. And how those gals can salute, when they put their minds and feet to it!

As-You-Were-Remarking Note

Little's Film Poses Problem Of Social Law

By Richard L. Coe

"FLIGHT FROM DESTINY," Warner Brothers' picturization of a story by Anthony Berkeley, adapted to the screen by Barry Trivers, with Geraldine Fitzgerald, Thomas Mitchell, Jeffrey Lynn, James Stephenson, Mona Maris, Jonathan Hale, David Bruce, Thurston Hall, Mary Gordon, John Eldredge, Hardie Albright, William Forrest, Weldon Heyburn, DeWolf Hopper, Alexander Lockwood, Frank Reicher, Willie Best and Libby Taylor. Directed by Vincent Sherman. Previewed Monday morning, May 26, At the Little Theater.

In "Flight From Destiny" the Warner Studio treats its favorite subject to a new slant. In the Little Theater's new film, the Burbank Brothers continue their dalliance with murder, but replace their more familiar gangsters, ladies of the evening, etc., with such gentler folk as loftier professions afford. The result is a picture of consuming interest and provocative argument.

That admirable actor, Thomas Mitchell plays an understanding professor who learns his days are numbered. In the way of universities which cast off instructors when they reach a certain age regardless of their influence, the college decides it would be better for him to finish his life in inactivity. Casting about for something to do, the man comes upon a domestic crisis in the lives of two students whose courtship took place in his classroom. The boy, a promising artist, is apparently under the influence of a worldly beauty and his entire life is on the brink of ruin.

The professor dotes on action. He uncovers a counterfeiting plot in the salons of art, in which his pupil has unwittingly become the leading figure. Now he is at the mercy of the sleek adventuress whose family hates her and whose friends are nil. She would, figures the professor, be better off dead. So he kills her.

Law in His Own Hands

But the fates are busy and point suspicion to the boy whom the professor sought to save. Ultimately the professor's problem is to convince the world he was justified in taking the law into his own hands.

Such, then, is the novelty of "Flight From Destiny," to which the question "What would you do if you had only six months to live?" serves merely as an introduction. The problem which has fascinated Author Berkeley is more "Is killing ever justified?" and his answer is an emphatic "No." Naturally for an organized society any other answer would be impossible (war apparently being the exception that proves the rule), and "Flight From Destiny" does its duty by law and order.

With Mitchell in the lead and a fine supporting cast, the film has a tower of strength in its acting. The big Irishman is intensely moving as the professor—nor is he without humor. An unfortunately poignant touch to his portrayal is his own present illness resulting from a severe motor accident which has Mitchell's friends and fans seriously worried.

The striking Mona Maris is first-rate as the evil besauty, while Jeffrey Lynn is excellent in a role that contrasts sharply with his more saccharine parts. Miss Fitzgerald has not an outstanding role; James Stephenson, Jonathan Hale and Mary Gordon have other leading assignments.

First Auto

Having completed her role in Joan Crawford's film, "A Woman's Face," Marjorie Main bought a new car, the first car she has ever owned.

As Bad as Flagg and McQuirt

Leonard Lyons:

New York, May 28.

UNITY: On June 6, an unusual broadcast will emanate from Chicago. It will be an all-America program, in which all races and religions will be represented. It will feature a precedent-shattering event—because for the first time in history, a man who was a candidate for the Presidency will be introduced by the one who defeated him for that office . . . Wendell L. Willkie, who places his country's welfare above political expediency, will be introduced to the radio audience of America by President Franklin D. Roosevelt.

LEONARD LYONS

ADDRESS: The Memorial Day address at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier will be made this year by Sergt. Alvin C. York. York, the conscientious objector who became America's most decorated war hero, will attack isolationist Senators, and urge convoys for Britain.

BOMBING: Ernest Hemingway, who returned from China this week, was at the Stork Club. Hemingway had been under the bombardment of Fascist planes throughout the entire war in Spain. And in China, on this trip, he also had been under bombardment . . . "Was it any different from Spain?" he was asked . . . "Yes," said Hemingway. "In China there were more people, and fewer bombs."

FLIGHT: On the return trip, from Singapore to California, Hemingway discovered that two of the passengers were Bernt Balchen and Clyde Pangborn, the veteran flyers who had established records for long-distance flights . . . As soon as the Clipper took off from Singapore, the plane's pilots left their station, rushed back into the passengers' cabin, and asked Balchen and Pangborn, "Well, what did you think of the takeoff?"

TIME: Last week Joan Fontaine, working in the Alfred Hitchcock film, "Before the Fact," notified the studio that she was ill, and would be absent that day. Hitchcock decided not to waste any time and to shoot another scene for the picture . . . At 9 a. m. he began to design a night-club set and sent it to the scenic department, for construction. He told the casting director to hire a man he once had seen in another movie, portraying a night-club employee. In the afternoon, Hitchcock, visited the set, and ordered the night-club wall repainted. The cameraman then tested the lights. At 3 p. m., he told Hitchcock "We're ready to shoot." The director took his station, ordered the lights to be set, and the filming began. The "night-club employee" lifted a phone, said "Hogarth Club," and Hitchcock announced: "That's all, thank you. Now dismantle the set."

SATISFACTION: Rene Clair, the French director who recently made the Marlene Dietrich movie, "Flame of New Orleans," was unaccustomed to Hollywood customs. In making one scene, Clair was satisfied with the result, after two "takes," wanted to proceed with the next scene, but Miss Dietrich protested: "Only two takes. All the directors I've ever worked for always shot the scene many, many times" . . . Clair told the cameraman: "All right, give Miss Dietrich as many takes as she wants"—and then he turned his back to the set.

Louella O. Parsons'

Close-Ups and Long-Shots Of the Motion Picture Scene

Hollywood, May 28 (INS).—I knew, as soon as I saw Martha Scott walking around on the Warner lot, that she wasn't there on a sight-seeing tour. I was right. Martha was there to put her signature on a contract to play the role of the minister's wife in "One Foot in Heaven," opposite Fredric March. That means that all those plans to go East for summer stock will have to be put on ice, for Martha has the Sol Lesser picture, "Strange Victory" to make as well as this Warner opus.

LOUELLA PARSONS

I have great confidence in Adela Rogers St. Johns' prophesies, for she's been writing about movies almost as long as I have and she knows a star when she sees one. She talked to me the other day about Lucille Ball and she said: "Lucille is like Constance Talmadge was in her heyday—she has the same color, the same fire and the same photogenic qualities." Adela is writing a story for Lucille called "Medals for Madame"—that is, she is writing the adaptation with Charles Belden, who wrote "Modern Merry Widows," from which the story is being taken. It is based on the fast-growing army of grass widows being created by the draft and has not only Lucille Ball in the cast but Little Anne Shirley as well.

Snapshots of Hollywood collected at random: Claudia Dell, actress, and Eddie Silton, the agent, are definitely parted; George Sanders gifted his girl friend, Anne Hunter, with a large topaz ring set with rubies when they finished their picture; the John Loders, who have reconciled and parted on several occasions, are together again; Nancy Kelly is suffering from sun poisoning.

Paul Whiteman, jr., son of the orchestra leader, and Jackie Cooper, are organizing an orchestra. Both Charlie Chaplin, jr., and his brother, Sydney, are in the lineup; Greta Nissen and Stuart Deckert, wealthy businessman, dining at Leone's; Kathryn Grayson will go on a concert tour in late November; Elaine Barrie, with a life-sized gold lobster pinned on a red suit, knocked the guests at Charlie Foy's night club for a loop; John Garfield has rented Helen Mack's house in the valley and she has added a swimming pool for him; Mitzi Green, such a pretty girl now, at Slapsie Maxie's with Terry Hunt, who always has an eye to beauty.

Jack Benny blows the gang to ice cream on the "Charley's Aunt" set every afternoon; Cleatus Caldwell and Ken Murray at Grace Hayes Sidewalk Cafe, taking up where they left off; Rita Lowe hostessed a dinner Sunday night after the christening of her adopted baby, Dorothy Ann. She is living in Bebe Daniels Beach house and Mrs. Phyllis Daniels was cohostess with her; Skeets Gallagher is the godfather and Mrs. David Butler the godmother; the Dave Epsteins celebrate their seventeenth wedding anniversary Thursday.

That's all today. See you tomorrow!

In Hollywood

—With Hedda Hopper

Hollywood, May 28.

Whether or not it's due to the war, a positive rash of female murderers has broken out in the show world. Nowadays it's murder that pays off at the box office, and without gangsters. Ida Lupino started the cycle in "They Drive by Night." Then came Bette Davis in "The Letter." Meanwhile, "Arsenic and Old Lace" and "The Little Foxes" were chilling theater-goers.

HOPPER

Ida's now playing "Ladies" in Retirement," and when I asked her what about these women killers, she said, "Well, we discovered that a little murder increased the fan mail. After being taught that woman is a delicate creature, it's a shock to audiences when they see their heroines turn bloody murderers more sinister than man ever thought of being!"

Now that Walter Pidgeon is set for "How Green Was My Valley," it's nice to know that Rhys Williams, Welsh actor, director and writer, who's been playing all season in 'The Corn Is Green," also is to be in it. And before leaving for Hollywood, he recorded "How Green Was My Valley" on phonographic discs for the American Foundation for the Blind, to which Helen Keller devotes all her time.

One of the George Rafi's good deeds back-fired when a prop boy, George Richter, for whom George had arranged two years of dramatic lessons, backed right out of the picture. Richter is 22, tall, good looking and intelligent. And when George told him the good news, he exploded, "What? ME an ACTOR? I should say NOT!" He has 35 hours solo in the air, and is waiting to be called for the Army Air Corps any minute.

Bill Hart donated the land for that American Legion Theater in Newhall which opened last Friday and then wished he hadn't. They insisted that he make a speech at the shindig, and Bill fair quivered in his high-heeled boots with stage fright. But as usual, he came through with flying colors.

Wait till you see Bill in my first short—you'll tear the house down. And now Paramount is talking about a new feature picture for him. Bill Hart's one man who's kept his audience—and his figger!

Here's how prop men go mad! In a wild melee on "Bullets for O'Hara" set, Anthony Quinn threw a chair at Roger Pryor, which missed, but utterly demolished a large stuffed barracuda mounted on the wall. Everyone was delighted with the take, until Director Bill Howard noticed a prop man tearing his hair and emitting strange moans of anguish. "My barracuda, my barracuda!" he howled, "—the only one in town, and it registers in a closeup we have to shoot this afternoon!!!

Consternation reigned for a moment, but prop men are a resourceful race. "I've got it!" he yelled, and dashed off the set. Back he came with a large, iced barracuda from the fish market, which was promptly mounted, given a coat of shella- and dusting of Fuller's earth for the proper "fishy age" effect. Bill called lunch, and all tropped happily out. On returning an hour later, they found the studio cats just polishing off the last bone. Props were carried off the set, gibbering!

Presbyterian Leaders Pray For President

By the Associated Press

Montreat, N. C., May 28.—The General Assembly of the Presbyterian Church in the United States (Southern) today telegraphed President Roosevelt its members had prayed for him, for peace for England, and for victory for the Allies after hearing his speech last night, adopted a $1,500,000 budget for benevolences, filled various posts by election, and adjourned its annual session, to meet next year in Knoxville, Tenn.

The benevolences budget is $25,000 greater than it was for the year just ended.

Other actions taken at the final session included:

An invitation to participate in celebration of world-wide communion October 5, 1941, was accepted.

Dr. E. C. Scott, Dallas, Tex., stated clerk and treasurer, was authorized to advance $3,000 of church funds for publication of a ministerial directory.

The judicial committee was directed to investigate the need for a revision of the book of church order.

The raising of a fund of $100,000 for work among soldiers at Army camps was allocated among all the synods of the church except North Carolina which already has a campaign under way to raise $45,000 for the purpose. June 29 was designated defense Sunday on which special appeals will be made for the fund.

The assembly disapproved circularizing of the churches by outside agencies which parallel the causes of the church.

5 Youths Admit 14 Recent Holdups, Police Announce

Confessions of 14 recent holdups and sluggings have been obtained from five colored youths, police announced yesterday, and the prisoners are being questioned on the murders of Dr. Heinrich Simon May 6 and Louis T. Karn early Sunday.

The youths are responsible for holdups of bus drivers and grocers and for several sluggings in the last two months, authorities said. They worked in pairs, meeting before forays in poolrooms and restaurants near Griffith Stadium, police charged.

Each is held on one charge of robbery, but additional charges are expected to be made when investigation has been completed.

Miss Stadnichenko, Bacteriologist, Is Buried Here

Funeral services for Miss Asya Stadnichenko, 39, research bacteriologist, who died Sunday in Chicago, were held here yesterday at Gawler's Funeral Home, 1756 Pennsylvania Avenue Northwest.

Miss Stadnichenko, who was born in Melitopol, Russia, was a graduate of Vassar College. She spent two years at Johns Hopkins University as an assistant, before taking a position at the Research Institute, Municipal Tuberculosis Sanitarium, Chicago. She had been at the sanitarium since, with the exception of two years when she organized the bacteriology laboratory of the Kimberley Clark Co., pulp producers, at Neenah, Wis.

Well known in medical circles for her work with the tuberculosis germ, and Miss Stadnichenko, last year completed an important investigation into tuberculosis bacteria. She carried on her researches in spite of the fact that she was stricken with a blood disease for six years.

She leaves her mother, Mrs. Anna Stadnichenko, and a sister, Miss Taisia Stadnichenko, both of Washington.

Maj. John Seward, Internal Revenue Employe, Dies

Maj. John Seward, 68, an employe of the engineering division of the Bureau of Internal Revenue, died yesterday at his home, 108 Primrose Street, Chevy Chase, Md., following a long illness.

Maj. Seward was born in Philadelphia, and for many years was a mining engineer in the West, Central and South America and Canada. He came to Washington during the World War to serve with the War Department as a major in the Engineer Corps.

He was a member of the Military Order of the World War and the Sons of the American Revolution.

Surviving are his widow, Mrs. Florence W. Seward, of Chevy Chase; a son, George A. Seward, Washington; two daughters, Mrs. Herbert H. Smith, Rochester, and Mrs. Maurice H. Joyce, Red Bank, N. J., and three sisters, Miss Sarah T. Seward, Brooklyn, N. Y.; Mrs. John DeHart, Maplewood, N. J., and Mrs. Chanter Cornish, West Orange, N. J.

Funeral services will be held at Hines Funeral Home, 2901 Fourteenth Street Northwest, Saturday at 8:30 a. m., with burial in Arlington Cemetery.

Strike Voted In 5 Aluminum Defense Plants

By the United Press

Cleveland, May 28.—Members of the National Association of Die Casting Workers (C. I. O.) tonight voted to strike in five large plants of the Aluminum Co. of America here, where vital light-weight airplane and armament parts are made.

The company, largest producers of light metal parts in the country, has large orders for bomb casings, and for parts for airplane engines, superchargers, oil pumps, instrument panels and other aircraft units.

Approximately 4,500 members of the union cast ballots today and 3,426 voted to strike.

Union officials said that the exact date for the beginning of the strike would be determined by a policy committee. They seek a $1-a-day pay raise.

Pittsburgh, May 28 (AP).—Shell production in the Pressed Steel Car Co.'s McKees Rocks plant was halted today by a strike of about 100 workers in protest against the creation of a 5-hour day work schedule in the shell forge department.

L. A. Sullivan, a spokesman for the strikers, said machine workers on the previous 8-hour day schedule earned $8 to $11, while the 5-hour day cut their earnings to $3.75 to $5.

Knoxville, Tenn., May 28 (AP).—A strike called by the International Ladies Garment Workers Union (A. F. of L.) today caused a work stoppage at Standard Knitting Mills, holder of more than $100,000 in Army clothing contracts, and threw more than 2,500 workers into idleness.

Welfare Center To Be Studied By House Unit

The District's projected "welfare center" to replace institutions Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt and other leaders have charged are "disgraceful," will be under the scrutiny of the District Appropriations Subcommittee today.

As his final official act, Welfare Director Robert E. Bondy, whose resignation from the District government becomes effective Saturday, will appear before executive hearings of the subcommittee to explain the program for constructing four new welfare institutions on a site of approximately 1,000 acres in nearby Virginia or Maryland.

District budget estimates for 1942, under consideration by the subcommittee, call for expenditure of $70,000 for acquisition of land and preparation of plans for a new home for the aged, industrial home schools for white and colored and National Training School for Girls.

The budget also contemplates expenditure of $108,000 for a new Receiving Home for Children to replace a structure which Mrs. Roosevelt and leaders of Senate and House have repeatedly condemned.

In view of the importance of the welfare center item which involves ultimate expenditure of thousands of dollars, Representative George H. Mahon (Democrat), of Texas, subcommittee chairman, said last night that consideration of the $8,050,328 welfare budget would consume most of the day.

Mahon said he would not know until this week on what day next week his subcommittee will be able to hear budget views of Washington civic leaders.

Liquor Dealers To Air Trust Charges Today

More than 100 Washington liquor dealers today will begin giving testimony before a special grand jury impaneled by the District Court to investigate suspected violations of the antitrust laws in the liquor trade here.

The special grand jury, which was asked by District Attorney Edward M. Curran, was sworn in yesterday. The inquiry is expected to take about a month.

Justice T. Alan Goldsborough appointed Milton Edward Vermillion, 39, as foreman of the special jury. Vermillion is plant supervisor for the Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., and lives at 4622 Alton Place Northwest.

The grand jury inquiry was ordered after a preliminary study indicated that liquor prices were being fixed by a combine of Washington dealers. Owners of stores which did not join the price fixing agreement were alleged to have been intimidated.

Justice Goldsborough cautioned the grand jurors that their work was of paramount importance and directed them to us "special care." Deputy U. S. Marshals Martin Finn, B. F. Shields, Richard McDonough and John Gooley were sworn in as guards to the grand jury.

The grand jurors are Foreman Vermillion; John E. Peeper, 30, 3016 R Street Northwest, Postal Telegraph Co. branch manager; Amerlio James Paglino, 28, 926 Hamilton Street Northwest, cashier; John J. Babbington, 49, 4327 Nebraska Avenue Northwest, Department of Justice clerk; Frank M. Bidinger, 43, 2106 Huidekoper Place Northwest; Joseph P. Fee, 30, 4017 Fifth Street Northwest, store manager; John L. Caswell, 43, 1801 Parkside Drive Northwest, photo engraver; Mrs. Grace King Cosby, 48, 3203 Adams Mill Road Northwest, housewife.

Also, Mrs. Anna J. Dougherty, 51, 3415 Oakwood Terrace Northwest, housewife; Earl Brown Cuilly, 52, 2635 Woodley Place Northwest, piano salesman; William P. Cullinane, 54, 3017 Cathedral Avenue Northwest, real estate man; Sidney B. Dannheisser, 48, 2912 Eighteenth Street Northwest, salesman; Mrs. Pauline K. Ernst, 43, 22 Hawaii Avenue Northeast, housewife; Charles H. Everett, 60, 1237 Randolph Street Northeast, salesman; Mrs. Ethel W. Fred, 40, 3405 Woodley Road Northwest, housewife.

Also Clarence I. Gardiner, 47, 2006 Fifteenth Street Northwest, Navy Department library assistant; William E. Mack, 54, 203 Rock Creek Church Road Northwest, auditor; Mrs. Mabel E. Murray, 52, 2341 R Street Southeast, saleswoman; William E. Nosek, 51, 3011 Ontario Road Northwest, printer, The Post; Alfred G. Quarrell, 50, 2217 Fortieth Street Northwest, postal clerk; Archie T. Reid, 52, 2325 Fifteenth Street Northwest, Chesapeake & Potomac Telephone Co., repair man; Forester McKay Smith, 45, 6240 Thirty-first Place Northwest, insurance manager; Charles B. Wells, 48, 3051 Vista Street Northeast, cigar stand manager.

Miss Chichester Rites Set Today

Funeral services will be today at 11 a. m. at Old Falls Church, Falls Church, Va., for Miss E. May Chichester, 84, who died Tuesday at the home of her sister, Mrs. James M. Mason, Lee Highway, Fairfax County. Interment will be at Old Falls Church.

The daughter of one of the oldest families in Fairfax County, Miss Chichester spent her life on the family estate, Mantua, which has been in the Chichester family since early in the eighteenth century. Her father, Maj. Chichester, served in the Confederate Army during the War Between the States, and was treasurer of Fairfax County for many years.

Miss Chichester is survived by two other sisters, in addition to Mrs. Mason. They are Mrs. John Davidson of Washington, and Mrs. Sally Loving of McLean, Va.

Dean Powell Elected Md. Coadjutor

The Very Rev. Noble C. Powell, dean of Washington, yesterday was elected Bishop Coadjutor of the Episcopal Diocese of Maryland at the annual convention in Baltimore, the Associated Press reported. The election was on the second ballot.

Dean Powell

Dean Powell told The Post last night that special committee which yesterday informed him by telephone of his election would confer with him tomorrow at 11 a. m., at the Washington Cathedral to hear his decision.

If he accepts the new position, Dean Powell would assist Bishop Edward T. Helfenstein, of the Maryland Diocese. The prelate, who recently was elected as successor to the late Bishop Gardner Murray, had requested that the matter of a new coadjutor bishop be considered at the convention.

Settlement Near In Bus Company's Labor Dispute

The settlement of a labor dispute between management and employes of the Washington, Maryland & Virginia Motor Coach Co. appeared imminent this morning after approximately half of the employes last night voted by a "substantial" majority to accept the management's concessions in the dispute.

The remainder of the company's 130 organized drivers and servicemen will vote on the issues this morning.

Frank J. Sheehan, Labor Department conciliator who has been taking part in the conference, said last night that the employes had made concessions "through the national defense angle." Approximately 30,000 Virginia commuters to Washington, many of these in vital defense agencies, would be without bus transportation should the union vote to strike, it was said.

Offers made by the company include a 4 cents an hour increase a union shop, time and a half for overtime and one week vacation.

The Corcoran School of Art held its closing exercises last night in the school auditorium and presented awards to students for work completed within the past year for competition.

The jury of awards for painting consisted of the faculty of the school, aided by Herman Maril, of Baltimore, and Prentiss Taylor, of Washington. In sculpture the entries were judged by Concetta Scaravaglione, of New York, and Robert Laurent, instructor of the class.

Six graduating high school students from Washington and its environs were given scholarships to the Corcoran School of Art for next term. Their scholarships were based upon a competition within the high schools.

This Old Treatment Often Brings Happy Relief

Many sufferers relieve nagging backache quickly, once they discover that the real cause of their trouble may be tired kidneys.

The kidneys are Nature's chief way of taking the excess acids and waste out of the blood. They help most people pass about 3 pints a day.

When disorder of kidney function permits poisonous matter to remain in your blood, it may cause nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, getting up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headaches and dizziness. Frequent or scanty passages with smarting and burning sometimes shows there is something wrong with your kidneys or bladder.

Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisonous waste from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

We found a way

I WAS an average man . . . rocking along. The plus I needed to push ahead was lacking. One day a friend remarked: 'How do you feel?' I replied, 'All right . . . I guess, why?'"

This man found a way to go ahead. He reasoned, I am not as alert . . . keen or aggressive as I might be. That's why I am just rocking along.

He found his answer in the time-tried and tested S.S.S. Tonic. Answers to Questions

1. North's hand is a little too strong for a bid of one no trump and a little too weak for a bid of two no trump, so he should temporize with an approach bid of one diamond. In addition, North's high-card values are of a type that does not make him overly anxious to play the hand. He would be equally happy to hear his partner mention no trump.

2. South's hand is too strong for the discouraging response of one no trump. It contains no higher ranking four-card suit which might be bid at the range of one, and thus provide a cheap chance for further exchange of information. It is too weak for two no trump, so South should say two diamonds even though he holds only three cards in his partner's suit. The two honors, however, make up in strength for the lack of strength.

3. North should raise to three no trump instead of rebidding his clubs, as he has a good club suit and his two side queens will provide entries to his hand. A bid and rebid of clubs would tell partner he had no values outside of the club suit and the suit itself was long but lacking in the top cards necessary for play at no trump.

TODAY'S BEST USED CAR BUYS

This Morning

—With Shirley Povich

It is being suggested now that Clark Griffith is in a mood to fire Bucky Harris as manager of his ball club, and while Mr. Griffith denies same, there is evidence that the Nats' owner is not thrilled by recent events.

POVICH

One alternative of Griffith would be, of course, to keep Harris and fire the ball team, but that undoubtedly would not occur to him. All of the managerial genius in the world, rounded up and herded onto the Washington bench would still require a special dispensation from above to raise the Nats to the level of sixth place.

The fact is that Harris' job seems to be safe until the end of the 1941 season, at least. Griffith has never fired a manager in midseason. In fact, he is very slow to fire managers, and since 1912 when Griffith took charge of the Washington team, the Nats have had fewer managers than any club in the league.

Additional evidence that Harris won't be fired right away is the fact that Griffith is under something of an obligation to the Nats' manager. Harris could have had the Cleveland managerial job for the taking last winter but turned it down for the security of the Washington job, as pointed out by Griffith.

As for the present plight of the Nats, Griffith is as deep in it as Harris. The Nats' owner was a party to deals that were made and not made and he must share any of the raps. No less than Harris, he was sadly fooled on the potentialities of the team they took South. A club owner's chief job is to provide the players, at least for development, but Harris came out of the South very much empty-handed.

Harris Wanted to Buy Younger Talent

A year ago, Harris was all for taking the $125,000 and three ball players the rich Detroit club offered for Dutch Leonard and Buddy Lewis before the trading deadline, but Griffith turned the offer down. Harris did not regard either Lewis or Leonard as sacred to the welfare of the Nats, and preferred the newer and younger talent the cash would buy but the Nats' owner was afraid of offending Washington fans. Neither Leonard nor Lewis has been exactly indispensable this season.

Somebody, definitely not Harris, was dozing at the switch when the Yankees maneuvered Babe Dahlgren out of the league at a time when the Nats were pining for somebody who had proved he could play first base. Only two weeks ago when Rip Radcliff, a .300-hitting outfielder was on the loose with a $7,500 price tag, the Nats' front office was taking in the sights from the window.

Harris' chief mistake may be his penchant for listening to the bright winter talk of the Nats' owner who unfailingly moons about the success the new season will bring instead of reflecting realistically on the horrible happenings of the past year. Griffith, with his sunshine talk, could instill hope in a cast-iron gargoyle that times are bound to be better.

For years Harris has maintained, publicly and privately, that the Nats had no adequate second baseman, but Griffith has has been insisting that the team is not weak at that position. Harris has been winning that argument daily for a least two years but Griffith has not yet designed any deal to relieve the situation. There have been trades for pitchers and outfielders, but no sign of a remedy for second base.

Ball Club Is Same as Last Year's

When Harris benched Ben Chapman recently for what was becoming his utter inability to hit, the only replacement available was Johnny Welaj, who at the time was powdering the ball at a thunderous .191 pace. It would seem that Harris does not have a wide selection of talent.

The Nats' plight is not exactly amazing, incidentally. The team he came out of the South with was, basically, the same seventh-place club of the year before, which had lost more games than any Washington team in 32 years. It was the sort of a team that needed not a manager but a magician at the helm.

The shifts Harris has been making in the lineup were born of desperation, not of desire. When his pitching buckled completely, as it did, Harris was desperate for more power; hence the installation of Buddy Lewis in the outfield and Jimmy Bloodworth at third base. They weren't supposed to terrorize the opposition pitchers, exactly, but they represented Harris' only hope of getting a few more runs for his own inept pitching.

As for the Nats' present plight in the league standings, we'd say that Harris' individual guilt is not quite clear.

On the Line

—With CONSIDINE

New York, May 28.—DICK BARTELL, back in the National League, formed some lasting impressions of the American League during his stay with Detroit. And the most vivid one is his belief that Bobby Feller is not quite what he's cracked up to be.

CONSIDINE

"Bobby's swell, of course," Dick says, "but he's not very bright. "He hasn't smartened up a great deal since he came into the league, and I honestly doubt if he's as good today as he was a couple of years ago. He's a fine young pitcher, and all that, but you can't compare him to Dizzy Dean or Carl Hubbell in their primes."

ERNEST HEMINGWAY, just back from China, has been getting some long needed exercises at the gymnasium of George Brown. We watched Brown and our favorite author box the other morning. Hemingway puts every ounce he's got into his boxing, and every ounce he's got just now totals 221 pounds. Hemingway will never be mistaken for one of the ring game's dancing masters. He is what we'd call a mauler. He throws a lot of heavy leather, and is strong as a bull in close. Brown, who cut Hemingway's mouth a little during the bout, told us on the side that he would have made a fine heavyweight fighter.

The novelist possesses, with the possible exception of Hype Igoe, the finest background on boxing we've ever encountered. He remembers the styles and records of pugs the average sports writer has either forgotten or never heard or knew. One of his prime favorites was Harry Greb. He likes to hear Brown talk about this fabulous guy. Brown trained Greb, if what Greb did could be called training. On the morning of that bloody 15-rounder against Mickey Walker, Brown told us, Greb was pulled out of the hay and weighed 161½, one and a half pounds over the limit. Brown went to work on him and rubbed and steamed him so much that Greb had to be dressed by two stooges and assisted to the scene of the weigh-in, because he was so exhausted from the effects of the life he had been living and the beating he had taken on Brown's rubbing table.

He got down to 159½ for the weigh-in the afternoon of the fight, staggered off the scales and drank a quart of beef tea, ate a mammoth steak, and entered the ring that night against Walker weighing 169. He was fresher at the end of 15 gruelling rounds than he was when he started. In fact, he and Walker had a bare knuckle fight on a New York sidewalk late that night.

Hemingway didn't get a chance to exercise in China, except to take a few bullet-ducking knee-bends. But on the way back, one night in a Manila bar, it looked as if he might at last get a workout at his favorite sport. A loud drunk began to abuse a little guy sitting next to Hemingway at the bar. The little guy took the tormenting for a long time, but finally Ernest turned to him and said, "I'll stick with you, if you want to do something about that big bum."

He had hardly said this when the big bum across the bar suddenly roared, for apparently no reason at all, "I wish that big so and so Hemingway would come in here tonight. I'd show him how tough he is." It was too good to be true. Hemingway looked across the bar at the bloke and said, "Here he is, if you want to start something."

"Well, he started around the bar at me," the author told us, while a rubber was slapping him around on the arnica couch after his workout with Brown. "I sat there, figuring that the guy was going to be pretty easy to clip, as soon as he got close enough. But the damndest thing happened. Soon as he got up close to me he stretched out his arms and cried 'Ernie!' and gave me a bear hug. What the hell do you do about a guy like that?"

Campbell's Homer Helps Rout Harder

Benton Wins Third, Relieving Trout; Eisenstat Victim Of Decisive Rally

By the Associated Press

Detroit, May 28.—After the pattern of their 1940 successes, the Detroit Tigers today overcame defensive flaws with an 11-hit slugging attack to defeat the league leading Cleveland Indians, 8 to 5, for the third successive time.

Kicking in with four errors, the the mound and finally clinched the Tigers blasted Mel Harder from game off Relief Hurler Harry Eisenstat after the Indians had rallied to tie the score. Ray Mack's three-run homer in the seventh chased Paul Trout, Detroit starter, and "fireman" Al Benton received credit for his third victory.

Bruce Campbell, belting his fifth homer in six games, led Detroit's assault against three tribe hurlers. In three games the Tigers have solved Cleveland pitching for 34 hits totaling 61 bases, and Manager Roger Peckinpaugh indicated he might revise his plans and call on rapid Robert Feller tomorrow.

Detroit matched the Tribe's two first-inning runs and then took the lead in the third when Birdie Tebbetts singled Pinky Higgins home. Campbell homered with one aboard in the fifth, making it 5 to 3, but Mack connected in the seventh.

Zale Kayoes Al Hostak in Second Round

By the United Press

Chicago, May 28.—Unleashing a terrific body attack, Champion Tony Zale, the man of steel from Gary, Ind., tonight floored Al Hostak, of Seattle, nine times in the second round of their scheduled 15-round bout for the National Boxing Association's middleweight championship and scored a knockout in 2:32 of the second round.

Floored for a nine-count in the first round as the former champion roared from his corner, Zale cleared his head and fought cautiously throughout that round.

Suddenly, at the start of the second, Zale switched to the tactics with which he won the title from Hostak last summer—a terrific roundhouse right to Hostak's kidneys.

With the first of those blows the crowd of 15,087 sweltering in the Chicago Stadium could sense the change and soon Hostak wilted before their eyes. He groaned audibly as the first right sank home, then as the second sank into his ribs Hostak folded in pain and took a count of nine.

Was Beaten Fighter

From that moment Hostak was a beaten fighter. As quickly as he hauled himself to his feet, Zale was after him like a cat, his right hand swinging its deadly tattoo.

He drove it hard to Hostak's ribs three time sin succession without a return blow and Al slipped to the floor, but struggled up with no count.

Thereafter Zale floored him for a count of two, no count, then for a long count of eight, all achieved with the same devastating blow to the ribs. As he collapsed for the eight count, Hostak's face was twisted in agony, but up he came and made his one grand bid to win the championship for the third time in his brief career.

Blasts Tony Zale

He came up swinging both fists and blasted Zale across the ring with a terrific assault of lefts and rights to the head. Tony moved in close, tied up Hostak and the flurry ended when Zale stepped back without warning, then buried another long right roundhouse into Hostak's ribs. Tony's glove bit into the flesh, seemingly up to the cuff and down bounced Hostak for a no count.

Twice more Al came off the floor—with great effort. Then, after the ninth trip to the mat, he just couldn't make it back to his feet.

Crowd of 25,000 Enthused Over New Lights; Soldiers Among Those Approving of Arcs

By Al Hailey

The Nats appropriated a page from minor league baseball last night and Washington took its first fling at major league night life—a move which 25,000 sweltering, happy-go-lucky fans made a howling financial success.

It was baseball's Broadway going Main Street, the big-time circuit resorting to the crowd-attracting device of the bush leagues.

And although they were the same old Nats, losing their tenth straight game, the monetary success of the venture furnished ample proof that Washington is a booming baseball town and—like London—can take it.

All Enthused

A cross-section of public opinion brought only the highest degree of enthusiasm. The poll included two Army captains, who described the nocturnal sport as a "soldier's paradise;" a full-blooded Osage Indian from Tulso, Okla., a Metropolitan policeman out with members of his family from Montana seeing their first big league game; a head waitter; a newspaper vendor, a ball park usher, and wives who were sneaking off from their husbands

Dodgers Score Over Phils, 6-5, In Night Game

By the Associated Press

Philadelphia, May 28.—Outfielder Harold Reiser's twelfth inning double scoring Billy Herman gave the Brooklyn Dodgers a 6-5 triumph over the Philadelphia Phillies tonight in the first night game of the season here. A crowd estimated at 10,000 saw the Phils drive in two runs in the ninth to send the game into extra innings.

Tilden Beaten In Pro Play By Gledhill

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 28.—Bill Tilden, long one of the greatest figures in the game, was eliminated from the singles play of the National Professional Tennis Tournament today by Keith Gledhill, of Los Angeles, who scored a straight set triumph of 6—2, 6—3, 6—3, at the Chicago Town and Tennis Club courts.

Tilden, seeded third, was no match for an opponent 20 years his junior. Gledhill, advancing into the semifinals, forced the net behind looping forehands as Tilden's shots either were carried wide by the high wind whipping across the courts, or popped high over the net for easy kills.

The victory, coupled with Don Budges' defeat yesterday, moved Gledhill closer to a possible sweep of the singles and doubles.

25,000 See Yanks Take 6-5 Thriller

Pinch-Hitter's Clout With Sacks Loaded Overcomes 3-1 Lead; Sid Hudson Is Loser.

By Shirley Povich
Post Staff Writer

Into the inky nothingness beyond the white brilliance of Griffith Stadium's new $120,000 lighting effects, sailed a home run with the bases full by Pinch Hitter George Selkirk, of the Yankees, and the Nats last night lost another ball game.

Twenty-five thousand fans, sweltering and dispensing with coated dignity, greeted night baseball in the Capital and watched in despair as Selkirk's swat, laden with four Yankee runs, soared over the right field wall in the eighth inning. The last traces of the Nats' lead vanished with the hit, which lifted the Yanks to a 6-5 victory.

Thus in the full glare of 180,000,000 candle power which made day of night within the stadium structure, the Nats collected their tenth straight defeat and dropped into the league cellar.

Travis' Error Costly

The throng which had seen Walter Johnson, grandest name in Washington baseball history, make a pitch from the mound to break the beam that automatically switched on the lights, was cheering Rookie Sid Hudson's pitching eight innings later when Hudson's dream of victory over the Yankees suddenly crashed.

A damaging error by Cecil Travis was a brutal anticlimax for Hudson in the eighth, when it appeared that a double-play grounder off Joe Gordon's bat would stem the Yankee uprising and preserve for Hudson his 3-1 lead.

Joe DiMaggio tripled against the right field fence with one out in that eighth and the Yankees put the tying run on base when Charley

D. C. Golfers Pass Up Baltimore Invitation for Richmond

Bogart, Pitt, Nolan to Play At Hermitage

Skinker, Hollebaugh Are Also Entered; Bannockburn Entries Are Being Accepted

By Merrell W. Whittlesey

Washington amateurs, with rival invitation tournaments in Richmond and Baltimore to choose from over May 30 weekend, passed up the latter event at the Country Club of Maryland for the fifth annual Hermitage Club tournament, according to entries received last night.

Although the list of the 72 entries in the Baltimore event did not carry clubs or cities, there did not appear to be a single Washingtonian listed for play in today's qualifying round. The field included such host city stars as Otto Greiner, Eddie Semmler, Nate Kaufman, Edgar Lucas and Johnny Farrell. It is the first year for the tournament, a one flight of 32 players affair.

The District will have a lot to say as to the disposition of the Richmond title, however, for Chevy Chase invitation champion, Ralph Bogart, and his side-kick, Earle Skinker, are entered as well as M. Parker Nolan, the Maryland State champion; Harry G. Pitt and Earl McAleer, Manor; Dr. H. L. Smith, Congressional, and Russ Hollebaugh, winner of the event three years ago.

20 to Compete From D. C.

The Hermitage field totaled 104 players last night, 20-odd from the District, but that many more have not entered officially but will play between 1:30 and 3:30 p. m. today, time set aside for Washingtonians.

Today's 18-hole qualifying rounds will be followed by two rounds of match play in the championship and other flights tomorrow and the semifinals and finals on Saturday.

Ralph Bogart and Volney Burnett led a large Washington delegation last year, both losing in the semifinals just two weeks after they played in the title round of the Chevy Chase Invitation tournament.

Meanwhile many of the District amateurs not entered in the out-of-town tournaments this weekend are saving their days off for the Bannockburn Invitation Tournament Friday through Sunday of next weekend.

To Draw 75 Golfers

The second annual Bannockburn tournament, a two-man best ball affair, is expected to draw at least 5 tandems for the 18-hole qualifying rounds. The committee already has on display a host of prizes seldom duplicated in local tournaments and a big Calcutta pool drawing is planned for the night of the qualifying round. The $5 entry fee included lunches, dinner Friday night, and a handicap tournament on Sunday for those eliminated in the early rounds. Flights will be provided for all qualifiers.

Pairings of Washingtonians in the Richmond tournament:

1:30, Ralph Bogart (Army and Navy), Earle Skinker (Columbia) and Ned Holloway (Richmond); 1:40, Felix Altrup (Argyle), Dan Call (Richmond) and Don Miller (Richmond); 1:45, C. A. Severance (Columbia), J. E. Files (Richmond) and N. V. White (Richmond); 1:55, M. P. Nolan (Congressional), Paul Bursderfer (Richmond), and Abe Bean (Richmond).

2:10, Harry G. Pitt (Manor) and W. B. Tomlinson (Richmond); 2:15, Bill Wenzel (Congressional), Dr. H. L. Smith (Congressional), and Dr. J. R. Davila (Richmond); 2:20, Earl McAleer (Manor), Welfar Reed (Richmond) and Maj. R. A. Spessard (Richmond); 2:25, Ray Moore (Manor), G. Taliferro (Richmond) and H. Watson (Richmond); 2:40, W. W. Jones (Congressional), H. R. Wood (Richmond) and A. M. Cathright (Richmond).

3, Russ Hollebaugh (Kenwood), Don O'Brien (Richmond), and Wynsol Spencer (Richmond).

D. C. Women's Golf Entries Close Today

Mrs. Doran S. Platt will close entries for the District Women's Championship promptly at 1 o'clock this afternoon, according to Mrs. Edward Fox, tournament chairman.

The annual championship affair starts Monday at Manor Club with an 18-hole qualifying round. A field of more than 150 is expected as Mrs. Platt had received 118 names early last night. Elizabeth Houghton, of Chevy Chase, is defending champion. The tournament will extend from Monday through the final round on Friday.

Litz Qualifies For 500-Mile Race Classic

By the United Press

Indianapolis, May 28.—Veteran Race Driver Deacon Litz came out of retirement today, ignored brushes with fate that tore the hood from his car and roared to a place among the 33 qualifiers for the Memorial Day automobile classic after all places had been filled.

Litz, an old-timer from Dubois, Pa., got his call to make a try for the field that will contend for $100,000 in prizes when William (Shorty) Cantlon, of Indianapolis, gave up his post.

Without a racer, Litz had looked ruefully for 30 days as other drivers tooled their cars around the brick track for the qualifying posts. When the big 16-cylinder Sampson Special, which Cantlon had qualified became available, Litz took a few warmup spins and was ready. Less than half an hour remained to qualify and he had to beat the slowest time among the 33 drivers already eligible.

Troubles Beset Litz

On the first of his four laps, the jovial deacon, whose 225 pounds make him the biggest man in the race, boiled around at 121.310 miles per hour. He raised his average to approximately 124 m. p. h. and zoomed around three more 10-mile laps. Then troubles began.

A bird flew into his path and splattered the hood of the giant Sampson, smearing the lenses of Litz's goggles. While he struggled against bad vision, trying to clear the goggles, the car's hood snapped open.

His time ousted Louis Durant of Hollywood whose 116.152 m. p. h. average had been the lowest to qualify. The other drivers moved up a notch and left Litz the first place in the eleventh row.

A's Defeat Red Sox, 8 to 6, in 16 Innings

Fenway Park's Smallest Crowd, 1,400 Fans, Witnesses Game; Sam Chapman Hitting Star

By the Associated Press

Boston, May 28.—After surrendering an early 6-1 lead, the Philadelphia Athletics defeated the Red Sox, 8-6 today in a 16-inning game, the longest of the current Boston season. It was played before 1,400, Fenway's smallest 1941 crowd.

The A's launched their winning rally with two out in the final frame. Dick Siebert started it by banging a single off Jimmy Foxx' glove and came all the way around to score the winning run when Sam Chapman clouted Jack Wilson for his fourth consecutive hit, a double to center. After Frankie Hayes was purposely passed, Chapman countered the A's extra run on Pete Suder's single to right.

Suder sent the Athletics into their 6-1 lead in the sixth by homering with two on. Bob Johnson hit for the circuit with Benny McCoy aboard in the third. The Sockers then set off a four-run blast, featured by Jim Tabor's three-run homer, which he poled out after Ted Williams doubled and scored on Jimmy Foxx' single.

Eastern High Meets Western In Title Series

Each in the hope of succeeding Central as baseball champion of Washington's public high schools, Eastern and Western today start their three-game series for the 1941 title. Starting time will be 3:30 and the Easteern diamond will be the site.

Eastern plays the opening clash of this year's playoff on its home field because it finished at the top of interhigh standings after a round robin which lasted more than six weeks. The next tangle, on Tuesday, brings the clubs together at Western, which wound up its regular season a close second. The third game, if necessary, will take place on the neutral Anacostia field Friday.

Chance To Return To Top

After two years of trailing Central in the final standings, Eastern sees in the series starting today a chance to return to its former dominance of everything of a baseball nature in the schools. Before the Vikings steppad in to cop the mantle in 1939, the White Tide had won outright or tied for the crown 11 times in the previous 14 times.

Western, on the other hand, hasn't finished alone at the top since the 1921-22 season, though it coasts a deadlock with Central in the 1936 series.

Because it can send the better pitchers to the mound, Eastern will be favored in the playoff, over the three-game route for the first time. Both Ken Deavers and Ken Curles have turned in excellent performances to date. Western has depended on the somewhat erratic hurling of Billy Gray and Kuldell to support Charley Hines.

Tide Has Better Hitting

In the hitting department the Tide will also have an edge. In Billy Hite, alternate second baseman and outfielder, Eastern has a slugger who ranks with the best, even estern's burly Bob Leach. From all indications Western's only margin will be in the matter of experience, and in the end that may prove the most important of all.

Bensinger Wins Private School Title in Love Sets

Bobby Bensinger, of Friends, yesterday won the District Private School Tennis League championship by routing Mahlon Tarleton, of St. John's, in three straight love sets at Georgetown Prep.

Competing in the tournament for the first time, Bensinger, the former national boys' indoor tennis champion, swept through four matches with loss of only four games. He received a large trophy. Another cup was given to Runnerup Tarleton.

Hamilton Wins, As Bausch Stars

"Whitey" Bausch's five-hit pitching turned back Riggs National Bank, 11-2, yesterday at Lincoln Memorial as Hamilton went into a first-place tie with Metropolitan in the Bankers Softball League.

to try to bring the Nats in a winner.

Sid Hudson, who was indifferent about it all, and one of the lady fans who turned out in full force had the same views.

"Why there's no difference at all," she said. "You'd think it was daylight if it didn't look so strange to see that wall of darkness outside the circle of light. They certainly can't call games on acount of darkness now, can they."

Johnson On Mound

Walter Johnson, the greatest name in Washington baseball history, was the hit of the opening ceremonies, which had all the fanfare of a Hollywood premiere.

Just before the 8:30 starting time, the football lights were dimmed to almost darkness. Johnson was to throw the ball across the plate through a beam of light that would make daylight out of darkness by turning on the $120,000 lighting system.

Johnson threw the ball twice for photographers and then, in his shirtsleeves, threw the ball. The "Big Train" was off the beam about three inches, but electrical engineers were prepared and as the ball hit Catcher Jake Early's mitt they threw the switches. The crowd didn't know the difference.

Will Harridge, American League president; Nats' Owner Clark Griffith and Johnson marched across the field for the flag raising—a gesture which may bring down the wrath of the Flag Association and the Military Order of the World War on Griff for raising the colors after nightfall.

No Shadows

The thousands in the stands scanned eight tall towers that fringed the field and found them good. Outfielders were as visible as in broad daylight and shadows were lacking. The 740 bulbs on each tower generated enough power to light 5,000 average homes.

Dignity went out the window as the gay and informal crowd shed its coats and rolled up sleeves. The night was perfect for the concessions, and bottle drink sales hit a new high for a night event at the park.

Cardinals Will Play

Daniels Paces Ice Palace Pin League

The Ice Palace Commercial loop was led by John Daniels' 162-435 with Johnny Ressa, Taxi-Go-Round, rolling near highs of 160-430 and aiding his team take the odd game from Arrow Cab in spite of B. Barnday's 131-357. National Beer won two from the Ice Palace with the help of H. Hughes' 131-347, even though H. Fridley had 132-361 for the losers. Kay's Men's Shop whitewashed Caruso, Inc., after Jack Perrll totaled 133-372 and Buddie Seal's 342 set enabled his J. C. Flood boys to win the odd contest from Greyhound despite C. Carter's 134-345 for the losers.

Silver Spring

Alma Stocking, Yams quartet of the Vegetable League in Silver Spring, led the women in this mixed league with her 142 single and 353 set, while George Allen, Potatoes, was head man after pinfalls of 150-407 to spark an odd-game win over the Tomatoes despite Olive Pettit's 130-346. The Radishes whitewashed the Onions even though Mildred Peacock led her team with a 128 game and 333 set. The Peas are out in front with the Onions and Beets two games behind.

Johnnie Biggs, of the league leading Lions team in the Animal League at Silver Spring, led his mates with high counts of 167-407 but his team could win but two from the Wildcats even though they had team highs of 502-1,357. Ed Hobb's 150-405 sparked a two-game win over the Bears by his Leopards. The Bears and Gorillas are tied for the runner-up spot.

Harry Turner, of the Greens team in the Silver Spring Rainbow League, was top man for the night with his nice counts of 148-392 that were the main reasons why his mates took the odd game from the Yellows. Wahl, Whites, had near top totals of 145-380 that enabled his team to take three straight from the Browns. The Grays and Purples split team honors with 466 and 1,325, respectively. The Blue, Pinks and Grays are tied for the leadership with 10-5 each.

New Officers

SULLY DISCOVERS HOW TO SIP

EACH night after work Sully would drop in at the club and say, "I'll have a whiskey!" Then he'd just "toss it off."

One day, Henricks suggested Gibson's, and said, "Take it easy! Gibson's is too good to gulp. Taste this whiskey. Sip it a little at a time!"

Sully sipped and smiled "Man, that's the smoothest, cheeriest whiskey I ever drank." Now Sully sips his Gibson's XXXX Rye. Tonight experiment and discover why Gibson's is "Great from the First Sip."

Boxing Commissioners to Demand Salaries for 2 Members

Bill Provides $3,000 Yearly For Officials

District Promised Baer-Louis Rematch; Donovan Gives Ring Body Cold Shoulder

By Al Hailey

In a series of startling revelations, the District Boxing Commission yesterday announced that it is seeking salaries of $3,000 a year for two of its three members and that the return Joe Louis-Buddy Baer heavyweight championship fight will be staged in Washington the first week in October.

The District boxing picture changed colors with speed that would put a chameleon to shame yesterday, and here's how the around-the-clock situation shaped up:

8 a. m.—Boxing Commissioner Thomas P. Morgan, jr., goes to Washington Airport to meet Referee Arthur Donovan.

Where Is Donovan?

9 a. m.—Morgan reports to Commissioners Claude W. Owen and Ernest W. Brown that their proposed cross-examination of Donovan has fallen flat. Reason: no corpus delecti.

10 a. m.—Boxing commissioners go into a huddle as Temporary Secretary Dick O'Brien's secretary, Josephine Sawaya, tries frantically and vainly to locate Donovan in New York.

11 a. m.—Seeing their probe into Donovan's officiating at last Friday night's Baer-Louis fight crumbling, the commissioners decide the time is ripe for announcing they want pay for their strenuous tasks.

Cover Is Sought

Noon to sundown—Commissioners seek cover as reporters seek to unravel the ring body's projected revision of the entire professional boxing set-up in the Capital.

Commissioner Owen announced the salary move in revealing that Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech is drawing up a bill for submission to Congress asking for four major changes in the District boxing law. They are:

1. That two of the commissioners—Owen and Morgan—be placed on salaries of $3,000 each per year, Police Superintendent Brown was excluded because he already is on the Government pay roll.

2. That the District government take over all boxing commission funds over $12,000.

3. That the boxing commissioners' tenure of office be extended from two to three years.

4. That the weight of the gloves used in local boxing bouts be reduced from eight to six ounces to put the District on a parallel with the national scale.

Further revelations brought out that the boxing body probably will ask for control of wrestling—a move which will give the commission right to 10 per cent of the gross gates at wrestling shows in addition to the 10 per cent on box-in gates.

Although the commissioners stated, in justifying the salary demands, that the advent of "big time" boxing is placing such heavy demands on their time, they failed to ask for a full-time secretary.

The post of boxing commission secretary is a responsible position, as the secretary has to do the thousands of menial tasks that a member of the commission would never thing of undertaking. Until he left to assume command of his Marine Corps battalion, Secretary Heinie Miller was a one-man commission.

Redrafting Boxing Bill

Coincident with the series of surprising events yesterday came the announcement that the corporation counsel's office is redrafting the bill legalizing boxing in the District as the result of a story carried exclusively in The Post several months ago.

The story called attention to an error in a 1938 amendment to the boxing bill which technically nullified the entire bill, thereby leaving the Boxing Commission operating on an illegal basis. In the redraft, it is understood that provision for a full-time secretary paid by the boxing commission is provided for.

Meanwhile, Morgan pledged himself to see to it that Donovan answers the commission's summons to him to testify on his conduct of the Louis-Baer bout.

Oh, yes, before we forget it, the Boxing Commission upheld Donovan's disqualification of Baer in the seventh round Friday night and took no punitive steps despite the fact that to a man they had gone on record as saying that Louis was guilty of a foul in hitting Baer after the bell ending the sixth.

And another thing—Donovan won't referee the return Louis-Baer title fight. A local referee will get the job, Owen, Brown and Morgan declared. So there.

Conn Definitely To Meet Louis In N. Y. June 18

By the Associated Press

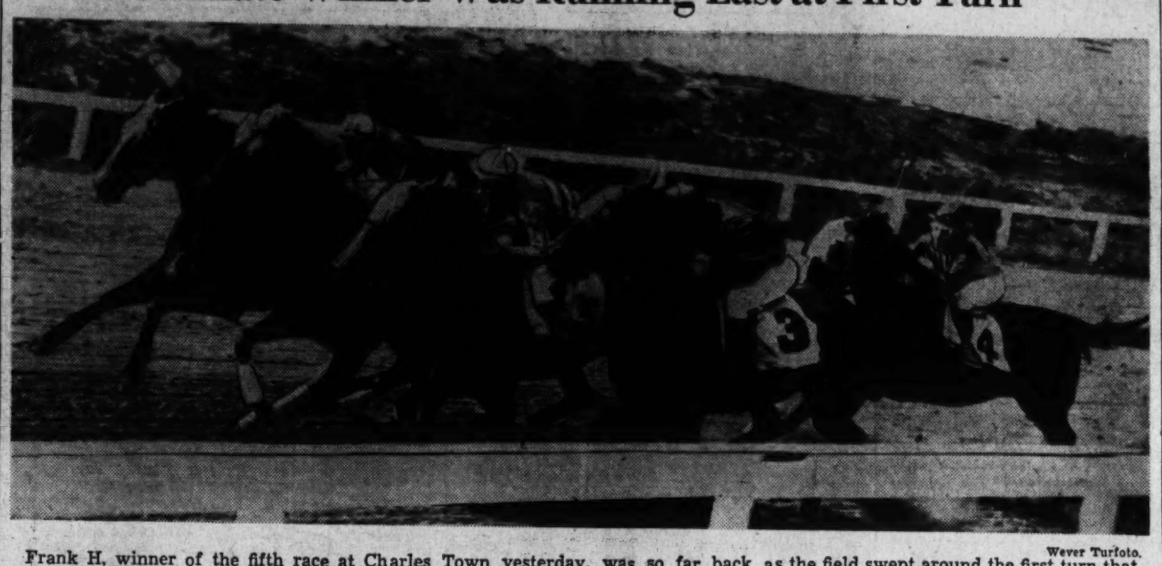

New York, May 28.—Promoter Mike Jacobs announced tonight, after a four-hour conference with Johnny Ray, manager of Billy Conn, that the heavyweight title bout between Conn and Champion Joe Louis was officially set for June 18 at the Polo Grounds.

The conference for a time broke out into a long and heated argument, in which the chief bone of contention was the amount of control Jacobs is to have over Conn after the fight in case the Pittsburgh lad should win the championship.

Bucs Defeat Reds, 7-4, Gain Split in Series

By the Associated Press

Cincinnati, May 28.—Backed by Max Butcher's heady hurling, Pittsburgh's Pirates coasted to an easy 7-to-4 victory over the world champion Reds today to split even in the two-game series.

Butcher scattered a dozen hits through seven of nine innings but only in the eighth and ninth did the Reds "do business," gaining two tallies in each.

His mates, meanwhile found the range on Whitey Moore almost from the start, scoring twice on walks to Jeep Handley and Eddie Stewart and singles by Maurice Van Robays and Elbie Fletcher. Moore, gunning for his second win, survived the second but went to the showers and his initial setback two-thirds of the way through the third.

Len Macaluso Heads Mat Card Tonight

Len Macaluso, erstwhile All-American footballer from Colgate, and Lou Plummer, Baltimore villain, will take over the wrestling spotlight tonight at Turner's Arena.

Macaluso hopes to duplicate the feats of other former gridiron stars who moved into title contention and won the heavyweight championship, and none other than Promoter Joe Turner is of the opinion the husky New Yorker has the stuff to do it. Among the champion ex-gridders were Gus Sonnenberg and Bronko Nagurski, All-Americans at Dartmouth and Minnesota.

This will mark the third week in a row Macaluso has headlined an arena show, and each week he is growing in popularity. Last Thursday he won from Rudy Dusek, employing some of those football power tactics to whip the rowdy Nebraskan.

Another erstwhile gridiron star, Leo Nurman, All-Pacific Coast fullback from University of Washington, will meet Milo Steinborn, the Memphis "Strong Man," in a semiwindup. Abie Coleman, the gnome, will return after a year's absence to meet Jim Austeri, of Wisconsin.

A two-man team match will be one of the added attractions. The Green Hornet, masked wrestler, who still remains as the mystery man, will team with Eddie (Porky) Newman against the scientific combination of Paul Boesch and Fred (Legs) Grobmier.

First bout is at 8:30.

Coolidge Netmen Beat Wilson, 5-2

Calvin Coolidge racqueters won their final tennis matches of the season against Woodrow Wilson, 5 to 2, on the Pierce Mill courts, putting Coolidge in second place in the interhigh series.

Hoyas to Send Four to IC 4-A Track Meet

A small but formidable group of four will represent Georgetown University in the annual I. C. 4-A meet, closing the 1940-41 collegiate track season Friday and Saturday at Philadelphia.

Heading the quartet of Georgetown representatives will be Al Blozis, who will defend his titles in the shot put and discus. Jack Doolan will compete in the 100 and in the broad jump. Morty Alnwick will run the 440, and Ken Lyden is entered in the 880.

Blozis, of course, is the Hoya conceded the best chance to bring home a victory. Big Al will be favored in both his specialties. Of the other three, Lyden appears to be in the best position to sneak through to an upset victory. The slim junior was third in the half-mile event in last year's I. C. 4-A meet and is expected currently to better that record.

Both Doolan and Alnwick are strong contenders, though they will not be favorites. Doolan, improving steadily since reporting late for practice because of his activities with the football team, would have to beat Barney Ewell and other top sprinters to take the century.

Alnwick, a senior in the Georgetown School of Foreign Service, is credited with running the fastest quarter-mile of the season in Madison Square Garden, a 47.8 effort in the Millrose Games.

East Potomac Pool Opens Tomorrow

The East Potomac swimming pool will open to the public at 1 p. m. tomorrow and remain open until 11 p. m., the Welfare and Recreational Association announced yesterday.

The Anacostia, McKinley, Banneker, Takoma and Francis pools will be ready June 7, it was revealed. Twenty-five trained lifeguards will be on duty at the pools.

Capacity of the East Potomac pool is reported as 3,000 swimmers. The schedule which will prevail for the season: Open in the morning from 9 until noon; in the afternoon from 1 until 6, and in the evening from 7 until 11.

Browns Beat Chisox, 8-4, For 2 in Row

By the Associated Press

Chicago, May 28.—The St. Louis Browns, after spotting the Chicago White Sox a 4 to 1 lead going into the first of the sixth inning, knocked Edgar Smith out of the box today and went on to an 8 to 4 victory for their second win in a row over the Chicago team.

The Browns made 12 hits off Smith and Pete Appleton while the Chicago club got 13 safeties off Denny Galehouse, Elden Auker and Bob Harris. Smith was chased in the ninth after giving up 19 hits. Galehouse lasted until the fifth, giving up eight hits and all of the Sox runs.

Harlond Clift led the St. Louis attack with two homers and a double. Bill Knickerbocker supplied four of the Sox hits, having a perfect day with a single, double and two triples.

Cards Down Cubs, 6 to 5, 9th Straight

By the Associated Press

St. Louis, May 28.—The strong finishing Cardinals snatched another victory right out of their opponents hands today, defeating the Chicago Cubs, 6 to 5, with a three-run rally in the ninth inning.

Although outhit, 11 to 9, and three runs down as they moved into the stretch, the league leaders put together a double, a triple and two singles to sweep the series and mark up their ninth consecutive victory.

Duplicating the feat of Johnny Mize, who, despite an injured finger pinch batted for the Cards to a ninth inning victory over the Cubs last night, Don Padgett swung for Catcher Gus Mancuso at the crucial moment today and lined a sharp single to right field scoring Steve Mesner from third with the winning run.

Clyde Shoun, who worked only one inning, was credited with his first win of the year.

The veteran Larry French, who always gives the Redbirds trouble, allowed only five hits during the first eight innings and appeared well on the road to upsetting their winning stride, when trouble started. He finally was bombarded off the hill and charged with the loss.

Bill Nicholson, Lou Novikoff and Terry Moore hit home runs, with the blows by Nicholson and Moore accounting for two runs each in the fourth inning.

Dave Allerdice To Take Air Corps Exam Next Month

New York, May 28.— David Way Allerdice, jr., Princeton University senior and one of the Nation's great forward passers, will take an examination on June 9 at the University to qualify for enrollment in the United States Army Air Corps, Col. G. H. Baird, commanding officer in charge of recruiting for the "Second Corps Area," announced today.

Allerdice, who weighs between 185 and 190 pounds, is expected to reduce to the required maximum weight of 181 pounds before June 9, Col. Baird said.

Allerdice suffered severe burns last January 5 in an unsuccessful attempt to save his mother and a younger brother from a fire that destroyed their home in Indianapolis. He succeeded in saving his father, former All-American back at the University of Michigan, from the blazing house. The elder Mr. Allerdice, however, died of burns in Methodist Hospital, Indianapolis, five days later.

Jungle Moon Wins Photo-Finish in Charles Town Feature

Welsh Lad Beaten in Great Duel

Long Shot Pays $40; L. Eversole Gives Winner Fine Ride; Favored Remolee 3d

By Walter Haight

A Staff Correspondent

Charles Town, W. Va., May 28.—Going to the front as a team at the top of the stretch, J. Sands' Jungle Moon and Mrs. G. H. Pearce's Welsh Lad fought a thrilling head and head battle right down to the wire today. The camera had to separate them and voted chief money to Jungle Moon, the longest shot in the field of seven competing in the Baltimore Evening Sun Purse. A length and a half farther back came J. E. Simmons' Remolee and Mrs. H. S. Clark's Mason Dixon and a second photo showed Remolee, the favorite, in third position.

Jungle Moon paid his scattered backers a juicy $40.40 mutuel after a brilliant ride by Jockey L. Eversole. The 4-year-old Okapi gelding was clocked in 1:20 1-5 for the 6½ furlongs. The track was fast and the weather hot. The smallest crowd of the meeting to date, saw the thrilling action.

Eversole got the most out of Jungle Moon. In the early stages of the battle, when Beaming Lady, Rippling On and Ramolee were struggling along in front, Eversole saved ground. Going into the backstretch, he found a hole along the rail and shot Jungle Moon into serious contention.

Beaming Lady then drew out and appeared headed for victory. Eversole found the way blocked on the inside so he swung out for room. Then Welsh Lad, under Jockey Buddy Root's handling, came to the inside of Beaming Lady. The front runner then faltered and Jungle Moon and Welsh Lad began their fine struggle to the wire.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUNGLE MOON, $40.40, $14.60, $5.00; WELSH LAD, $4.80, $2.60; REMOLEE, $2.40.

JUNGLE MOON, within striking distance from the start, came to serious contention on the inside, swung out for racing room and responded to vigorous handling to be up in the final strides. WELSH LAD, slow to begin, came through on the inside entering the stretch and fought it out willingly. REMOLEE was shuffled back at the first turn and closed with good energy. MASON DIXON closed ground from a slow beginning.

SEVENTH RACE—About 4½ furlongs. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward: claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:26½. Off at 5:27. Winner, Cedar Hill Farm's gr. m. Two-dollar mutuels paid—NEVER HOME, $9.00, $3.60, $3.20; HIBLAZE, $3.00, $2.60; WESTING, $5.20.

NEVER HOME, first away, was strongly handled while setting the pace and drew out in the closing test under a drive. HIBLAZE came through on the inside to reach contention, but was no match for the winner at the end. WESTING raced wide throughout and closed willingly. OWALLER had speed in spots.

EIGHTH RACE—One and one-sixteenth miles. Purse, $500. For 3-year-olds and upward: claiming. Start good. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:55½. Off at 5:55½. Winner, Mrs. P. G. Simms' b. g. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLOX, $3.40, $2.60, $2.60; FREDALVA, $3.80, $3.60; BLUE CYCLONE, $3.80.

BLOX, off alertly, saved ground while racing with FREDALVA and held on with rare courage in the closing test. FREDALVA, off in a tangle, was rushed to contention between horses in the opening quarter, came to the outside of BLOX and closed willingly. BLUE CYCLONE was bothered by FREDALVA early and came with good courage in the closing drive. EXTRA GOOD hung in the final quarter.

Dear Al.:

If I keep on giving Snooks Winters publicity on his clothes I'm going to break him. Somebody says he knows five fellows who wear the same sizes and is renting those outfits. Well, the Stevens, Inc., Hotdogs proved little more than skinless franks in yesterday's softball game. The Press Box Pests scored in every inning and won, 21-7. After the game, they were being called the Stevens Beefs No. 1. On the beef parade was Leeds Riely, a ringer, who played like a fugitive from a beanbag game. Riley was consistent. He proved a sieve at first base and in center field. He tried to pitch and was knocked out of the box. He did accomplish something—he got himself thoroughly tired. And I ran for myself, although I probably would have made better time had I rolled. This makes seven straight years of victories for the Press Box over Stevens. I have received a postcard carrying a lot of hard knocks aimed at Starter John Morrissey. The writer contends that on the day Last Bet ran away, the starter told Jockey Kelly to get off Roman Boy and allowed other horses to keep their jockeys up during the ten minutes at the post. Well, this well-meaning complainant is all wet. The truth is that Morrissey told all the boys to take the weight off their horses. The other riders sat up in the superstructure of the starting gate. From the grandstand it might have appeared that Morrissey was playing favorite with Roman Boy, but this was not the case. Morrissey is as on the level as the surface of a pail of water. Mrs. M. McNey sold Artist at private terms to Mrs. Al McBrain, who turned the gelding over to her husband to train. J. R. Cale sold Jemulus to Mrs. W. C. McCullogh, who turned the gelding over to A. F. Wood to train. H. S. Clark has taken over Mrs. W. C. Byron's Trapshot to train. The Zero Stable has leased High Hedge and Tall Cedar. They have been turned over to Chuck Frost to train. Members of Starter Morrissey's schooling are: Red Wings, The Fop, Transday and My First. H. L. Drennan turned Petsamo over to Everett Brining to train. See you on the rail. BILL.

First race—Maiden Fern has worked well for this event and will be a hard horse to beat. Miss Rippon comes from a good barn and is reported ready. True Pilate for the show end. Terry May is the class but is a very doubtful starter.

Second race—The chief speed in this event is on the reserve list. Roving Eye and Way Out probably will finish in order if taken off the also eligible line-up Satin Royce seems the best of those assured a place at the gate.

Third race—Bill Bleiweiss may be the right one in this field. I'm gambling on his being ready Irish Oak belongs with this kind and should be a keen factor. Dark Age for the minor award.

Fourth race—Wandering Hero has done about everything asked hereabouts and meets a field that suits his purposes. I'm going to string along. Mr. Jim won recently and is a threat. Gold Cap II to fill out the money bracket.

Fifth race—Miss Warning was second to Roman Boy in a shorter race and was closing ground at the end. Marandan has been racing close up and is dangerous. Clocks has been going in fine style.

Sixth race—Angry Waters gets in this with a feather assignment and could be the right one. Zac Pam has worked encouragingly and should be in the thick of contention. Ida Time for the show award.

Seventh race—Allen Caid seems well placed in this field. Likes the route and has worked well. Dun Lucky turned in a creditable race last out. Justa Jimmie is ready for the best and should be right there.

Eighth race—Jean C. has speed and gets a good position. May take the top and hold it. Summer Stock has been racing in good fashion. Count Me turned in a fine effort last out.

Sub race—If this event is used, I'll take Maebeau, Scarlet Flame and Fernbrake.

Best bet—Allen Caid.

Two Trainers Are Suspended

Boston, May 28 (AP).—The Massachusetts State racing commission today suspended Trainers C. A. Grande and F. Carra for the balance of the Suffolk Downs meeting.

All horses, owned and trained by the two men, also were suspended, but may be reinstated if placed in charge of a trainer licensed by the commission and "agreeable" to the Suffolk Downs stewards.

Grande and Carra had been suspended by Suffolk Downs stewards, the former in connection with the positive reaction of the sallva taken from Riverdan, winner of the fourth race on May 19, and the latter for the same reason involving Lady Val, winner of the second race on May 16.

Underwriters Elect 3 New Directors Here

Three new directors were elected yesterday by members of the District of Columbia Life Underwriters Association at a luncheon in the Lee Sheraton Hotel.

They are: Paul W. Hammack, Prudential, who is current president of the Life Insurance Club, of Washington; Warren S. Stone, of New York Life, and T. Loehl O'Brien, of Massachusetts Mutual. An existing vacancy on the directorate due to a resignation will be filled by appointment, President John D. Marsh said. Directors' terms are for three years.

The new directors will meet with the other six directors within the next two weeks to name the association's president and other officers.

Joseph A. Marr, of Penn Mutual, a past president of the Underwriters Association, spoke on the work of the national association in promoting the Lonergan amendment in Congress and other legislative aims.

Retail Sales Figures

The Federal Reserve Bank of Richmond yesterday reported the following facts concerning Washington department store sales in April: 35 per cent above same month last year; stocks on hand as of April 30 were 9 per cent above same 1940 date; outstanding orders on April 30 were 92 per cent above same 1940 date; accounts receivable on April 30 were 15 per cent above same 1940 date; percentage of collections in April to accounts receivable on April 1 was 29 per cent.

The report also showed department store sales here in the first four months were 21 per cent heavier than in the same 1940 period.

Dr. Gearhart Elected

Dr. Clyde M. Gearhart was elected president of the Linen Supply Exchange of the District of Columbia at a luncheon session yesterday in the Willard Hotel. Other elected officers are: Vice president, Stephen J. Demas; treasurer, E. O. Craig; secretary, George N. Walker.

Directors are: Mr. Craig, Frank C. Davis, Ben E. Singer (retiring president); Walter F. Brauns and Richard E. Vincent.

Treasury Allots Issue

By the Associated Press

The Treasury announces that subscriptions for the $600,000,000 of new bonds offered for sale last week totaled $8,268,000,000. Subscribers were allotted 8 per cent of their requests, calculations being made to the nearest $100.

The new bonds are 2½ per cent, 15-17 year securities. The same bonds were offered in exchange for $834,000,000 of maturing bonds. Holders of $788,000,000 worth of the old bonds accepted the bond exchange. Holders of an additional $1,000,000 of the old bonds accepted an alternative exchange for 2 year Treasury notes.

Favor Staggered Pay Days

Members of the District of Columbia Building and Loan League, meeting yesterday, voted unanimously in favor of the staggering of Government pay days. The present semi-monthly system, it was pointed out, throws a mass of work into the associations on the first and fifteenth of each month and late afternoon hours are observed to accommodate patrons.

William N. Payne, jr., president of the league, called the attention of the members to the June outing to be held at the Washingon Golf and Country Club on the eighteenth. According to Chapin B. Bauman approximately 150 officers and directors of the various units will attend, with a golf tournament slated to occupy the early part of the afternoon.

P.-C. A. Expands Service

For the second time in ten days, air service between Washington and Detroit has been increased by Pennsylvania-Central Airlines, effective yesterday, to accommodate the increased traffic over this route. The new schedule addition, announced by V. K. Stephens, district traffic manager for the air line, provides a total of ten flights daily between here and Detroit, the largest number in the history of P.-C. A. The new flight is a noon departure.

Carloading Firm Elects

E. M. Dillhoefer has been elected president of the National Carloading Corporation, freight consolidators and forwarders, it was announced yesterday. Mr. Dillhoefer has been executive vice president for six years.

Other officers elected include L. C. Kerner, vice president, with headquarters in New York City; T. R. Hudd, vice president, located in Chicago; H. L. Bockstahler, treasurer, and P. J. Coughlin, secretary and general counsel.

The Washington office of the carloading corporation is under the direction of T. Z. Sullivan.

R. C. Jones Gets Seat

Robert C. Jones, head of the Washington investment house bearing his name, has been elected to membership in the New York Coffee & Sugar Exchange, Inc., the board of managers revealed last night in New York.

Advertising Up Slightly

Retail display advertising in newspapers of 83 measured cities showed a fractional increase over last year during the week ended May 17, according to a tabulation by Advertising Age.

For that week total retail advertising volume was 21,935,744 lines, an increase of 0.9 per cent from last year's total of 21,730,477 lines.

For the 20-week period since the beginning of the year, retail advertising in the measured cities is 4 per cent ahead of 1940. The total for this year is 395,912,251 lines, compared with 380,741,503 lines last year.

London Stocks Firm On Roosevelt Speech

London, May 28 (AP).—The stock market closed firm today, encouraged by President Roosevelt's speech, but trading was restricted because of uncertainty over the situation at Crete.

British funds maintained early gains and iron and steel issues were prominent among industrials. In the foreign section Chinese bonds were firm.

Seat Price Off $1,000

New York, May 28 (AP).—Arrangements were reported today for sale of a New York Stock Exchange seat for $27,000, off $1,000 from the previous sale.

Aircrafts and Steels Climb Vigorously On President's Speech; Rest of List Uneven

New York, May 28.—Aircraft and rails responded with solid upturns today to President Roosevelt's proclamation of a state of unlimited emergency but the major part of the stock market moved unevenly.

A few specialty shares reached new 1941 highs and farm implement company securities were strong. United States Government bonds followed the upward course of the aircrafts.

However, few operators were willing to undertake any great amount of trading pending events likely to result from the declaration of the Nation's policy.

The Associated Press average of 60 selected stocks held unchanged at 39.6. Transactions totaled only 343,970 shares, compared with 385,290 yesterday.

Wall Street's chief reaction to the order of the day was that there had been injected into the securities market puzzle a new unknown factor: Just how the almost unlimited economic powers invoked by the President would be used.

Some financial district authorities suggested the Chief Executive's insistence on labor-capital peace and the gravity with which citizens were brought to face the emergency would likely step up to unpredictable heights the rate of defense production.

Chief gainers among the more active shares were Consolidated Aircraft, Douglas, United Aircraft, Sperry, Pennsylvania Railroad, Union Pacific, Southern Railway, International Harvester, Oliver Farm, Schenley Distillers, Amerada Corporation, Continental Baking and International Paper preferred. The last three established highs.

In the Curb, where turnover was 48,000 shares, compared with 61,000 yesterday, rises were recorded for Aluminum of America, Bell Aircraft, Chestbrough Manufacturing, New Jersey Zinc, Fairchild Engine & Aircraft, and Brewster Aeronautical.

Commodities were mixed. At Chicago, the close found wheat ½ cent to 1⅛ cents a bushel down, corn ⅛ to ⅜ cent off, and hogs unchanged to 10 cents lower. Cotton ended the day 30 cents a bale up to 10 cents down.

What traders called "good retail buying" was evident today in active over the counter sales of United States Government bonds, boosting prices from 7-32 to 10-32 above yesterday's close in the long term section.

Stock exchange trading in bonds was light, the Treasuries holding about steady with their top prices of the day. Face value turnover on the exchange was $5,775,600, best of the week compared with $5,703,600 Tuesday.

Over the counter sales of the new 2½ of 1956-58 closed at 102 29-32, off from the day's high levels, but 6-32 point above Tuesday's close.

Little interest was evident in speculative rail obligations and price changes were mostly in fractions.

Commodities' Margin Rules Made Uniform

By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—In response to demands of Federal authorities for restraints on speculative dealings in essential commodities the New York Commodity Exchange operated today under orders to its member brokers to impose uniform minimum margin requirements on dealings in rubber, hides, silk and certain nonferrous metals for future delivery.

On rubber futures the margins were fixed at $1,200 per contract (10 tons); hides, $700 per contract of 40,000 pounds; silk, $650 per contract of 1,300 pounds; copper, lead and tin, with contract units ranging from 11,200 pounds for tin to 60,000 for lead, $650 per contract.

The new margins on rubber became operative as of May 15; for the other staples the effective date was today.

Heretofore margins on these commodities were left to the discretion of the broker. The action followed a similar move by some other New York Commodity Exchanges in the wake of recent Washington complaints of excessive speculative activity and too rapid rises in a number of foods and other key staples.

Hides held the commodity futures trading spotlight today and the price of the staple was badly dented by collision with a price ceiling erected overnight. Many other important staples also recorded declines.

Under heavy speculative liquidation from the start, the tanners' material showed final losses ranging from .58 to .64 of a cent a pound. The top price for basis hide grade was fixed at 15 cents a pound by OPM authorities.

Santos coffee futures also were hit by Federal dissatisfaction with ruling quotations as evidenced by Army rejection of bids for 11,000,000 pounds of coffee beans, the bids ranged from slightly more than 11 cents to about 12½ cents a pound for Santos No. 4s. The Santos futures market dropped .13 to .18 of a cent a pound.

Cottonseed oil declined .05 to .10 of a cent a pound; cocoa, .14 to .18 of a cent, and rubber, .07 to .15 of a cent.

Sugar and cotton futures were about steady and wool tops were irregular.

Chicago wheat gave up ½ to 1⅛ cents a bushel; corn closed down, ⅛ to ⅜.

Traders semed uncertain in their immediate appraisals of the market significance of the President's proclamation of an unlimited national emergency and his pronouncement on national policy.

The Associated Press weighted index of 35 wholesale spot commodities dipped to 84.89 per cent of the 1926 average from 84.98 per cent Tuesday.

Barbour Heads Fire Underwriters

New York, May 28 (AP).—Robert P. Barbour, United States manager of the Northern Assurance Co., today was elected president of the National Board of Fire Underwriters, succeeding Col. F. D. Layton, president of the National Fire Insurance Co. of Hartford, Conn.

John M. Thomas, president of the National Union Fire Insurance Co. of Pittsburgh, was advanced from chairman of the executive committee to vice president, succeeding Barbour.

Elected to the executive committee were John R. Cooney, president of the Firemen's Insurance Co. of Newark, N. J.; W. B. Cruttenden, president of the Springfield Fire & Marine Insurance Co.; Harold Warner, United States manager of the Royal-Liverpool groups; J. Lester Parsons, president of the United States Fire Insurance Co., and Hart Darlington, manager of the Norwich Union Fire Insurance Society.

Ohio Standard Votes $5,000,000 Issue

Cleveland, May 28 (AP).—Directors of Standard Oil Co. of Ohio today authorized issuance of $5,000,000 of serial debentures to provide additional working capital. The debentures which will not be publicly offered will mature serially over the period 1949-1956 inclusive and will bear interest at rates ranging from 2.65 per cent to 3 per cent per year Sohio announced.

New York, May 28 (AP).—Financial circles reported today the United Gas Improvement Co. had reached an agreement to sell its Arizona electric properties to North American Gas & Electric Co. in compliance with integration provisions of the Public Utility Act of 193[illegible]

Two Pipelines Through South Will Be Built

By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—Construction of two huge "defense pipelines"—one for gasoline and the other for natural gas—through the heart of the industrial South will begin shortly, it was disclosed today.

Ford, Bason & Davis, Inc., constructing engineers, announced they had been awarded the contracts for the new lines which will cost more than $22,000,000 and rank among the largest in the world.

The gasoline line will run from the refineries of Louisiana to Greensboro, N. C., and possibly to the naval base at Norfolk. It will be the operating facility of Plantation Pipe Line Co., owned jointly by Standard Oil of New Jersey, Standard Oil of Kentucky and Shell Union Oil.

Route of Gas Line

The gas line will comprise hookups and compressor station additions to the Southern Natural Gas Co. system, running from the Monroe field of Louisiana into eastern Georgia and servicing on its way the great steel center at Birmingham where leading customers are United States Steel and Republic Steel mills.

Both the lines are intended to relieve bottlenecks now developing in Southern industries due to rising defense industrial production.

The allocation of coastwise oil tankers to transatlantic service is resulting in a tightening gasoline stock situation, oil men say. And utilities experts suggest present drought conditions may hamper hydroelectric power production in the territory the gas line will serve.

Will Cost $22,000,000

The gas-line system is expected to cost between $7,000,000 and $8,000,000, including many existing facilities.

Estimates on the probable cost of the gasoline line run to about $15,000,000, with $6,000,000 of orders for pipes already placed.

Placing of the contract was delayed until recently by the inability of Plantation to obtain rights of way across railroads in many of the Southern States. Recent demands by the Federal Government for the reconstruction of the gasoline line as a "vital necessity" have, however, caused company officials to believe they can go ahead with construction fully confident that rights of way can be obtained.

Earnings Reports

Commonwealth & Southern reported consolidated net income for the four months ended April 30 of $6,486,552, equal after preferred dividends to 10 cents a common share, compared with $5,710,522, or 8 cents a share, in the like 1940 period.

American Safety Razor Corporation reported net income for the quarter ended March 31 of $81,006, equal to 15 cents a share on 523,400 capital shares, compared with $136,071, or 26 cents a share on 524,400 shares, for the like quarter of 1940.

International Paper & Power Co. and subsidiaries reported net profit for the 1941 March quarter of $3,546,822, equal after quarterly dividend requirements to $1.31 a common share, compared with $2,960,573, or 99 cents a share, in the like 1940 quarter. The company said that on March 31 this year undeclared cumulative dividends on 5 per cent preferred stock amounted to $10 a share or a total of $9,259,350.

United States Leather Co. and subsidiaries reported net profit of $342,391 for the six months ended April 30, equal after preferred dividend requirements to 83 cents a share on Class A stock, compared with $206,807, or 20 cents a share on the Class A stock, for the six months ended April 30, 1940. Unpaid dividends on the 7 per cent cumulative prior preferred will amount to $32 a share on July 1.

Boston and Maine Railroad reported that its revenues during April were $929,216 more than for the same month a year ago, representing a 25.6 per cent increase. Revenues in all departments jumped, the road said—passenger, 15.5 per cent; freight, 30.3; mail, 1.8 and express, 19.8 per cent.

Dixie-Vortex Co., manufacturer of paper cups and containers, reported net income of $840,911 or $1.95 a common share in the 12 months ended March 31, 1941. This compares with $856,385 or $2.03 a common share in the 12 months ended March 31, 1940.

Halsey, Stuart Bids Are Low on Rail Issues

Cleveland, May 28.—The Chicago investment house of Halsey, Stuart & Co., and associates today were awarded $3,100,000 of equipment trust certificates by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway and $1,250,000 worth by the subsidiary Nickel Plate road.

The winning C. & O. bid was 100.111 for 1⅝ per cent obligations dated next June 15 and payable in ten equal installments—an interest cost basis to the company of approximately 1.605 per cent.

The Nickel Plate issue went on a bid of 100.047 for 1¾ per cent obligations of the same date and payable in the same period, an interest cost basis to the road of approximately 1.745 per cent. They will help finance equipment costing not less than $1,393,075.

Chicago Grain Pit Urges Government To Use Facilities

Chicago, May 28 (AP).—Greater Government use of grain trade facilities was urged today by the Chicago Board of Trade in a preliminary report to J. M. Mehl, chief of the Commodity Exchange Administration.

The report was a reply to a recent request of Mehl asking for suggestions respecting the functions of grain exchanges in the defense program.

If the board of trade is to be of "full and complete assistance to the Government," the report said, the Government must utilize more completely than at present grain trade facilities in acquiring, transporting and moving Government grain.

The board said it pledged full support to the Government's efforts to curb excessive speculation and hoarding. Officers of the exchange have already taken steps to insure a free, open, competitive market where the farmer may market his grain with a minimum of disclocations, the report said.

Pennsy Railroad Votes $1 Dividend

Philadelphia, May 28 (AP).—Directors of the Pennsylvania Railroad today declared a dividend of $1 per share on the company's capital stock, payable June 30 to stockholders of record June 7.

Golden Opportunity Seen for Employes To Acquire Share in Corporation's Stock

T. N. Carver, Harvard economist, described the wide scattering of ownership of shares in American corporations during the gay Twenties as "the present economic revolution in the United States."

In the major depression years this broadening of ownership was reversed. Even the marked rise in business activity in 1940 did not reawaken mass buying of securities, according to studies made by Dr. Daniel Starch for Forbes Magazine.

Current social and economic trends are creating a new opportunity for widening the circle of ownership, and delineating the second phase of Carver's "present economic revolution." Wage and tax policies and price ceiling edicts are placing limits on business profits, and, with the overall increase in the national income that is currently taking place, farmers and workers seem destined to increase their income relatively as well as absolutely. Although all groups contribute heavily to the cost of Government in indirect taxes, there is reluctance at Washington to tax directly incomes under $2,000, which are being favorably affected by the current trend of events.

Thus, at least until the cost of living overtakes payroll increases, the savings capacity of the lower income groups is expanding. With the Government interested in an "all out" effort for national defense and aid to the democracies, it would not be consistent with public policy to stimulate unduly the demand from any income groups for consumers' goods. On the contrary, the essence of war finance inheres in shunting goods away from civilians to Government. In connection with materials in limited supply, unrestricted civilian demand might lead to "bottleneck" inflationary situations.

As a way out Secretary Morgenthau has suggested that workers be encouraged to buy Defense Savings Bonds, whereby they pay in $18.75 now and get back $25 in ten years, receiving interest compounded at 2.9 per cent. Such procedure will not only help finance the war effort, but will enable the individual to build up a nest egg. Corporations should facilitate such thrift schemes by offering to set up pay-roll deduction plans, whereby saving will be automatic.

If such programs are developed, companies could help provide employes with a balanced investment diet by encouraging them to put 50 per cent of savings in Federal obligations and the remainder in a seasoned common stock. Where a company makes it possible for employes to acquire its own common shares out of earnings it can reduce the risk by following the Standard Oil precedent of contributing one-third of the purchase price out of corporate funds, provided the worker holds on to the stock for a stipulated period of years.

It was fashionable for corporations to pursue this type of security merchandising and employe relations work in the twenties, when stocks sold on a high price-to-earnings ratio, but this opportunity is neglected now when stocks are available on a low price-to-earnings ratio. From the national standpoint the flow of capital is drying up. Instead of concentrating on stock market palliatives, the remedy may lie in mobilizing for industry new reservoirs of savings of millions of small individuals.

The experiment has much greater chance of succeeding if stocks are sold at low prices rather than at boom levels.

In addition to bringing new capital into play, the proposal has important sociological and political implications. As a byproduct, the technique may develop greater interest on the part of employes in the financial realities of the business. Likewise, it will create a wider bloc in opposition to prosperity-destroying political-business baiting and demagogy.

Power Output At New Record; Index Revised

New York, May 28 (AP).—Under a revised method of figuring total power supply, the Edison Electric Institute today reported electric energy consumption for the week ended May 24 at the record high level of 3,011,754,000 kilowatt-hours.

This compared with the previous week's out-turn of 2,982,715,000 and last year's comparative of 2,588,821,000, both also revised.

Revision of the figures, the institute explained, makes it possible to bring the data reported in closer agreement with statistical reports of the Federal Power Commission.

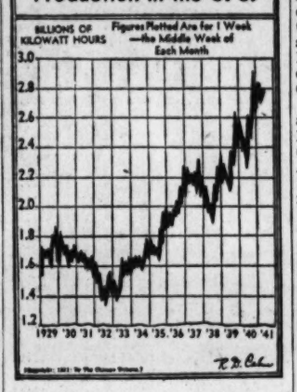

In the current weekly report and hereafter, the institute said, the data will reflect "certain additional governmental and industrial power generation as part of the public supply not heretofore reported."

Late Rally Cuts Loss In Cottonseed Oil

New York, May 28 (AP).—Cottonseed oil futures today were dominated by liquidation which brought extreme declines of about 16 points. A late rally left the list five to ten points net lower at the close. Sales totaled 206 contracts. July closed at *10.54; September, *10.48; October, *10.45, and December, *10.45.

Steel Impasse Spurs Demand For Priorities

By the Associated Press

New York, May 28.—The magazine Iron Age said today "the steel situation has arrived at an impasse from which the only way of escape is by the prompt adoption of mandatory priorities, especially on those products in which the demand far exceeds the available supply."

"That such action," it added, "will be taken soon at Washington there seems to be no doubt. Products which are likely to be included in the first order under the new priorities law are plates, shapes, bars and semifinished steel."

"Defense requirements amounting to several million tons, for which a place must be found on mill schedules, have brought about further congestion of steel orders, actual and prospective.

"As much of this tonnage calls for deliveries starting fairly soon, the inevitable result will be to push aside commercial orders, many of which have already been delayed weeks beyond the time of shipment originally promised.

"Consumption of steel for civilian uses is beginning to feel the effects of the mounting requirements for defense."

Iron Age cited the British program, amounting to 1,000,000 tons of semifinished and finished steel, as "among the large requirements for which rolling space must be found."

In addition to this tonnage, the report said, the British want 240,000 tons of low phosphorous and Bessemer pig iron and 300,000 to 400,000 tons of tin plate.

Unfilled Orders Up 13% in April, Set New Record

New York, May 28 (AP).—Manufacturers' unfilled orders, inventories and shipments reached record levels in April, the National Industrial Conference Board said today.

Unfilled orders of 17 industrial groups normally manufacture to order increased 13 per cent during the month and were 3½ times as large as a year ago.

The board's index of manufacturers' inventories rose 1.6 per cent in April and at the end of the month was 16 per cent above a year ago.

The index of shipments, which declined in March, advanced 7 per cent to a new peak 3 per cent higher than the previous record reached in February. They were 61 per cent greater than April, 1940.

H. F. Sinclair Takes Reins of Cons. Oil

New York, May 28 (AP).—Harry F. Sinclair today was elected president of the Consolidated Oil Corporation, succeeding Herbert R. Gallagher, who resigned several months ago.

Sinclair relinquished his position as chairman of the executive committee to E. W. Sinclair, who had previously acted as chairman of the finance committee.

Sheldon Clark was promoted from vice president to finance committee chairman.

Big Ohio Store Declared Pawn In Rail Deal

By the Associated Press

Cleveland, May 28.—Millionaire George A. Ball was accused today of selling two Clevelanders a department store at "far less" than value because they "conspired" to block Alleghany Corporation's two highest officials from controlling the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway system.

The charge was made by Chairman Robert R. Young and President Allan P. Kirby, of Alleghany Corporation, in a Federal court suit seeking to divest Charles A. Bradley and John P. Murphy from control of the Higbee Co., a large Cleveland department store.

Four years ago Young, Kirby and an associate contracted to pay Ball's charitable foundation $6,375,001 for controlling securities in the Alleghany Railroad realm—including C. & O.—and for Cleveland realty securities.

Young and Kirby said they retained Bradley and Murphy "in positions of responsibility and authority" in the rail empire at Ball's urging, but the two men then conspired with Ball to deprive the buyers of control of the C. & O. system.

"In consideration of the collaboration," the suit continued, Ball sold Bradley and Murphy control of the Higbee Co. for $600,000—"far less than the amount which Defendant Ball knew the plaintiffs were willing to pay for said securities, and far less than the then value thereof."

The suit asked that Bradley and Murphy be ordered to deliver to Young and Kirby "all their right, title and interest in" the Higbee securities "upon being reimbursed for their advancements in such amount as to the court seems just."

Ball is a Muncie (Ind.) fruit jar maker and industrialist. Bradley is chairman of Erie Railroad Co., and Murphy formerly was personal attorney for O. P. Van Sweringen. Their alleged actions concerned a 1938 deadlock on the directorate of Chesapeake Corporation, former middle holding company of the system.

Young and Kirby also are suing Ball at Indianapolis to recover $5,000,000 of their purchase price, contending Ball misled them about Alleghany's value by engaging in allegedly illegal stock exchange transactions. Ball obtained control in 1935 when a banking group auctioned key securities after the late O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen defaulted on loans.

Gotham Banks to Stay Open on Saturdays

New York, May 28 (AP).—Member banks of the New York Clearing House Association, which includes all the big commercial banks of the city, will remain open on Saturdays this summer as a result of the proclamation of an unlimited emergency.

The announcement was in the form of a resolution adopted by the association's clearing house committee. For the last two years banks have closed on Saturdays in July and August.

Rail Nets Up $18,448,357 During April

By the Associated Press

Class 1 railroad earnings in April amounted to $52,568,880, before interest and rentals, compared with $34,120,523 in April, 1940, and $60,882,332 in April, 1930, the Association of American Railroads reported yesterday.

The April earnings were at an annual rate of 3.07 per cent on the railroads' property investment, compared with 2.01 per cent in April, 1940, and 3.61 in April, 1930.

In the first four months this year the railroads' earnings were $254,072,100, before interest and rentals, compared with $150,024,090 in the same period of 1940, and $233,942,444 in the first four months of 1930.

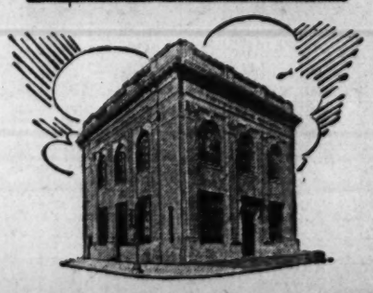

Earnings in the first four months this year were at an annual rate of 3.85 per cent on the railroads' property investment, compared with 2.30 per cent in the same period of 1940 and 3.51 per cent in the first five months of 1930.

Union Pacific Buys 20 New Locomotives

Omaha, May 28 (AP).—Purchase of 20 new locomotives from the American Locomotive Co. at an approximate cost of $5,000,000 was announced today by W. M. Jeffers, president of the Union Pacific Railroad. The 4-6-6-4 type engines are scheduled for delivery early in 1942.

Nats Lose First Night Game Here

Keller drew a walk from Hudson, who had been pitching six-hit ball to that point. Joe Gordon grounded to Travis and the mob in the stands perceived a timely double-play in the making, only to register horror when Travis fumbled the ball.

Everyone Advances

First muffing it, then kicking the ball out of reach with his foot, Travis eventually pounced upon it and attempted a force-out of Keller at second with a throw to Buddy Myer, but his heave was wide of Myer, rolled into right field, and Yankees scurried around the bases. DiMaggio scored, Keller reached third and Gordon romped to second before Right Fielder Buddy Lewis snatched up the ball.

Strategy dictated that the dangerous Bill Dickey be purposely passed at this point to fill the bases, and the Yankees countered by inserting Selkirk to pinch-hit for Crosetti. He did. With the count two balls and two strikes, he lofted one of Hudson's fast balls far over the wall.

The majesty of the home run was never better demonstrated than in Washington's first night game. Five of the Yankee runs were produced by homers, Tom Henrich having banged one of Hudson's pitches over the same wall with the bases empty in the sixth inning.

Yankees Outhit

Ironically, the Nats outhit the Yankees, 11 to 7, but Rookie Steve Peek, late of Newark, scattered the Nats' hits after the first inning when they took a 2-0 lead. At the end of the eighth, he retired in favor of Forrest Breuer.

The crowd, seemingly oblivious of the lights after its first glimpses of the tall towers and complete transformation of the darkness into a white brilliance, lost itself in the excitement of the ball game when the Nats took a 2-0 lead in the first inning.

The Nats packed four hits into that first inning, one of them a freak-hopping single off Cramer's bat that bounced over Rolfe's head. It followed Lewis' single to right. Mickey Vernon fetched home the first run of the game with a single to center and took second on the throw-in. Buddy Myer beat out a hit to Crosetti to score Cramer, but Vernon snuffed out the rally by rounding third too far and being tagged out on Crosetti's throw to Rolfe.

Case Scores

George Case's speed was a factor in a run for the Nats in the third inning. He drew a walk, stole second, moved to third on Lewis' infield out, and after Cramer walked, Case scored on Travis' single to left. Vernon and Myer abandoned two more potential runs.

The Nats attempted valiantly to get back in the ball game in the eighth and did cut a run off the Yanks' 6-3 lead. Travis, as if in penance for his fielding sin of the big Yankee inning, led off with a lusty two-bagger against the right field wall, but Vernon and Myer left him stranded with easy outs. Jake Early belted a long triple into the center field corner, ultimately, to get him home, but the rally died with Bloodworth's infield out.

Pinch-Hitter Johnny Welaj struck out to open the Nats ninth, but George Case halted the movement toward the exits when he tripled into the left field corner. Lewis grounded out, and Case scored. The game ended happily for the Yankees when Cramer lined a drive into Joe DiMaggio's glove.

Gov't. Printers Top Air Station

The Government Printing Office defeated Naval Air Station, 6-2, yesterday in a U. S. Government League game on the Ellipse. Webb was the winning pitcher and Taylor the loser. Right Fielder Sole with a double and two singles sparked the winners' attack.

COMPLETE FUNERAL

Ordinarily you would expect to pay at least $50 more for a funeral like this—then when you realize that it includes 60 or more services, cars and all, you'll know why Chambers has won a reputation for quality at minimum cost. The handsome half-couch casket is covered with grey doeskin.

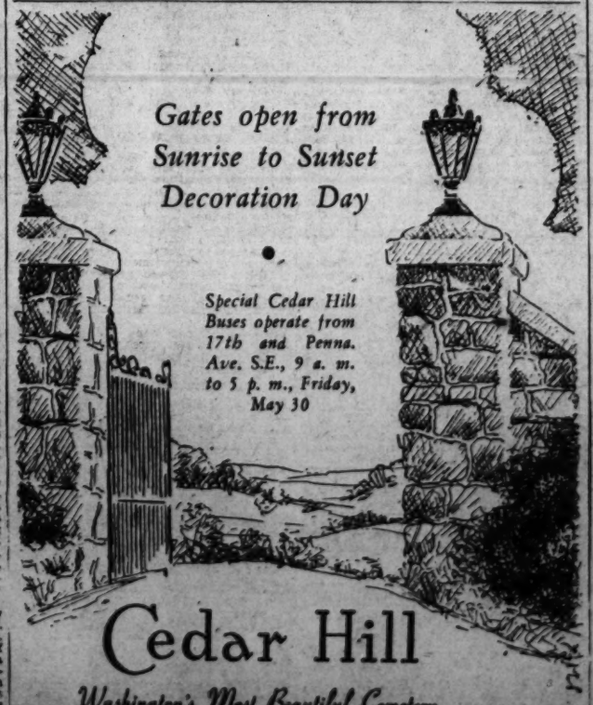

$265

This complete funeral, with a massive all-metal, half-couch casket reflects costliness and dignity—yet, at Chambers, it is remarkably low priced. 60 or more services are included at no extra cost to the client.

Official Notices

COMMISSIONERS OF THE DISTRICT OF COLUMBIA, May 15, 1941. A public hearing having been held on May 5, 1941, by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia in the matter of closing certain street and alley areas in the District of Columbia, as hereinafter described, and the said Commissioners being satisfied as to the equity, justice and advisability of said closings, and that the same are not detrimental to the public interests nor to the interests of abutting property owners, NOTICE IS HEREBY GIVEN that the said Commissioners have prepared the following Order, viz: "Ordered, That pursuant to the provisions of Public Act No. 307, approved December 15, 1932, the street and alley areas as shown in green on plats filed in the office of the Surveyor of the District of Columbia, and numbered as Maps 2494, 2495 and 2496, are hereby ordered CLOSED, same to take effect on and after June 16, 1941, the title to the land contained in said areas so closed to revert to the abutting property owners, as shown on said maps; the said areas hereby ordered closed being described as follows: 1. Closing part of a PUBLIC ALLEY in the rear of Lot 818, Square 431. 2. Closing part of Q STREET at Pennsylvania Avenue and 30th Street, S. E. Closing Q STREET, N. W., in the Bliss Estate property, west of Lover's Lane, abutting on Parcels 39/44 and 39/45." Any and all parties interested must file objections, if any, in writing, to said closings within thirty (30) days after the date of this publication, as shown at the beginning thereof, otherwise said order shall become effective on June 16, 1941, and the street and alley areas, as herein described, shall on and after said date become closed, in accordance with the provisions of said Act. MELVIN C. HAZEN, JOHN RUSSELL YOUNG, DAVID McCOACH, Jr., Commissioners of the District of Columbia. 15,16,17,19-24,26-29,31

District Court No. 2699. Notice and order of publication to property owners assessed for benefits. Notice is hereby given that the jury in the above entitled cause returned its verdict therein on the 26th day of May, 1941, and by said verdict assessed benefits against the following lands or parcels of land, in the following amounts: Square 732—Lots 844, $180.00; 842, $343.50; 845, $19.50; 74, $13.34; 75, $13.33; 76, $13.33; 847, $26.67; 64, $20.00; 849, $20.50; 849, $20.50; 850, $22.00; 851, $18.33; 852, $20.33; 66, $13.84; 67, $14.00; 68, $14.00; 856, $30.67; 819, $52.50; 820, $72.34; 821, $103.35; 822, $103.35; 823, $100.00; 824, $100.00; 825, $100.00; 826, $99.15; 827, $100.85; 65, $158.35; 60, $150.00; 828, $110.00; 829, $90.00; 830, $100.00; 831, $231.90; 832, $59.84; 879, $62.24; 878, $40.00. Therefor, it is by the Court this 27th day of May, 1941, ordered that the objections to said verdict of property owners assessed for benefits (no part of whose land was condemned in this proceeding) be filed in said cause on or before the 26TH DAY OF JUNE, 1941; otherwise said verdict will be finally ratified and confirmed upon the application therefor by the petitioners in said cause: Provided, however, that a copy of this notice and order be published once in each The Washington Post, the Washington Times-Herald and the Washington Evening Star, newspapers published in the District of Columbia, at least ten days before the said 26th day of June, 1941. ALFRED A. WHEAT, Chief Justice. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By H. B. DERTZBAUGH, Assistant Clerk.

WALTER M. BASTIAN and ALBERT F. ADAMS, Attorneys, National Press Building.

IN THE MUNICIPAL COURT OF THE District of Columbia. Alfred L. Taylor, Plaintiff, vs. John P. Undeck, Defendant. At Law No. 109342. Order of publication in attachment. The object of this suit is to recover judgment against the defendant in the sum of Two Hundred Dollars ($200.00) with interest on Eighty-five Dollars ($85) from May 31, 1940, and on One Hundred Fifteen Dollars ($115) from July 1, 1940, besides costs; and to have judgment of condemnation of certain property of the defendant levied on under an attachment issued in this suit to satisfy the plaintiff's claim. It is therefore this 27th day of May, 1941, ordered that the defendant appear in this Court on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, after the day of the first publication of this order, to defend this suit and show cause why said condemnation should not be had; otherwise the suit will be proceeded with as in case of default. By the Court. ELLEN K. BARRY, Judge. A true copy. Test: (Seal.) BLANCHE NEPP, Clerk. By RICHARD A. TRAMMELL, Assistant Clerk. 29,5,12

M. EDWARD BUCKLEY, JR., Attorney, 406 5th Street N.W.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE United States for the District of Columbia. Ruth Lanier, Plaintiff, vs. Emmitt Lanier, Defendant. No. 11079, Civil. The object of this suit is for absolute divorce. On motion of the plaintiff, it is this 26th day of May, 1941, ordered that the defendant, Emmitt Lanier, cause his appearance to be entered herein on or before the fortieth day, exclusive of Sundays and legal holidays, occurring after the day of the first publication of this order; otherwise the cause will be proceeded with as in case of default. Provided a copy of this order be published once a week for three successive weeks in the Washington Law Reporter, and The Washington Post before said day. JAMES W. MORRIS, Justice. Attest: (Seal.) CHARLES E. STEWART, Clerk. By ELEANOR E. JOBE, Assistant Clerk. 29,5,12

It comes as a surprise to most people when they find out that the recordings used by broadcasting companies are not made of wax, as is your orthodox phonograph record, but of aluminum.

And because the recordings are made of aluminum, your radio stations have been up against quite a problem lately. WJSV, for instance, makes about a thousand recordings a year. All important speeches are taken down in this way for the files. And when a network show comes on at the same time as a local program, a recording is usually made of the network production and it's played back over the station at a convenient time.

The problem lies in the fact that aluminum is needed for defense—airplanes and such things. And for the past several weeks the acetate disks, whose base is aluminum, have been hard to get, to put it mildly. Every time the broadcasters get a new record, they have to turn in an old one in exchange. And even then, they're likely not to get them.

Result is that the scientific little wizards of the broadcasting business have done something about it by finding out that they can use glass instead of aluminum for these special recordings.

Reason for all the trouble about broadcasting records is that the acetate disks can be played back immediately after transcription without any processing.

Bill Proposes Roosevelt As Rent Czar

President Roosevelt's month-old concern over Washington rents bore fruit yesterday in a bill to make him the Capital's rent czar.

Within a few hours after introducing the measure, Chairman Jennings Randolph of the House District Committee announced he hoped to conduct hearings within 12 days.

Three Federal agencies, meanwhile, went ahead with plans for surveying rents and living conditions in the Washington metropolitan area. One of the surveys is to be made by circulation of rent questionnaires among 5,000 Government employes selected so as to give a cross-section presentation of housing problems among workers in defense and old-time agencies. It will be started in a few days and its findings, it was reported, are to be the basis of hearings on the bill.

The bill would authorize the President, either directly or through a Federal rent administrator, to prohibit rent increases and to require at the same time that the quality of housing and services shall no be diminished. It would empower him also to set maximum rents and minimum standards of service for all kinds of rental properties.

That it was inspired by the White House was apparent from its introduction following a 90-minute conference of Randolph and District Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech with rent experts from the office of Federal Price Administrator Leon Henderson.

Mr. Roosevelt expressed an interest in Washington rents during a press conference about a month ago. Hearings were then in progress on Representative Randolph's bill to freeze rents and place their control in a three-member commission.

The new bill, which Randolph said his defense subcommittee would consider with his own measure, would declare it to be the policy of Congress "during the existing emergency to prevent rent increases, speculation in rental properties . . . in the District of Columbia which may tend to increase the cost of living and to jeopardize the national defense."

In addition to the rent survey among Government workers, which is planned by the Bureau of Labor Statistics, studies of housing, population increases, and defense congestion in the Washington area either are scheduled or already have been started by the Census Bureau and the WPA.

Census plans to send its enumerators out into 10 per cent of the households of metropolitan Washington, including Alexandria. In addition to obtaining data on the age, sex, former residence and employment of residents, the bureau intends to find out what rents are paid by a "sample" of the population, the number of rooms in each house, the number of persons living in each room and the condition of dwellings.

Determine violations of rent orders by means of investigations, hearings or inspection of dwellings.

Enforcement provisions of the bill contemplate both civil actions by tenants to recover double the amount of rents in excess of those ordered, and prosecution of violators who would be liable to $250 fine and six months in jail.

Any person—tenant or landlord—wishing to protest rent orders would be entitled to a hearing at which, the bill provides, common law rules of evidence shall not apply.

D. C. Holds Up Stagger Plan

Municipal authorities will take no action in staggering the paydays of some 14,000 District employes until a decision on the proposed program has been announced by the Federal Government, Commissioner John Russell Young said last night.

Reports that the staggered payday system would be placed in effect here within two weeks were described by Young as "a little previous."

Although the plan has received approval of all three Commissioners and Corporation Counsel Richmond B. Keech has reported no legislation is necessary to make the change, it was decided at a Commissioners' board meeting yesterday to await Federal action.

Young favored immediate adoption of the stagger system, but Commissioner Hazen and Kutz proposed the delay.

District Auditor Arthur R. Pilkerton said the city's $27,600,000 annual pay roll could easily be worked in such a fashion as to permit staggering of department paydays throughout each month.

At the same time yesterday, Representative F. Edward Hebert (Democrat), of Louisiana, sponsor of a House measure providing staggered paydays in the Federal Government, announced that there is now no law fixing any specific day for the issuance of Federal salary checks. He said he had been informed of this by Attorney General Jackson.

House Votes Bill to Expedite Defense Plans

Copyright by New York Times

In a move which Republican spokesmen assailed as a step toward a "Fascist state in America," the House voted yesterday to authorize the creation of Government corporations "with power to take any action which the President and the Federal Loan Administrator may deem necessary to expedite the defense program."

The bill, which was passed by 217 to 116 after a sharp five-hour debate, now returns to the Senate for concurrence in 15 House amendments.

This legislation would expand the Reconstruction Finance Corporation's authority to create defense corporations. If the President desired to set up a corporation to outbuy or outsell the Nazis in South America, if he wanted to supplement or even replace any private corporation which was lagging in its output of defense materials, he could do so under the authority of this bill.

It would increase the general note-issue power of the RFC by $1,500,000,000 to about $2,000,000,000. Past defense commitments of the RFC aggregate $1,634,449,340.

It would enable the RFC to make loans to foreign governments provided these governments were able to put up United States securities as collateral. The purpose of this clause is "to enable those countries whose defense is deemed vital to the United States to liquidate their American interests without incurring excessive transaction fees and without sustaining the exorbitant losses customarily incident to a forced liquidation."

It would relieve the RFC of endless litigation with tax authorities by stating specifically that the RFC, its franchise capital, reserves, surplus, income and various subsidiaries shall, with the exception of its real property, be free from State and Federal taxes.

It would authorize the Disaster Loan Corporation, which is financed by RFC, to make loans for the relief of catastrophies until 1947.

It would extend the life of electric home and farm authority, another RFC subsidiary which helps finance installment purchases of gas and electric equipment from June 30, 1941, to January 22, 1947.

The Senate bill stipulated that RFC corporations could not be established to carry out projects, such as the Florida ship canal or the Nicaraguan canal, which had been rejected by Congress in the last 15 years. It also stipulated that the new RFC corporations must not spend more than $300,000,000 each.

The House bill eliminated the special Senate restriction on projects on the ground that weeks would be required to check through 15 years of legislation every time a new corporation were established. It also reduced the spending authority of each new corporation from $300,000,000 to $100,000,000. These two points probably will be adjusted quickly in committee.

Bullitt and LaGuardia Indorse President's Emergency Action

Philadelphia, May 28.—William C. Bullitt, former Ambassador to France, and New York's Mayor LaGuardia, who also is the Nation's new civilian defense director, wholeheartedly indorsed President Roosevelt's national emergency proclamation tonight.

Bullitt and LaGuardia addressed 11,000 persons at a Save Freedom Citizens committee rally here at Convention Hall, arranged as an answer in advance to the meeting tomorrow at which Charles A. Lindbergh is to speak.

Bullitt declared that the President made his declaration to "arouse the American people to their peril, to touch their instinct of self-preservation and produce the necessary speed and sacrifice in the preparation of our national defenses."

Stating his belief that he could speak for each person in his audience, Bullitt said "we would rather face whatever secrifices and sufferings the future may hold than give up our liberties without a fight, and submit to Hitler."

Both speakers urged continuation of the national defense production with utmost speed and Bullitt said that " in this hour of national emergency, it is a crime against our Nation for any man, high or low, to delay production of weapons of defense."

Declaring that a great arms producing program was "forced upon us" and was "no choice of our own," LaGuardia asked, "wouldn't it be better now to fight with England than be compelled later on to negotiate with Hitler?"

The New York Mayor ridiculed the isolationists' stand and said, "We were less prepared in 1917 than we are today and we won then. I'd rather be a dog and bay at the moon than be such an American."

Houck Cleared Of Perjury

By the Associated Press

Baltimore, May 28.—Charles S. Houck, jr., of Frederick, was acquitted today on charges of perjury and attempted obstruction of justice entered against him by the last grand jury investigating an alleged legislative "shakedown."

The circuit court jury which heard Houck's trial yesterday and today deliberated 45 minutes before delivering the verdict of acquittal.

Houck admitted on the witness stand that he had given contradictory statements to the Baltimore grand jury and also admitted the first of his two statements was untrue in part.

Defense Attorneys William Curran of Baltimore and Leo Weinberg of Frederick argued that the grand jury lacked jurisdiction to question Houck on something which occurred in Frederick County; that questions on which the perjury charge was based were immaterial and not the proper basis for such a charge; and that Houck's prompt reappearance to admit earlier false statements served to wipe out the effect of the untruth.
